Mr. Curtis remarked to them, that these witnesses would be equally liable to the pains and penalties for perjury by law, if they swore falsely after they had signed this compact, as if they had sworn on their solemn affirmation to speak the truth. The prisoners replied, that the simple compact, as it was not any religious form, these witnesses would not consider it binding on their consciences perhaps, and therefore they may sever from the truth. Here Musaram, the Sheristadar of the Court, said, that it was binding on them both conscientiously and legally; but the prisoners not being satisfied with the Sheristadar's opinion on this matter, Ram Koomar, the next witness for the prosecution, was sworn on his solemn affirmation. He objected to this, and wanted to sign the compact; but the judge overruled his objection. He deposed that he was the family priest and tutor of the late Rajah Pertab Chunder, and likewise spoke to the death and burning of the Raja, and that the principal prisoner in this case did not resemble that person. He likewise added, Radakissen Byasack one day invited me to his house, and there I saw the prisoner. Prisoner asked me whether I knew him? I replied no. I then asked the prisoner whether he knew me? The prisoner made some mumbling reply, which I did not distinctly hear. I then asked prisoner, if you are Pertab Chunder, relate to me the particulars of the affairs of the Rajbundy, and what situation I held in the Rajbary at Burdwan. To this question the prisoner made no reply, but smiled contemptuously on me. I then informed him, that I was the Guroo, viz. priest, and tutor to the Rajah Pertab Chunder, who was dead and burnt; and if he were that person he certainly would have recognized me. I then asked him, can you tell the particular mark on my body by which I was known to Pertab Chunder. The prisoner made a reply, which I did not distinctly understand. I then began to relate to the prisoner, at the request of Chund Mookerjee, the particulars of the illness and death of the late Raja Pertab Chunder at Culna, and his corpse being burnt there, and described to him all the funeral ceremonies which were performed on that occasion; and then asked him how could these facts be consistent with his assertion of his being that Raja. The prisoner, instead of making a reply, laughed at my question, and dismissed me, and desired me to call again the next day. I then took my leave and did not repeat my visit to the prisoner as he had requested me to do.

Murrishchunder Roy deposed the same as the last, viz. that he witnessed the death of Pertab Chunder and saw his body burnt at Culna, and that he is related to Prawn Baboo's family, and receives wages from the Rajbary.

Radakissen Byasack, Dewan of the Treasury, deposed. I never went to Burdwan and I never had seen Pertab Chunder before I saw the person who represents him now. I recognize the principal prisoner in this case, and I know him to be Pertab Chunder. I have been acquainted with him for the last 2 years. I first saw him in the Jail at Hooghly, when Raja Budlinath was present with me. I went to see him at the prisoner's request, written to me in a Bengally letter, bearing a Persian signature. He requested me to get some person to become his security for the peace, after the expiration of the period of his imprisonment. The signature of the letter was Rajah Pertab Chunder. Before I saw the prisoner at the Hooghly Jail, he was a perfect stranger to me. I got Roy Kissen Chowdry and Goopee Kissen to become his security, and their security was filed in this Court for one year. Pertab Chunder, after his release from the Hooghly Jail, came to my house and resided six months with me. After this period, I hired a house for the prisoner near the Town Guard, on the Chitpore Road. The house was a three storied house, about half a cross distant from my residence in Calcutta. He did, on one occasion, borrow from me, on a bond, 15,000 rupees. He signed his name to the bond, Rajah Pertab Chunder. The money had been advanced to him in small sums at various times before hand, and the bond was given on the 10th of March 1838, on a settlement of these accounts. The bond was drawn out in the Office of Mr. B. Graham, Attorney at Law, and he was an attesting witness to it. Besides this, I have other unsettled accounts with him, but I have no other document signed by him Maha Rajah Pertab Chunder Dhe Rajah, excepting another bond for 13,000 rupees, executed by him on the 30th August 1838, and drawn out in Mr. Graham's Office and attested by Mr. Graham. This bond was executed in the Jail at Hooghly. When I deposed before the Magistrate, I said the debt from Pertab Chunder to me was 35,000 rupees; but I now find that the whole amount is 4,000 rupees more. Ramabund Mitter, Kante Chura Battachargua, Tillockchund Mitter and Rajah Goopee Mohon Deb, (after he had made enquiries through his khansamah, to ascertain whether the prisoner was Rajah Pertab Chunder or not) Buggybut Churn Mitter and other respectable persons, told me that they had seen and made inquiries respecting this prisoner and were satisfied that he was the true Rajah Pertab Chunder. All these persons are alive and living in Calcutta, with the exception of Raja Gope Mohun Deb; and his khansamah, whose name I do not know, is no doubt still living in Rajah Rada Kanth Deb's service. General Allard took Gungapersad Ghose to see the prisoner at the Hooghly Jail, and Gungapersad Ghose, on General Allard's asserting, that the prisoner was Raja Pertab Chunder, advanced him some money. I do not know Ram Koomar, I never invited him to my house through Chand Mohorer; for I have no Mohorer under me of that name, either at the Treasury or in private service. I took no bonds from Pertab Chunder in the name of my son or relatives, and if he does not pay me I will not sue him for this amount.

Cross-examined by Mr. Bignell.—Doctor Halliday saw Pertab Chunder at my house, and he said afterwards to Mr. Trower, that he felt perfectly satisfied that he was Pertab Chunder, the Rajah of Burdwan. Goopee Mohon Deb never, to my knowledge, visited the Rajah in my house; whether he saw him elsewhere I do not know. Rajah Goopee Mohon sent two servants to make enquiries regarding the Rajah, and by the result of their investigation into the matter, he assured me that he felt convinced that the prisoner was the real Rajah Pertab Chunder; and had it not been for the assurances of these respectable persons, I would never have received him into my house or advanced him the money which I have done. I believe Dr. Jackson did lend Pertab Chunder some money. Rajah Goopee Mohon Deb distinctly told me, after the report of his two servants to him, that the prisoner was Rajah Pertab Chunder, and he had no doubt on the subject.

Re-examined by Mr. Morton.—From the report of other individuals and the prisoner's own statement, I feel convinced that he is Rajah Pertab Chunder. I have lent all the money to him in notes. I am not aware that Pertab Chunder has ever deceived me, nor have I any cause of complaint against him. I have lent money to civilians even, of which I have as little prospect of repayment as of this sum.—Hark. Nov. 24.

5TH DAY—NOVEMBER 23, 1838,

Goopee Nath Dutt, deposed to the death and the burning of the late Rajah Pertab Chunder, zemindar of Burdwan, at Culna, on the 21st Pous 1227, B. S., he being present on the occasion, and having witnessed the funeral ceremonies of that person and saw his corpse burnt on the funeral pile. He likewise further deposed, that the prisoner in this Court, who pretends to personate that individual, does not resemble him either in shape, height, features, or complexion. Deponent is the paymaster of the Rajbary establishment at Burdwan.

Pearymohun deposed, that he, likewise, was present at the demise of the late Rajah Pertab Chunder, son of Rajah Fej Chunder, zemindar of Burdwan, and saw his corpse burnt at Culna on the Pous 1227, B. S. The prisoner who represents Pertab Chunder, is shorter than Pertab Chunder was, and does not resemble him in any wise. Deponent has been for 10 or 11 years in the service of the Rajah of Burdwan, and gets 90 rupees a month. The late Rajah Tej Chunder, first married Raney Komaul Komarree, the sister of Prawn Baboo, and subsequently Ranee Bussunth Komarree, the daughter of Prawn Baboo. The leases granted to the under tenants now run thus. "In the name of Rajah Matab Chunder, by his guardian Raney Komul Komarree.

Anoop Sing, Jemadar of the present Rajah of Burdwan, Matab Chunder, was examined on oath. This witness's testimony tended, like those of the preceding witnesses, to prove the death of Pertab Chunder and the burning of his corpse at Culna on the 22d Pous B. S. 1227. He added, that he was, during the life time of Rajah Pertab Chunder, his naib jemadar, and constantly attended on his person. He never heard of Pertab Chunder having been indisposed until the illness of Pous 1227 B. S., of which disorder he died. Defendant never saw the prisoner who personates Rajah Pertab Chunder in any of the Rajbarries; if the prisoner had gone into any of them on any occasion, deponent must have seen him. Deponent never saw any Christian gentlemen visit Rajah Pertab Chunder on any occasion. The prisoner who alleges himself to be Rajah Pertab Chunder, does not in any wise resemble him.

Kally Doss, Pandit of Burdwan, deposed. When deponent first saw the prisoner who personates Rajah Pertab Chunder, the late zemindar of Burdwan, he had a large black beard, and was seated on a tonjohn, followed by Hafiz Mollah and some others, and a large concourse of spectators; and the darogah of Culna, and many police peons, were keeping an eye on the spectacles with an intention of preventing a breach of the peace. The deponent likewise was present at the decease of the late Rajah Pertab Chunder on the night of the 21st Pous 1227, B. S. At Culna he saw the Rajah's corpse on the ground, but he did not see it on the funeral pile. Deponent is not a servant of the Rajbarry. This witness said, that after the lapse of so many years it would be very difficult to state whether the person who now assumes his name and title resembles the real Pertab Chunder or not; but as far as his memory will enable him to recollect the deceased Rajah's features, he does not think the prisoner either so fair or handsome a man as Pertab Chunder was. Pertab Chunder was the exact resemblance of the Hindoo God Kartick, and was slouter than the prisoner. Deponent did not see Pertab Chunder die, but saw his corpse after his demise. This statement being at variance with his testimony on the subject at the Hooghly Magistrate's Court, on being cross-questioned on this point, he replied, that when he arrived on the spot where the Rajah's body lay, he stood about three or four cubits distance from it. There were many persons present, some holding the Rajah's body, some repeating prayers, some shouting, some crying, in the confusion occasioned, by which this deponent cannot say whether the Rajah was dead or not; but if he was not then dead, he must have expired shortly afterwards. As deponent is a Bengally Brahmin, and the deceased was an Upcountry Kheetree, deponent could not assist in the funeral obsequies of the deceased; therefore he did not see the body consumed on the pile, but retired to the house of Ram Lochun, at a short distance from whence he saw the smoke of the pile ascend the air. About three months after, the deponent heard the rabble population of Culna bruit about the place, that Rajah Pertab Chunder was not dead. Deponent might have deposed before the Hooghly Magistrate that he heard the rumour on that very day; but he is not certain when he first heard it; but it was certainly shortly after the demise of Pertab Chunder; but none of the respectable people of Culna believed this rumour. Deponent's nephew, Tarranchund, who is a witness for the prosecution, is very dangerously ill, and is not expected to survive the fever by which he is confined to his bed. He has already been once taken to the river side, but his disorder having taken a favorable turn, he was reconveyed from the river side to his house, where he still lies sick in a very precarious state.

Bissonath, Mohorror of the Tax Department of the Magistrate's Court, deposed, that he first saw the prisoner seated on Mr. Shaw's left hand (i. e. the soi disant). Maha Rajah Pertab Chunder Dhe Raj, zemindar of Burdwan) at Ambeeka, where he was parading about the streets with a large retinue, seated on a tonjohn. Deponent had gone to Amberka in consequence of his having sent in his resignation 5 months previously. He went there by perwana to settle his account. It was at 6 p. m. that deponent saw the prisoner parading the street as above described. Deponent accompanied Moolbarukulla, late darogah of Culna, to the Rajbarry, and there saw the late Rajah Tej Chunder as he was smoking, and asked him how Rajah Pertab Chunder was? Rajah Tej Chunder replied, go and see; he is in the next room. Deponent saw him there and he was very sick. Deponent then took his leave for that day, and on the following day Lochon Hakeem attended on the invalid, and informed deponent that there was no hopes of his recovery. The remainder of this person's deposition tended to prove the death and burning of the late Rajah Pertab Chunder, and that the prisoner, who asserts himself to be that individual, has no resemblance to him whatsoever and is not him. Amongst other descriptions he said, Pertab Chunder's two front teeth projected very much whenever he conversed with any person. Deponent was not present when the Rajah Pertab Chunder died; but saw his corpse lying on the bedding, partly in the water and partly on the dry bank. Deponent never stated in the Hooghly Magistrate's Court, that he, Pertab Chunder, had expired in his presence. This witness's deposition closes the evidence, with the exception of one witness, for the prosecution, regarding the death of the late Rajah Pertab Chunder, son of Rajah Tej Chunder, the late zemindar of zillah Burdwan, the rest of that subject being documentary.

The further hearing of the case was then postponed until Monday next, the 26th instant at 10 o'clock. Every Saturday the proceedings of this case will be stayed in the Court, and the Judge will, instead of investigating it on those days, take up the usual current duties of the civil and criminal department in his Court.

At the close of this day's proceedings Mr. Morton observed to the Judge, that although Government had declined to pay the expenses of Dr. Halliday, a material witness for the defence, he trusted that if the prisoner deposited the expenses of that gentleman's hawk journey to Calcutta, and back again to his station, Government would not object to make such arrangements as could prevent his sustaining any loss in consequence of his absence from the division of which he is the superintending surgeon.

Mr. Bignell remarked, that the Court could not entertain any application of this nature, upon which the Government alone was competent to decide. The prisoner's Counsel could, of course, address the Government upon the subject, if he thought proper to do so; but it appeared to him (Mr. B.) that the question had already been disposed of, Government having distinctly stated that it was not prepared to incur any expense, on account of witnesses for the defence, beyond what was provided for by Regulation.

Mr. Curtis having acquiesced in this remark, Mr. Morton asked whether the Judge would not issue a compulsory process for the attendance of Dr. Halliday, on the amount of his hawk expenses to and from Calcutta being deposited.

Mr. Bignell said, that it might be doubtful whether the Court could enforce a compulsory process for the attendance of Dr. Halliday. He was aware of an opinion given by Mr. Serjeant Spankie on the subject, but he believed the question had never been completely settled.

Mr. Curtis said, that it seemed to him that there would be no necessity for going into that question, as he believed Dr. Halliday would be quite willing to attend if the prisoner's agents would guarantee him against any loss he might incur.

Mr. Morton replied, that the prisoner's agents were willing to pay Dr. Halliday's travelling expenses, but he did not think they could in fairness be called upon to do more. Was there any objection to Dr. H.'s evidence being taken by a Commissioner? He (Mr. Morton) understood that the Nizamut Adawlut had suggested that such a course might be pursued in the case of witnesses residing at a great distance.

Mr. Curtis said, that the letter of the Nizamut Adawlut applied only to native witnesses, but, at all events, he considered that, on a question of identity, it would be impossible for him to receive the evidence of any witness who had not, either in his own or the Magistrate's Court, been confronted with the prisoner.

We understand that it is the intention of the prisoner's Counsel to make a formal application on Monday morning for the issue of a process compelling the attendance of Dr. Halliday, upon the deposit of his travelling expenses.—Hurk. Nov. 26.

NOVEMBER 26, 1838.

At the sitting of the Court this morning, Mr. Morton observed to the judge, that he had perused the opinion of Mr. Serjeant Spankie, referred to on Friday, and that it seemed to him, that he was entitled to a compulsory process for the attendance of Dr. Halliday, upon merely depositing the hawk expenses of that gentleman; he was not, however, at present inclined to press for the issue of such a process, and wished that the matter might stand over for a short time.

Mr. Bignell said, that although he had mentioned the difficulty that might possibly be experienced in enforcing such a process as Mr. Morton had named, it was not at all his intention to oppose the application, if the Court thought it a proper one.

Mr. Curtis observed, that Mr. Serjeant Spankie's opinion seemed to abound in doubts, but as Mr. Morton did not press his application, there was no necessity for going into the subject.

Mr. Overbeck (who had been examined before the Magistrate) being in Court as a spectator this morning, Mr. Morton asked Mr. Bignell, if he did not intend to call him as a witness, and upon being answered in the negative, directed the attention of the Court to the circumstance, observing, that it would be but fair that this gentleman's testimony should be taken.

Mr. Bignell replied, that not conceiving Mr. Overbeck's evidence would be of any service to his case, he had not called him, and did not intend to do so, but that Mr. Mariah might call him for the defence, if he wished to have his testimony.

Mr. Morton said, that he of course did not expect Mr. Bignell, as Counsel for the prosecution, to call witnesses unfavorable to his own case, but he submitted that the Judge had an option to examine any one whose evidence had been taken by the magistrate, whether that evidence were favorable to the accused or otherwise.

Mr. Curtis saw no reason for his examining Mr. Overbeck. That gentleman had stated on a former occasion, that his memory was now very imperfect, and that he could not speak with any certainty upon the question of the prisoner's identity. If Mr. Morton thought the evidence important, he might call Mr. Overbeck for the defence.

Mohobullah, darogah of Culna, deposed.—I was appointed darogah of the Culna thanah eight or nine months ago, either in the month of Maugh or Falgoun last. This is the Rajah (pointing out the prisoner.) This is Ghoseal, the mooktar of the Rajah. The next is Hopezoollah, the darogah of the Rajah. The fourth is a native of Culna whose name I don't know. (This was Sugar Dutta.) The others I might have seen, but I do not recognize them.

At this part of the case it appeared, that Rajah Narrian Horry Roy, of Hurdhun, was absent, and he reported himself upon his arrival to be indisposed. He was consequently dispatched to the Civil Surgeon of the station to be examined, and reported on as to whether he was too ill to attend at the trial. The examination of the darogah was therefore postponed.

James Erskine deposed.—I have resided at Soogmooky, in west Burdwan, since the year 1819. I have been in the habit of going to Burdwan frequently. I was superintendent of embankments there, at the latter end of 1820. I was then ordered to reside there. I saw the late Rajah Pertab Chunder there once, at the residence of the Hon'ble Mr. J. E. Elliot, but it is so long ago that I have no clear recollection of him. It was before I had the charge of the bunds. The late Rajah had gone there merely on a visit of ceremonies. I was then residing with Mr. Elliott.

Examined by Mr. Bignell.—At the time I had charge of the bunds, I was intimately acquainted with the late Doctor John Coulter, then Civil Surgeon at Burdwan, and I always resided at his house, whilst I was at Burdwan. Dr. Coulter died in May 1835 I think. In the end of the year 1820, I recollect, Dr. Coulter was called to attend Rajah Pertab Chunder; it was immediately after I took charge of the embankments. Dr. Coulter told me the invalid had a severe fever on him, and was slightly delirious, and that the young man strongly wished to be bled, and often cried "bleed me, bleed me," do not mind what the people about me say. Dr. Coulter said, he would have bled him, but the people about the Rajah were much averse to it, particularly his father. Natives have generally a prejudice against that operation. Dr. Coulter never repeated his visit to the sick Rajah. When Dr. Coulter left the young Rajah, he said he would go home and prepare some medicines for him, and whilst he was preparing them, the cavalcade with the Rajah passed the house on its way to Culna. It was in the evening; and I saw the lights of their torches. Since my arrival at Burdwan, I have been in the habit of constant intercourse with the natives of Burdwan, and I never either at the beginning of 1821, or at any time, until the prisoner's appearance in 1835 in Bancoorah, heard any rumour questioning the reality of the death of the Rajah Pertab Chunder.

Cross-examined by Mr. Morton.—Dr. Coulter was on friendly terms with the young Rajah, but I do not know whether he ever before prescribed for him; but the young Rajah often got medicines for his friends. On the occasion I have just now particularized, Dr. Coulter was called to see him professionally. I cannot tell the duration of that visit. The young Rajah was at that time able both to speak and understand what was said to him, and he recognized Dr. Coulter. I know it was some time in December, from the circumstance of its occurring almost immediately after I had my appointment. I was then about 19 years old.

Re-examined by the Judge.—I never saw the prisoner who states himself to be Rajah Pertab Chunder, in the best of my recollection.

The Civil Surgeon having examined the Rajah of Hurdhun, reported, that he had a slight cold, but he was not so severely indisposed as to be incapacitated from attending the Court.

Moheballah was in consequence of this report recalled, and his depositions proceeded with. He added, I saw the Rajah of Hurdhun, at Culna. In the month of Chait, on the 7th or 8th, I heard that a person who calls himself Rujah Pertab Chunder, of Burdwan, was coming with a large armed force to Ambuah. When I heard of this, I sent notice of it to the Magistrate of Burdwan, and I received a perwanna from the Magistrate's office either on that day or the next, - ordering me to report daily whatever occurred there, and to state whenever any persons on the part of Prawn Bahoo, and the sai disant Pertab Chunder, would arrive there; and not to let any of them go about the city armed, and to prevent all riot and collision between the parties. For four or five days after this nothing occurred, and I dispatched a person to Nyhatty to see whether any person had arrived there, or at Chinsurah, Trepany and other places. The peon who went to Nyhatty, Bhupara, reported that he had seen near that place, the pseudo Rajah Pertab Chunder, coming with a large mob all armed with muskets, and in great state, towards Culna. When I heard of this from Amer-Odeen barkundauze, I sent a report of it by him to the Magistrate of Burdwan. After a few days I learnt, that this pseudo Rajah had arrived at Sootraghur, near Antipoor, with his rabble, and I then proceeded there, and by inquiries ascertained the information to be correct, and that his boats were moored off Ramghur. A few days after this, that self-styled Rajah, in a beaulah, with some persons, and some four or five men in boats, with drawn swords and shields, went rowing all day, some four or five men with drawn swords and spears following them on the bank. I met and stopped them at Taltullah Ghaut, near Culna, and I seized the sword of one of them, Bujkar Sing, and told him that the Magistrate's order to me was to prevent any armed persons from parading the town from the other side, therefore he must not go about this city thus armed. The man began to argue with me, and the pseudo Rajah called me towards him. The thana mohorer and I went to him, and we saw this Rajah sitting in a chair on the roof of the boat, with a naked sword in his hand, and a person was every now and then bringing some liquor to him from below, which he drank. When we arrived near the Rajah, he asked us "what are your orders regarding me and my train?" I told him my orders are to preserve the peace and see that no armed persons of either party land, and it is forbidden you to go about the country with such a large body of men armed. The Rajah replied, "to-day I have come merely to see this town with a few followers, the rest of my retinue will come here in a few days. I am now going to return to Santipoor; but when the gentlemen who are with me will arrive, I will then come here, and then proceed to Burdwan to be recognised by the Rannads there;" and the mohorer, the two jemadars, and a few barkundazes went with him a part of the way towards Jaulipoor, I and the mohorer in his boat, and the rest on shore, and when we arrived at Hauspookerie, I landed and returned to Culna, and the next day, at about mid-day, I passed over from Santipoor, and arrived at Culna, by, with all his followers, and moored his boats of the Puthesra Mohul Ghaut. I despatched a perwanna to the Magistrate of the occurrences of these two days, and after this I proceeded to the Rajah's people and told them that this is the Sudhur Ghaut, and many respectable women come to bathe, therefore they must either moor either above or below the ghaut, so as to keep the ingress or egress to the ghaut clear. The men replied very well, we will tell the Rajah of this, and remove the boats in a day or two, and they accordingly took the boats in a few days to the west side of the Taltullah Ghaut, where some boats were moored to the shore, the others anchored in the stream, and thus for a few days the Rajah, in the evenings and the mornings, sat on the top of his beaulah, and the people of the town daily assembled in crowds of four or five thousand to see him. His men often landed and bought their victuals, cooked them, and went back again, and occasionally the Rajah went coasting along, shooting, and I on these occasions went sometimes on his boats. One day I heard a great noise and tumult and firing of guns, and on enquiry learnt that the Rajah was going to land. I then proceeded with all my peons to the Puthesra Mohul Ghaut, and at about 10 o'clock A. M. saw the Rajah in a boat moored off shore, and about 30 or 32 of his men arrived on shore, and likewise a tonjohn and a palkee. Seeing this I and the Mohorer went on board the Rajah's boat, and saw the Rajah held a drawn sword in his hands and a servant every now and then brought him some liquor which he drank. The Rajah every now and then said, bring the red sherbut, and then bring the water, but I knew by the smell proceeding from his mouth, that it was spirits that he was drinking. I told him it is useless your opposing the legal authorities; you are expressly forbidden to land armed, and you will not be permitted to land thus, and if you attempt it, you will be opposed and bring yourself into trouble. If you wish to land peaceably with a few servants, I will accompany you and see that no person molests you. The Rajah then replied, that unless his people were allowed to accompany him, he would not land, because he was afraid to land otherwise; and he then moved the boats in a easterly direction towards Kally Khall and the 30 or 32 men walked along in the same directions on shore and about 10 or 12 boats likewise followed them, filled with his attendants. On his return from Kally Khall, the Rajah took a gun from one of his followers and fired it. I remonstrated with him, and said it was unbecoming his dignity to misbehave himself thus. The Rajah then desisted, but he ordered his people to get themselves ready, for he would go and visit the Shrine of Lall Ghee Thakoor, at Culna, and although deponent used all the arguments and means in his power to dissuade the Rajah from so doing, still the Rajah persisted and landed with about 200 or 250 men armed, and a mob of 200 or 250 boatmen, &c. conveying torches followed them. They disembarked at the Taltullah Ghaut, and passing Luckyeunge's tank went towards the South-east to the Rajah's burying ground at Culna, and deponent with some of the Police people followed this cavalcade, and saw two sepoys on guard at the doors of the Rajah's burying ground. When the sai disant Rajah arrived there, he asked who are these men, and replied that these are sepoys on duty at the burying-ground of the Burdwan Raj. The sai disant Rajah ordered one of his followers to snatch the muskets from the men on guard. I then endeavoured to dissuade him from these rash attempts and told him that it would lead to a serious riot, and with difficulty persuaded him to desist from this foolish freak and turn towards the west. The pseudo Rajah expressed a wish to go through the village. I said if you go through the village, the streets being narrow, what with your attendants and the spectators, serious injury will ensue, and prevailed on him to take the road skirting the town on the banks of the river; and on arrival at Jaggernath's temple, he took the road towards the Ghaut and returned to the boats. After I had seen him on board, I sent, in conformity to my orders, a report of the day's proceedings to the Magistrate at Burdwan, and returned with my peons at the Ghaut to see that this Rajah did not land again with his armed followers. A few days after Dohmerut Paluk, the Jemadar of the Kunchunagur thannah, arrived at Culna with 25 Barkundazes and brought a perwanna to assist me. I had this perwanna read to the Rajah in his boat, the motive of which was to prevent a breach of the peace. I am not sure whether I went on the boat to have the perwanna read to the Rajah, or if I stayed on shore and sent one of my men, but Duserut Paluk, I believe, was one of them that went on board and read the purwana to the Rajah. The Rajah gave an ambiguous reply, which I do not remember, but it is inserted in my report to the Magistrate of Burdwan. I am not certain whether the thana mohor or my assistant wrote this report. Soon after this, Ram-sing, acting jemadar, arrived with 30 Burkundazes and a purwana to my assistance, and by this purwana I had orders to disperse the armed assembly. This purwana was likewise explained to the Rajah and his men by me, and the darogah of Santipore and of the neighboring villages came with some Burkundazes and the girdwaree boats, to assist me to disperse the concourse. The Darogah went away that day; but the jemadar and the men remained with me 3 or 4 days; they failed in their endeavours to disperse the mob. After this the Foujdarry nazir, Assad Ullee, came with some burkundazes to my aid. When the nazir had arrived I was on my way towards Mr. Shaw's boat, where I was going to pay my respects to him. Hearing of the nazir's arrival, I could not see Mr. Shaw and returned to see the nazir, whose purwana was to disperse the assembly of the Rajah, and to take him to the Magistrate at Hooghly. The nazir, I, and some burkundazes, went on board of the Rajah's budgerow. We saw this Rajah and the Hurdun Rajah there. This Rajah took the purwana in his hand and deponent thinks the Burdwan Rajah did the same, and the people who could read the purwana; but who made out the Purwana to the men I cannot tell. The soi-disant Rajah said, these men are not fighting men; they are my servants and followers; they have come with me from Calcutta, and I will not disperse them by your order, nor can I give any reply to this purwana. Now, Mr. Shaw, my Attorney, is arrived, I will consult with him and let you know the result in the evening. I said to the nazir, let you, I, and some burkundazes go to the Rajah's house. We, together with Goundo jemadar, Goundo peon, Shiamchuru peon, Neamychin chokyder, Sumbho Lolla, Tyad Nunees and others, whose names I do not remember, went on shore near the budgerow to take the Rajah's reply. The Nazir remained on shore and I and the others went on board a boat with intention to go on the Rajah's budgerow, but the people on board said they were forbidden to let so many armed men come on board the Rajah's boat. I then desired the Rajah's men to let me go with an order from the Magistrate, as I must carry it into effect. Hearing this the people from the boat called me. I then went with my men on board the Rajah's boat, and asked the Rajah's reply to the purwana. Deponent saw Mr. Shaw and the Hurdun Rajah there likewise. The purwana was first read by Hurroo Chunder, the pseudo Rajah's moonshy, and as he could not see clearly, Lalla Sumbho read it. On hearing the contents of the purwana, Mr. Shaw told Joynarain, his sircar, who explained to me, "these men are the Rajah's servants and attendants, they had come with him from Calcutta; they as well as I will go with the Rajah to Burdwan to be recognized by the Ranees. The others said, these men are going, it appears by this account, with the sanction of Government, to see the Ranees at Burdwan, how can they be prevented? and as we were leaving the Rajah's boat, Mr. Shaw desired me to send a person to call the nazir who had returned to the house. Hearing this I went to the thanah, related what had occurred to the nazir, and as I was greatly fatigued and felt indisposed, I retired to my dwelling and the nazir took my assistant with him to make a report of these proceedings to the magistrates. One or two days after the nazir's arrival, I learnt that the Magistrate had also come to Culna, and I went and waited on them that night and saw the Magistrate, the Doctor, the Clergyman, the Captain, and a Lieutenant. The Magistrate interrogated me and when I related all, he replied, I will go the next morning to see the assembly; you stay here. There were some sepoy with the Magistrate. They went the next morning to the riverside, where the Magistrate asked me where is the Rajah's budgerow? I pointed it out to him from the shore. The Magistrate desired me to hail the Rajah's budgerow and desire him to come ashore. I did so and told them that the Magistrate had come with the militia. They neither replied nor came. The Magistrate then desired me to go on board and fetch the Rajah, and whilst I was going in a paunshway towards the Rajah's boat, the firing commenced by the sepoy. I was to the west of the firing party. I shouted out to the nazir to cease firing, whilst I was going to the Rajah's budgerow, and when I arrived there after the firing, I could not find the Rajah there; but I saw a Hindoo lying there wounded, and as I was proceeding to search for the Rajah, I saw the Rajah of Hurdun in another boat. I subsequently observed a person swimming across the river. Fakcer Lall and another jemadar, with some sepoy and burkundazes, were on guard on the other side, and I called out to them to seize the man who was swimming across, and they replied that they had captured the man, who, on my and the Magistrate's arrival, turned out to be the soi-disant Rajah, and we brought him on shore to Culna, guarded by the sepoy. The other men were in the interim captured by the sepoy and the other men, and the magistrates from that day commenced searching the boats, in which the other gentlemen, and even Mr. Shaw assisted, and found the various arms; and two pistols, three or four muskets, and seven or eight swords were found in the Rajah's boat, and the others in the other boats, which had accompanied the Rajah.

Cross-examined.—Ghosaul accompanied the pseudo Rajah. The Rajah was in the tonjon and Ghosaul in the palkee. The Burdun Rajah said, when captured, I only came to see the Rajah, what have I done. He could not give any account of Pertab Chunder at the time. There were upwards of 300 arms of various descriptions found in the boats. This Rajah expressed a wish to have the proceedings of the nazir read before his mooktar Ghosaul. There was an English letter in the proceedings, which was filed in the Rajah's proceedings at Culna. When I went with the purwana of the nazir to arrest the soi-disant Rajah and forward him to the Magistrate at Hooghly, I was afraid to execute my orders, because this Rajah had many retainers by him; and I dreaded that if I proceeded to extremities, a breach of the peace would occur. The further examination of this witness was postponed till 10 o'clock, A. M., and the Court broke up at about 5 o'clock P. M.—Hurk, Nov. 28.

Mohebollah, cross-examined by Mr. Shaw. The soi-disant Rajah only landed once at Culna; on another day, he wished to go on shore, but, at my advice, he desisted from his intention. He was altogether, I believe, either 18 or 19 days moored off Culna; but I am not certain of this. On the day that the soi-disant Rajah landed, he told me he would go and see the city and visit the shrine of Lallgee, but what his real motives were, I cannot say. I was examined regarding this affair at Culna and at the Calcutta Police office. I there deposed, that there was no affray between the parties because I prevented a collision between them. That part of the order which forbade the soi-disant Rajah's landing with an armed retinue, he did not obey. He did obey my order, which forbade his entry into the city with his followers. He disobeyed the purport of the first purwana, which must be in the file of the proceedings. This purwana was read to the pseudo Rajah, but who read it I do not remember; yet this I know, that all the purwanas which I received on this occasion, were read to this Rajah, and verbally explained to him and his followers. The date of the first purwana I do not recollect. In one of the purwanas it was stated, that there was no objection to this person coming to Culna; but he must not enter it with an armed multitude. I think, on the first occasion, he allowed himself to be dissuaded from coming with his tumultuous body of men, and that the actual landing of them happened subsequently; but on this point I am not certain; the Magistrate's proceedings will show. I can understand the records of my proceedings in Persian, when read to me, but those of others I do not. I have but an imperfect knowledge of the Persian tongue, and I cannot converse in it. My reports to the Magistrate, relative to these proceedings, were made in the first instance in Persian, but subsequently, I believe, an order came to forward them in Bengally. The date of the substitution of Bengally in lieu of Persian, must be recorded at the thannah, but I do not remember it. The thannah mohurer, Mahomed Ally, wrote some of the reports, my writer, Mahomed Asoph, wrote the others. Mahomed Ally is a witness for the defence, he has been discharged from his situation; and Mahomed Asoph is also at Hoogly, he accompanied me here. On the night I saw Mr. Shaw in the Rajah's budgerow I do not remember whether I did say to Mr. Shaw, that I had no cause of complaint against the Rajah. I do not think I said so; if I did, I certainly have no recollection of it, nor whether Mr. Shaw told me to give my order to disperse the assembly, and it would be obeyed. On that I replied, that I had no power to do so, as it rested with the nazir. The nazir went first to this Rajah's budgerow, on the morning of his arrival at Culna, and subsequently after the Magistrate's arrival. The time that the nazir and I went on board this Rajah's budgerow, I saw the Rajah sitting on a chair in the budgerow. This Rajah said, that after consulting Mr. Shaw, he would give a reply to this purwanah; this reply was given shortly after dusk. This reply, which was verbal, I communicated to the nazir immediately afterwards at the thannah. The date of this communication I cannot remember, but it was on the day on which the nazir had arrived. The Magistrate arrived a day or two after the nazir. My report to the nazir was the first intimation, he received of the prisoner's intention; and on this he acted, and reported this reply to the Burdwan Magistrate. On that night, Joynarain Baboo went with an English letter from Mr. Shaw to the Magistrate, and desired the nazir to forward it to him. The nazir replied, that he had come to disperse the assembly and not to be the channel of written communication between Mr. Shaw and the Magistrate, therefore he would not receive it; and if Mr. Shaw wished it, he might send it to the Magistrate by dawk. The letter was from one European to another, but whether it was written in English or Persian, I cannot say. There might be a Persian letter brought by Joynarain Chudder, written by the Rajah to me and the nazir, and read by the latter in my presence; but I have no remembrance of it. The two letters sent by this prisoner, between the arrival of Mr. Shaw and the Magistrate, were kept by the nazir, and whether he delivered them or not, I cannot say. He merely, at the time he received them, remarked, that he must report this circumstance to the Magistrate, as he was incompetent to pass any order on their purport. There was a gun in Mr. Shaw's boat, and a few shots and a little powder was found in one of the boats; but in which boat, and in what quantity, I cannot remember, nor the date on which this Rajah landed at Culna with his retinue; but I reported this circumstance on that very day. I was called before the Magistrate, to explain why I did not transmit the report of the Rajah's landing instantly as it occurred; I made the report on that very day, but when it was dispatched I am not aware; but two days could not possibly have intervened. I must have sent it off that very day. I am acquainted with Perry Lalk Baboo; he resides at Culna. He is not a servant of Government, I am not aware whether he is a salaried servant of the Rev. Mr. Alexander. Why he went to arrest Mr.

Shaw, he can best answer. The respectable merchants residing in Culnagunge are—Thakoor Doss Day. Ram Mohun Ghosaul, Callychurn Chatterjee, Issur Chunder Chowdry has a shop there, but he resides at Ranah Ghaut. I was afraid to attempt to execute the Magistrate's orders, and consequently did not endeavour their execution, but with the exception of my own apprehension, there was no forcible resistance made to my carrying my orders into effect. On the evening, however, I proceeded with my armed men to the Rajah's bauleah. I was prohibited from going there. Who gave the orders I do not know, but the opposition was made by this Rajah's guard. Ultimately I did go on board with four or five burkendazes. This is the sum total of the resistance that I am aware of.

Questioned by the Rajah of Hardhun, I made a report of your arrival on that day, but its purport I cannot recall to memory. I reported to the Magistrate of your being in a boat, and he arrested you. Whether your boat was shovelled off from the pseudo Rajah's boat or not, I cannot state; but when taken, your boat was on the river. I am not aware whether any arms were found in your boat; and whether you had any armed followers or not, I cannot say; but there were some men in your boat. Whose retainers they were I cannot tell. I neither saw you lead or cause any disturbance either on shore or the river.

Questioned by Ghosaul. After the Rajah had returned from his ailing excursion, you left Culna with a moaktarnama from this Rajah to Burdwan. I made a report of your departure to the Magistrate, but I never retailed you or any of your party. I never gave any advice to you. I merely said that if you or the Rajah wish to go singly, or with a few attendants to Burdwan, I will see you conveyed there under the Police's Protection; but I cannot permit you either to land with armed retainers or proceed with them to Burdwan.

Questioned by Hafiz Futeoolah. The day the Rajah was at Santupoor, you, Moolchund, and others, came to me at Culna, informed me that you were all the Rajah's men, and asked whether any purwana had been received by me regarding the coming of the Rajah to that village. I replied, that a purwana regarding the Rajah had been received, but not on the point they wished to know. You never questioned me as to where the Rajah's boats were to be moored on the day of his arrival at Culna, and I never indicated any spot for you to bring them to. I explained all the purwanas to you, and all the chiefs men about the Rajah, but they were not all obeyed by you and your party.

Govind Sing, burkendaz, deposed to the pseudo Rajah's arrival at Culna, accompanied by a large concourse of armed men in boats, with great pomp, streamers flying, kettle-drums and other musical instruments beating, &c. &c. The rest of this deponent's evidence was but a mere confirmation of the deposition of the former witness.

Previous to the examination of this witness, the Hardhun Rajah filed vakalatnama, in the name of Baizah Hossain, a vakeel of this Court. Whilst Mr. Shaw was cross-examining Mohebolah, Mr. Curtis suggested, that perhaps it would be more regular if Mr. Morton, who is the Counsel of the principal prisoner, were to put the questions. This opinion he expressed in accordance with the prevailing practice in the Zillah Courts, where there are both vakeels and a moaktars retained in a suit, in which case it is usual for the vakeel alone to put these questions to the witness; the same as the practice in the Supreme Court, where the Attorney suggests the questions to the Counsel and he puts them to the witness. Mr. Shaw imagined at first, that Mr. Curtis had objections to his conducting the examination, and declined to continue it, although Mr. Morton remarked, that now Mr. Shaw being personally acquainted with the facts of what had occurred at Culna, he had taken upon himself to examine this witness, and that both he and Mr. Shaw acted under one inooktagama; and it was not until Mr. Bignell had explained the practice of the Mofus-el Courts and the Judge's reason for making the objection, and the Judge had assured Mr. Shaw, that he had now no objection to Mr. Shaw's cross-examining the witness, that Mr. Shaw resumed his queries to him.

Mr. Bignell informed Mr. Morton, that under the impression that the case for the prosecution would not be closed until the 15th proximo, the Magistrate had fixed the day for the attendance of the witness for the defence for that date; but as it was not probable that the prosecution would be prolonged to that period, he suggested to Mr. Morton, that if he would give him the names of 30 or 40 of the defendant's principal witnesses, the Judge would fix an earlier day for their attendance in this Court, so that they might not be delayed in opening the defence. Mr. Morton replied, that Mr. Graham knew best what witnesses were required by the defence, and he would mention this circumstance to him.

Pearymohun Lalla deposed. I only know the sio distant Rajah and none of the other defendants. In the month of Sarabon 1241, the pseudo Rajah, a Brahmin, and a kidmutgar, came to my house and said, that they came to see the idols. They remained one month at my house and I reported their arrival to the village thana. They said to me, you will hear of a very wonderful event shortly in this world, but they did not enter into any particular detail of what this miracle was to be; and after they had resided one month with me, they abruptly went through my garden and disappeared, and I subsequently heard that they had proceeded to Baranuggur. I next saw him on the 1st of Bysack of the present year at midday. I was standing at the door of my house, when I heard a great shouting and several people exclaimed that the Rajah was coming. I then went to see the cause of this uproar, and when I arrived at the river side, I saw the pseudo Rajah sitting on a bulge-row, wielding a naked sword; and a boat went ahead in which people were beating kettle-drums and other musical instruments, and followed by an armed retinue of about 5,000 men. He moored his boat at the ghaut where dead bodies were burnt, and began to threaten the darogah by shaking an undrawn sword over him, as the darogah stood in the river with his cloth tied round his neck and held by his 2 hands. This Rajah told one of his men to call the darogah to him, and a Brahmin called out darogah, darogah, the Rajah calls you. The darogah came and they took him upon their boat, and carried him as far as the Satgurechea ghaut, and there landed him. The darogah returned to the thana, and this Rajah to Santipoor. Randeem Jemadar went in a paonshay to the Rajah at Santipoor, and we retired to our house. The next day this Rajah returned with 80 boats and 5,000 men, beating the kettle-drums and firing guns, and anchored off the Putturreea ghaut. The Rajah staid there 18 days. One day the Rajah went to see the Rajah's burying ground, the darogah was near the burying ground. There were 5,000 spectators and 2 men on each side of the Rajah's conveyance, and the Rajah held an undrawn sword in his hand, and 200 persons armed with swords and fire arms and 500 with clubs. &c. followed this Rajah, crying out mar, mar, (beat, beat.) The darogah and the peons stood with their hands in supplicating postures, with their clothes round their neck, entreating them to desist from their excursions and accompany them to Burdwan. On that day there were 4 or 5 sepoys on guard at the burying ground. This Rajah seeing them, said who are these, and being told they were sepoys on guard at the burying ground, said, snatch their muskets and bring them here. The darogah then cried out for mercy's sake forbear. The Rajah then desisted and returned to his boat, and the day before the arrival of the Magistrate,

I heard it bruited by the populace, that Mr. Shaw was coming with guns, cannons, balls, and a large force, aided by the Government, parwana, to place this Rajah forcibly on the guddee of Huridwan. The next day a Police peon informed me, that the magistrate wished to see me. He took me to the clergymen's house, where I saw him and the magistrate. The magistrate said to me, the pseudo Rajah, I hear, once lived in your house, you must depose to the circumstance. I denied this at first; but being threatened, I commenced my deposition; and whilst under examination, Mr. Shaw's palkes passed the place; and as there were no police peons there, the magistrate ordered me to go with a bearer and bring Mr. Shaw to him; and Mr. Shaw obeyed the call, and when he came to the magistrate, the magistrate sent for the darogah, and when he arrived, Mr. Shaw was consigned to his custody.

Cross examined by Mr. Morton. I saw no disturbance of the peace created by this Rajah during his stay off Culna. I only saw him land at Culna once. There were two or three muskets carried by the Rajah's men. On the day he landed, there was some firing after his return to the boats.

Komul Roy, deposed as to what transpired on the day the pseudo Rajah landed at Culna, in confirmation of the evidence of Maiboolah, darogah, and Govindo, Burkundaze.

Fakeer Lall Paunda, deposed. I recognize the pseudo Rajah, the Huridhun Rajah, Rada Ghosaul and Futtooollah. I arrived in Culna with Dussureet Patuk and 24 burkundaze from Huridwan, on the 11th of Bysack, where I first saw these four persons. We were deputed to aid the Culna darogah, and brought a parwana, which the mohur explained to the pseudo Rajah. This deponent followed in the wake of the other deponent regarding the occurrences of what had transpired at Culna; but it appears that he had arrived at Culna, after the landing of the Rajah at Culna, and that he had never seen the Rajah himself, until he was arrested on the Santipore side of the river, on the bank he was on duty, on the day of the capture and dispersion of the party. This witness added, that previous to the firing, some boats took flight; that on the firing in the air, the Rajah jumped into the river, and he arrested him near the banks of it. At the time of his arrest, he was up to his chin standing in the river, trembling. Deponent and Nundoo Lall took him out of it gave the magistrate notice of his capture, and that gentleman, together with the others, came over in a boat and took the prisoner to Culna and made him over to the darogah of that place.

Nundoo Lall, burkundaze, alluded to by the last witness, confirmed his evidence of the capture of the pseudo Rajah in the river, on the Santipore side, on the day in which his tumultuous assembly was dispersed by the magistrate of Burdwan, aided by the military force. He likewise recognised Narrain, Hurry Roy, the Rajah of Huridhun, Radakissen Ghosaul, Hafez Futtooollah and Sagur Dhon, as being amongst the followers of the sio-distant Rajah on the occasion of his stay at Culna.—Hurkur, November 29.

WEDNESDAY.—Nov. 28, 1838.

On Thursday the 22d instant, as the Court was breaking up, the Reverend Mr. Hill, of Berhampore, came in, and addressing the Judge stated, that he believed he was in possession of evidence which would set the question of the prisoner's identity at rest. Mr. Curtis observed, that in that case he had better communicate with the Counsel for the prosecution. Mr. Hill, it appears, then communicated to Mr. Bignell the name of a witness resident on his missionary premises at Berhampore, who was immediately summoned, and who was this-day produced.

Ramkissen Mookerjee, a Christian, sworn on the Bible, after some questions from the Judge as to his knowledge of it, and the nature of an oath. When I was in caste my father's name was Gungadhur. My name was always Runkissen; but I was once called Keerpund. My house is in Kassee Dhunga, in Zillah Nuddea, and my age is thirty. (The Judge desired him to look well at the prisoner, which he did.) I know the prisoner exceedingly well; I knew him four or five years before he came out with this story of his being a Rajah. The prisoner's name is Kisto Lal. His brothers name was Gour Lal. His father's name is Sham Lal Bramacharee. His brother died in Rada Kissen Bysack's house, at least I heard so. During these four years I was with him every now and then from time to time. About two years ago, in the month of Assur, I think, the prisoner first raised this report of his being a Rajah in Burdwan. He had two brothers, Gour Lal and Roop Lal, whose houses were in Kishnaghur. I once during the four years, I have mentioned, went to their house. I had a great deal of conversation with them, and they proposed to me, that we should go out together into the world as fakeers and travel through various countries. The prisoner was during this time eating and smoking gunja, and the conversation was chiefly with the elder brother, Gour Lal. The prisoner, however, remarked that he was going to make a charm. In Jait, the prisoner's brother, Gour Lal, came to my house and eat some fruits and drank some milk. He reminded me of the conversation we had had about turning fakirs and travelling, and asked if I was ready to go. I said I was. He remained all night in my house. Early in the morning, he told me to come with him, and we went forth. We went first to a village called Burles, and afterwards to Kalikapore, then to Deewangunge, after that to Culna, to the house of a Goosien named Banemadub, where we put up for the night. The next day we went to a place called Para, and put up at the house of a great man called Sreekunt, zemindar. We then went to another village, the name of which I do not recollect. In this way we went from village to village, till we came to one called Goondereeya. We remained there about two or three months in the house of two brothers Gour Huri and Kisto Huri. We then went to a Thakoor Barri, where we staid with one Gourdeal Banceerjee. We were afterwards some months in Laboursa, and then we returned to Gwarri. We there heard from Sham Lal, the prisoner's father, that the prisoner had gone to a village called Mussa, in the district of Burdwan. Gour Lal then said let us go to Mussagong. I said, I wanted to go home; and some of my relations afterwards came and took me home in a pany. I remained two or three days at home. Afterwards Gour Lal came to me at night; he did not come to the house, but waited for me on the road. A man of the name of Goluk Mundul came to my house and told my relations that I would again be taken away, as the Goosien had returned. Shortly afterwards I went out and met Gour Lal, and told him that I would make my escape and come to him in the morning. I did so and went on board a boat with him to Malteepore in the Culna thanah. I remained there two or three days, and then went to Musagong (the village of Mussa) to the house of Buddun Chowdree. We went and found the prisoner there with two or three other men, his chulas (religious pupils.) Their names are Gunees Banoojee, Teelook Chund Chowdree, Mudden Muih Mu-tena, thus named by the prisoner, from his being always drunk. The prisoner was in great state, with a fine carpet, a person punkering him and sitting on a tukta push. His disciple, Teelook Chund, was preparing gunja with a duto. The prisoner had on red clothes, such as red Bramacharees wear. His face had become very thin. His hair was very long and hung down to his breast. Buddun Chowdree remained inside the house. The prisoner remained in the centre house which consisted of three mehals. We remained there about two months, and Gour Lal said, "Listen; let us go with my brother to Gwarri." Buddun Chowdree gave the prisoner bearets and a palkee and sent him off; but we did not go to Gwarri. The prisoner

Kistololl said, I will go to Burdwan. I said, "very well, I will go with you." After that I went with him towards Burdwan. On the road there is a village called Burseea. We there remained in the house of a tamoodi during the night. His name I do not know. Next morning we went on towards Burdwan, and entering the city, went from place to place, visited the gardens to the north of a large tank and other parts of the town. No one would give us a lodging, and the prisoner went to the door of the Raj Barri, called the Barah Dwarri. The people asked him, "Gosain, why are you come here?" and told us to go to the Mosaffir Khana where travellers are fed. From thence we went to Tad Mairee to the house of Juggut Mitre, a collector Mahurrer, who gave us food and every thing necessary. The prisoner said, that he had formerly been acquainted with Juggut Mitre when he (the prisoner) was in Omedwar, and they talked over their former acquaintance. We remained there some days and then went to Kinchinuggar, to the house of a woman named Tara, who waited on him. We remained there two days or so, and then returned to Mussa. We saw that his brother Gour Lal was there, in Buddun Chowdree's house, drinking and going on with women as usual. Gour Lal then proposed to me to go back to Gwarree with Kistololl. We went accordingly to Malteepore, where we remained in the house of one Ruttun Chatterjee. After a few days I became very ill, and the prisoner pretended to be able to cure me by giving me the water with which he had washed his feet to drink; and also told me that he was a new incarnation of the deity, and that he could do any thing and would make me well immediately. He often talked thus and used to say, you will see some of these days what I shall do in the world. I got a little better after a while, and Ruttun Chatterjee provided a dingy, in which the prisoner, Ruttun Chatterjee and, I think, Jagadhuur, went to Gwarri to the house of the prisoner. He was welcomed by his father, and I here got well. He gave me a blanket and a hookah, and an old piece of broad cloth, and I went home. My relations were very angry with the prisoner for having taken me from my home, and I determined to abandon this course of life and to commence trading, and took some money and went to buy materials, at my uncle's house at Freecineeth, with the intention of trading. While there, the prisoner's brother, Gour Lal, came in search of me. He learnt from one Dinonath Gungolee where I was. He called me and I went to see him at the house of Doorga Mungle Dass. Gour Lal here tried every thing in his power to induce me to join them again; said my fortune should be made, that they had got a plan which would astonish the world. At last I consented and found that Gour Lal had obtained the same influence over a number of other respectable men as he had over me. Among them were, I know, Hajra, Pamsounder, Taikabaggis, Dinonath Gungolee, Doorga Mungle Dass, &c., who were devoted to him, and considered him as a deity. We all collected together and used to get drunk, and to sit continually with women, and practice all sorts of obscenity, until the Treekhand people rose against us and said we should no longer pollute their village, and Doorga Mungle's sect, all consulted about depriving him of his caste. Doorga Mungle Dass's Gooroo is still in Treekhand, and knows all these things. Doorga Mungle on this said, that he must keep some servants for his own protection, but the villagers felt some superstitious scruples about touching Gour Lal, and they were allowed to remain in the village. After this I went home, and Gour Lal went away somewhere else by himself. The prisoner was at this time in Baranagore. Gour Lal came and took me, Doorga Mungle Dass, Ramchunder and Dinonath Gungolee to Gwarri. On the road to Gwarri we passed my house, and we went in. We remained there one night, and next morning went on to Gwarri to the prisoner's house. His father Shamoll told us, that Kisto Lal was at Baranagore in the 24-pergunnahs. He told us all to go there and bring him back as he had not seen him for some time. I, and Doorga Mungle, and hikhansama Konasa Naea and Nuboo Mullick and Gour Lal all got into a boat and went to Baranagore. On arriving there, at the house of a woman who goes by the name of Nedhee's grandmother, we found the prisoner, Kistolli, who had got very fat, had a beard and long hair all about him. He had an English mug for drinking out of, and all the women of loose character in the place used to assemble round him, and they used to drink together. There is a house of Raja Greeschunder's in that place (Baranagore) where the prisoner once went, but the Raja drove him out on seeing the crowd of women with him. We remained some time in Baranagore. Ramchund Banerjee, Kali Chatterjee, and others there, used to come to visit the prisoner. Doorga Mungle and Gour Lal, tried to get the prisoner to go home, but the women of the place were very unwilling to let him go and we returned alone, leaving Gour Lal with the prisoner. We went home. The prisoner and his brother returned home also about a month or so afterwards. Gour Lal then went to Sreekhund with Sagur Dhur, one of the prisoners present. I also went and joined them at the house of Doorga Mungle. Gour Lal asked Doorga Mungle to come and pay his respects to Kistolli. Doorga then sent Sagur Dhur and Nuboo Mullick to Gwaree to fetch the prisoner. They brought him back in the boat and fastened the boat at the Dewangunge Ghat. They then sent information to Gour Lal of the prisoner's approach. Gour Lal then took a number of men with swords and a sort of retinue to bring him with honour to Sreekhund; but he said Dewangunge was the best place, and he would remain there and wait for a lucky day. Next day I joined him, and we then went to Cutwa. His people in Dewangunge gave out that he was an Avatar, and in Cutwa it was proclaimed that a man had come whose body was made of gold. At Cutwa he lived in the house of a prostitute of the name of Hara. There was a great noise made about him at Cutwa great crowds assembling to see him. I, on seeing this, went back to Sreekhund, and a few days afterwards returned to Cutwa. Doorga Mungle then came with a palkee, but whether he or his brother first got into it I don't recollect. There was an enormous concourse of people and a great tumasha, and we all went with prisoner and his brother to Doorga Mungle's house at Sreekhund, where the prisoner remained for about a month. The people in Sreekhund jeered at them for coming back after having set out with such boastings, and we were discontented and spoke to the prisoner, who said "be quiet, wait a little, and you shall see a tumasha. I shall get the Burdwan gudgee and you shall all have great wealth. The two brothers used to be constantly consulting together. At last Doorga Mungle gave a palkee and bearers, and money for road expenses, and the prisoner started for Burdwan in order to commence his great attempt. Previous to going, he said you shall soon see something. You shall not be long in hearing of my being a Rajah." I did not accompany the prisoner, but he afterwards told me he went straight to Golab Bigh. His younger brother Gour Lal, frequently said, "we shall soon hear now of his being Rajah," and the people at Sreekhund, where Gour Lal and I were, were all full of the new report of Pertab Chund's reappearance. I heard from Gour Lal, that the prisoner had gone to Kinchinuggur, where he lived in one Kumul Raea's house, and that many people came to see him. I afterwards heard that he had gone to Bishenpoor. Gour Lal then said to Doorga Mungle, Kouasa, Suroop and myself, "come, my brother has become a Rajah, let us go to Bishenpoor and join him." We then all set off to Bishenpoor. On the road, Doorga Mungle and Unoop began to hesitate, saying, that it seemed a very doubtful matter, and at last they got alarmed and ran away. I remained alone with Gour Lal, and was fettered like many others by the influence he had acquired over me. When we approached Bishenpoor, we spread a report that a Nawaub had come. We went to Jamkooree to the house of Rajah Jey Singh, where Gour Lal had some consultation with the Raja, as to the best means of gaining possession of the Raj of Burdwan. We then went on to Bishenpoor, and intelligence was sent to the prisoner that a friend was approaching. The prisoner then sent burkundazs with torches to bring Gour Lal. We arrived near Bishenpoor at night, and the whole population came out to see the Nawaub as he now called himself. The burkundazes cleared the way with great shouts of the Nawaub is coming, the Nawaub is coming, and we entered Bishenpoor in great state. Here the two brothers met. Khittermohun Singh, the Bishenpoor Rajah, made over Radhakissen Ghosal, a servant of his, to the defendant, to advance his fortunes. One of the prisoners at the bar is Radhakissen Ghosal. Khittermohun Singh then sent Gour Lal to the Nawaub, as he was now called, to live concealed at his son-in-law's in Doolee, in order that their proceedings might not attract so much attention. There had been some consultation regarding this step between the prisoner, Khittermohun, Gour Lal and Radhakissen. I went with Gour Lal and occasionally came over to Bishenpoor to see the prisoner. During the prisoner's residence there, Mr. Elliott came and sent for the prisoner, and asked him who he was. The prisoner replied "all the world know who I am." Mr. Elliott said, you must tell me yourself who you are. On this he said I am Alah Shah, Fakeer, Mr. Elliott said if you are a Fakeer what business have you with all these people? The prisoner replied. I am in some fear of my life. I am afraid of Purran Baboo. Mr. Elliott asked what he had to fear from Purran Baboo, and told him to leave the place. The prisoner asked Mr. Elliott to give him some assistance to enable him to do so. Mr. Elliott asked why he should give him assistance, and told him to be off. Mr. Elliott then returned to Bancoora. The two brothers then had a consultation as to the course they should pursue, and at last we all set off for the Jungles with about 100 armed men. We moved about from house to house and place to place until we came to Berooa, where the Rajah Gournarain's Gooroo lives. We stopped at the house of this Gooroo. The Gooroo sent him to the Rajah, and supplied him with clothes, money, &c. Here the prisoner, with the assistance of the Ranees, first commenced his assumption of the dignity of a Raja, hiring servants and getting rich caps and clothes. The prisoner was constantly urging the Ranees to supply him with troops and money, to enable him to seize upon the gudgee of Burdwan: after this we all marched towards Burdwan, with a great number of burkundazes and others, and an intention of plundering the city of Burdwan. Near Bancoora, the prisoner sent a letter to the Magistrate, stating, that he was the Rajah of Burdwan, and that he was going to recover his Raj. The Magistrate issued orders that he was not to enter the city; but he came, notwithstanding, with two or three hundred men, and went on to the Balgooma Ghuttee, where Mr. Elliott apprehended the prisoner, his brother Gour Lal, myself, and a great many more. That night escaped and went to Calcutta, where I met Radhakissen Ghosal, who had previously escaped and had come down to Calcutta to do his best to release Kisto Lal. While there, Radhakissen made Hurris Baunerjee a mookhtar, and sent him to Bancoora to assist the prisoners. I went with him, and Radhakissen also accompanied us. We began to correspond with the prisoners in jail. Some one gave information, and we were all seized and imprisoned. I was sentenced to three months' confinement for corresponding with the prisoner while he was in jail. After my release I wandered about until a clergyman at Cutwa took hold of me, taught me to read the Bible, baptized me, and sent me to the Mission at Berhampore, where I now am.

Cross-examined by Mr. Morton.—I was in no employment when I first knew Kisto Lal. I lived on the produce of my lakheraj lands. I have never been in any service. I intended to seek for it; but these men, the prisoner and his brother, inveigled and ruined me. I was never the servant of Kisto Lal or Gour Lal. On the contrary I have given money to their mother. The prisoner called himself an avatar and imposed upon us; we obeyed him as a superior and as a divinity. I am now a Christian catechist under the Rev. Mr. Hill. I have been nine months in that situation. I gave Mr. Hill a written narrative of my life when I joined him, which has been sent to Europe for publication. I had had the scriptures for many months before I was allowed to exercise my present functions. It is now 18 months since I was baptised at Cutwa. When I was in prison at Bancoora, I gave in a written paper to the Magistrate, stating the whole of the circumstances. I was not a witness. I told the daroga that I would disclose everything. The daroga told the Magistrate, who sent for me, and made me write the statement on paper. All the witnesses in the case pending before the Magistrate had there been examined. It is now about eight years since I first knew Kisto Lal, four years before he commenced this deception. It is about four or five years since the prisoner first commenced this. I have kept no account of time, and cannot speak more positively. I know the places where we went and the people who knew us. I recollect how long we remained at each place where we had anything particular to do. Beni Madhub Gosain is a man well known in Cutwa. He has recognised me since as having accompanied Gour Lal. I have no knowledge of years or dates. I do not know how many years it is since we were seized at Bancoora. It was in the month of Magh in the cold weather of some year that the prisoner was seized. I was apprehended in one of the hot months, Chait or Boysack. I recollect we suffered much from heat. I cannot say how many months elapsed from my seeing the prisoners at Baranagore to seeing him at Sreekanth. There were frequently intervals of two months and one month, and sometimes more, in which I did not see the prisoner. The money with which I traded was given me by my mother. It was obtained by selling some lakheraj land. The prisoner used to talk of obtaining the Raj, to me and to Sugur Dbur, to Ramchand Muttre, Dourga Mungle Doss, Roopchand Dutt, Nuboo Mullick. He did not give this out publicly, only to those on whom he could depend. When seized at Bancoora, I gave my name as Kirpaund. This name I had assumed by the advice of Gour Lal and the prisoner. The Magistrate discovered the falsehood, and punished me by giving me double irons. I was a party to the deception which these men commenced. I have said so all along, and have no wish to deny it. I committed a great fault. Since I have been a Christian I have learnt to speak the truth. When in Bancoora jail I got very ill and was nearly dying, and I at last told the daroga that I would tell all. My sentence had expired; but they would not let me go until I told my real name, and I thought it better to confess at once. I bore the name of Kirpaund from the time I first turned Fukeer. As far as I can recollect, the plot commenced about five or six months before the apprehension of the prisoner. I would have revealed this even had I not been confined. I have since told it to many. There are numbers who know the truth of my story, and it can be corroborated by the inhabitants of the villages where we lived. I know that Kisto Lal has marks on his body. He has one on his back, but what it was caused by I don't know. It is close to the shoulder blade but more towards the spine. Kistulall knows a little Sanscrit he also knows Persian. I never heard him speak English; whether he knew it, or not, I don't know. He used to sign his grand signature in Persian "Naba Raj Dheeraj Rajisur Atukho Pertah Chander Bahadur Zemindar, Chacklahi Burdwan Chhysa." Kisto Lal's age, when I first knew him, might be about 28 or 29, but I merely guess so. I don't know how many toes Kisto Lal has. He may have 20 for aught I know; he can tell himself. The Magistrate of Bancoora sent me under charge of a chuprassy to Kishnagur but there was no investigation regarding what I had stated.

Brevet Major John Marshall, a witness for the defence, who was proceeding up the country, was then called in consequence of a representation from the defendants Counsel, and deposed as follows:—I am a Brevet Major in the 71st Native Infantry. I do not know the prisoner by the name of Pentab Chund, but I believe him to be the person I used to meet at Chinsurah upwards of 20 years ago, under the name of the young Rajah of Buidwan, and whose name, if I ever heard it, I have forgot.

Examined by Mr. Morton.—I have met the young Rajah several times, at Mr. Overbeck's once, at his own house, at the Rajbarree, and once on board his pinnace. I have met him also at Hooghly at Mr. Archibald Todd's. I cannot recollect with precision in what years I saw the young Rajah. I used to be a great deal at Hooghly between the years 1814 and 1820. I must have seen him frequently at Mr. Overbeck's when he was Governor of Chinsurah, and that was in the years 1818, 19 and 20. I was well acquainted with the young Rajah's personal appearance. Some of his features were peculiar and I noticed them particularly. I saw the prisoner for the first time since his supposed death at Mr. Ogilvy's trial in the Supreme Court. To the best of my belief I had not seen him since 1820, until I saw him there in the witness box. The face being familiar to me and endeavouring to remember where I had met him, I took very particular notice of his features, and on purpose to further gratify my curiosity, and to assist me in remembering where I had seen him, I sketched his profile on my pantaloons, and this was afterwards copied into the Englishman, for I was then under the impression that the man was an impostor and that I had seen him somewhere in the Upper Provinces. I had not seen him again until I saw him yesterday in this cutcherry. I did not then retain my former impression of his being an impostor. Having only yesterday morning breakfasted with Mr. Overbeck, in the course of conversation he happened to mention some circumstances regarding the prisoner which I perfectly remembered, and which led me to the recollection of the interviews which I had had with him at Chinsurah, bringing to my mind the full conviction that the person I had seen in the Supreme Court was the young Rajah I had formerly known. The sight of the prisoner yesterday did not strengthen that impression, as I had a perfect recollection of his features. The marks on the prisoner's person resemble those which I formerly saw on the person of the Rajah, although in a fainter form. Those marks are connected with the circumstances I alluded to in a former part of my deposition. This interview, which I have just had for the purpose of looking at the marks, has decidedly strengthened my conviction. I would say decidedly so far as I can after such a lapse of time, that this person is the Rajah. I have seen the picture which was exhibited in the magistrate's cutcherry. Presuming that that picture was drawn for him when he was about 18 or 20 years of age, I consider it a most happy likeness of him as he then was, retaining a striking resemblance still to the prisoner at the bar.

Cross-examined by Mr. Bignell.—The nose of the young Rajah was then rather fuller and smoother and the outline not so distinct as at present. It was slightly aquiline. I have no recollection of the colour of his eyes further than that they were dark. I cannot speak to shades. I considered him above the middle size, decidedly tall for a native. When I saw the prisoner I knew that he claimed the Rajah of Buidwan, but I had guessed that it was that Rajah whom I had seen at Chinsurah. I cannot say that I considered the prisoner to be an impostor until yesterday morning, because that opinion had been shaken by what I had seen in the public papers. The conversation with Mr Overbeck is not the main ground of my belief, it is the facts which that conversation recalled to my memory.

Mr. Overbeck had assuredly, from his situation, as many opportunities of seeing the Rajah as I had, though

I doubt whether he had the same opportunities of judging of him as I had. As far as the countenance went, I consider the sketch published in the Englishman to be a good likeness of the prisoner. I have seen a sketch by Mr. Grant, which I consider a very indifferent likeness. —Hurkaru, Nov. 30.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

PUBLIC DISPENSARIES.—Dispensaries are to be forthwith established at Moorshedabad, Patna, Dacca and Chutagong, and to be placed in charge of students from the Medical College. The candidates for these situations were examined by Drs. Nicholson, Martin, Grant and Stewart, who were appointed by Government, a Special Committee of Examiners on the occasion, and who signed the certificates of qualification to commence practice, for such students as may give them satisfaction.

MR. JOHN MASTERS.—Mr. John Masters has been removed from the situation he held in the Botanic Garden.

Tantane animis cœlestibus ire ?

The Government, it seems, were called upon to pronounce sentence on Mr. Masters, but refused to interfere, leaving the matter wholly at the disposal of Dr. Wallich. This unusual course of appealing to the Government was most probably owing to the notice taken by the public journals of the rumour which prevailed on the subject.

A BRIDGE ACROSS THE HOOGHLY.—It has been whispered, that the Government contemplates the stupendous undertaking of a bridge across the Hooghly; that the expense is estimated at 12 lacs of rupees, and the site of the construction is to be above the city. Estimates have been prepared, or are in course of preparation, and the work is to be entrusted to an Engineer officer, whose skill and science have rendered his ability conspicuous to the residents of the metropolis. The bridge will be supported on iron cylinders, secured on floats, which will be fastened so as to resist the weather and the tides.

THE RAJAH OF NAGPORE.—Maharaja Ruggonjee Bhonsla, Raja of Nagpore, is about shortly to make a trip, on a pilgrimage, to Allahabad, Benares, and Gaya.

THE COOLEY COMMITTEE.—The Cooley Committee met again on the 30th ultimo, at the Town Hall, in prosecution of their enquiries, and for the future they will meet every Tuesday and Friday, until their labours are brought to a close. Mr. Dickens said the Committee's Report would go in before Christmas. The Committee are going on very actively. The Reverend Mr. Garstin and Mr. Dowson, have been examined, and also Messrs. Floyd, senior and junior, Messrs. Clarke and Hare have likewise given their evidence. Mr. Dickens, as Chairman, has written to Government, to sanction the employment of the Clerk attached to the Committee up to the 31st day of December next, as Government, in the first instance, only authorized it to the 15th of last month.

ANNUITANTS IN THE MEDICAL SERVICE.—On the 31st ultimo, the applications for annuities were opened by the Managers of the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, when Surgeons, William Grimes, of the 26th Native Infantry, Thomas Inglis, M. D., of the 21st Native Infantry, and Kenneth Macqueen (on leave at the Cape) were declared duly admitted to annuities, to commence from date of the General Orders announcing their retirement from the Service.

SUICIDE.—Captain Kewney, Assist-Quarter-Master General, in the first division of the Grand Army, committed suicide on the evening of the 4th of November. An inquest sat on the body, and returned a verdict of insanity.

ATTEMPT TO DESTROY AN INDIGO FACTORY.—ZILLAH MUDDRAH.—On the night of the 24th ultimo, some miscreants attempted to burn the Dugdough indigo factory, during the temporary absence of the proprietor. So determined were the villains on the destruction of the factory, that they forced into the thatch of the press-house chopper, to the extent of upwards of six yards, rolls of twisted dry straw, containing pieces of ignited dry cowdung. Most providentially the late heavy rains had so saturated the thatch, that it did not burn freely, and the light from the burning part attracting the early notice of the factory servants, it was with difficulty got under, before doing the serious injury contemplated.

SIEGE OF HERAT.—Authentic accounts of the raising of the siege of Herat, and the retirement of the Persian force, have been promulgated during the week in a Government general order; but the British force is still to proceed to Afghanistan, for the purpose of wresting from Dost Mahomed the sceptre he now sways, and placing the automation Sujah on the throne of that country, after chastising the Khan of Bhowalpoore and the Amiers of Scind.

PERTAUB CHUND.—Another change has come over the fortunes of the claimant of the Burdwan Raj. It is said, that a Dr. Robert Scott, of the Madras Presidency, who was in the habit of attending Rajah Pertaub Chund professionally, about nineteen or twenty years ago, has just had an interview with the soi-disant Pertaub in Hooghly jail, and has declared his entire and perfect conviction, that the claimant is the veritable Rajah! This gentleman has come all the way from Chicacole, for the express purpose of seeing the assuming Pertaub.

The trial of this pretender is proceeding at Hooghly, and a host of additional witnesses have been summonsed on the part of the prosecution, in consequence of the evidence of a Hindu convert, who professes to have been a companion of the pretender, whose real name he says is Ki-to Lal. This witness has deposed to the concocting of a plan by the pretender to choose the present incumbent out of the Burdwan estate, and that the witnesses summonsed at his instance, are aware of the whole of the proceedings of the would-be-Rajah to obtain the guddy.

MR. A. H. SIN.—At a meeting of the proprietors of the Union Bank, held on the 7th instant, Mr. A. H. Sin, was reinstated in his office of Accountant of the Bank, which he had been forced to resign in consequence of gross misconduct on his part.

THE ARMY OF THE INDUS.—The Commander-in-Chief, has, with the approbation of Government, officially named the Army now assembling at Kurraul, the Army of the Indus.

DISCOVERY OF A WRECK.—A letter from China, dated 1st September, states, that a wreck had been just reported by a Chinaman as having been seen by him in the China Seas, and that the Maulinien, Captain Pike, which was lying in the roads at the time, had been engaged by the underwriters to the Insurance Offices there, to go out and make a strict search after the wreck, according to the man's directions, who was, of course, to accompany the expedition. The man has also been offered a considerable douceur if his information should prove correct. It is suspected the wreck must be that of some other vessel, not that of the Antonio Pereira.

The Henry Clay, Captain Gillman, bound from Peru to China, met with a severe typhoon in the China seas, in which she was totally dismantled.

H. C. S. AMHERST.—The H. C. S. Amherst, Captain Jump, while on her passage to this port, ran on the rocks named "the Terribles," on the coast of Annam, by which she was considerably injured, the whole of her false keel and the greater part of her main-keel being knocked off and other great damages sustained. She was in consequence, on arrival in this port, obliged to be put into Kyd's Dock, to ascertain the extent of the injury done, when it was discovered, that a piece of rock of considerable size, and about twenty seers in weight, had entered her bottom. This has since been taken out, but the vessel's repairs will occupy much time in completing.

THE CLAIRMONT.—The Clairmont, from Bombay to China, foundered on the 24th of September, in about lat. 20 N. and long. 111 E. The crew and passengers, fifty-three in number, were picked up by the Belle Alliance.

HYDERABAD.—Letters received from the neighbourhood of Hyderabad, speak in most alarming terms of the long and unprecedented want of rain in that quarter. The writer seems to apprehend an extensive famine all over the Nizam's territories, if relief is not soon experienced by heavy falls.

CAPT. MACNAGHTEN AND THE ENGLISHMAN.—The Englishman, with reference to a statement published in the Harkara, respecting Capt. Macnaghten becoming the Editor of the Englishman, says :—

"We beg most distinctly to state, that such an event is not only improbable but impossible. We shall always be happy to avail ourselves of that gentleman's services as a contributor, as we set a high value upon them; but as to the editorship, it is just as likely that Captain Macnaghten should resume his old position with the Harkara, as that he should have the management of this paper."

THE HAIDEE.—Great fears continue to be entertained for the safety of the Haidee, Captain A. Symes. She sailed from Penang on the 21st of September, and has not since been heard of. Captain N. Lewis was a passenger.

The following is an extract of a letter from Bimlipatam, dated 3d November :—

"Intelligence has been received hereby that there have been several vessels lost in the Calcutta river, and some that had just set sail prior to the commencement of the late storm, the remains of which we felt rather severely at this place. I understand there has been a vessel wrecked near Calingapatam, which had on board troops for Cuttack. I cannot vouch for the truth of this report; but several bodies have been washed ashore at a place called Canadah, and the body of a gentleman has drifted ashore near this place, whose leg and arm, I am told, had been devoured by sharks. Another gentleman was picked up at Vizagapatam, who is said to have been mangled much in the same manner about the body. Several tin cases, boxes, &c., &c., have been picked up at Vizagapatam. In one of the boxes which contained money, I am informed, was the body of a lady on whose arm was tied or pinned a piece of paper, on which it appears was written the following notification: 'that she had died from fright during the storm, and that to whatever shore the box might float, it was requested that the body might meet with an honourable funeral'."

SIR HENRY WILMOT SETON.—Sir Henry Wilmot Seton, landed on the 17th instant under the usual salute from the ramparts of the fort, and at three o'clock he entered the Court room and took the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, as second Puisne Judge of Her Majesty's Supreme Court. The members of the Bar were severally presented to his Lordship in the Chief Justice's rooms.

WAR WITH BURMAH.—An extraordinary Council was held on the 10th instant, to consider of recent dispatches from Ava; and immediate war with the Burmese, or something very like it, was resolved on. H. M. 9th regiment, at Chinsurah, and which was under orders for Hazareebagh, is now ordered to be in readiness to embark for Rangoon, which place it is intended to take and retain possession of; whilst a demonstration will be made from Sylhet. The importance of steamers in any operations against the Burman territories, is sufficiently obvious, and we now feel the want of them. The new steamer Enterprise, is being fitted up as a man-of-war, for service in Burmah, and Government here, have despatched orders to Bombay, to send round, immediately, one or two, if not more, of the sea-going steamers; and in that case the communication with Great Britain by the Red Sea, at this time of such moment, will again be interrupted at the season most favorable for maintaining it. Col. Benson, up to the 25th ultimo, had not been publicly acknowledged by Thrawaddie, nor even permitted to deliver his credentials.

MUZZAFFERPORE RACES.—The Muzzaferpore races have been abandoned for this year.

Sporting Cups to be run for during the present season.

THE BENGAL CLUB CUP.

This is an elegant Etruscan vase, with a rich border of laurel, the body of the cup ornamented with eight beautifully finished horses' heads, every muscle and every prominent vein on which are beautifully developed, and the mane is softly and exquisitely represented. It stands upon a square pedestal of lapis lazuli. This is altogether, in our opinion, one of the most elegant cups ever presented in India. Its value is, we have heard, a hundred gold mohurs.

THE HUMAON CUP.

An elegant cup, with rich vine leaf handles, surmounted by a horse, presented by Dr. Sawyers, and valued at a thousand rupees.

THE BENGAL TRU CUP.

This cup, or rather candelabras, is the same as was run for last year, and won by Mr. E. Macnaghten; and the reason of its being offered a second time, is that it must be twice won by the same individual before it can become his property. It is a splendid ornament for the centre of a table: it stands upon a bold base, surmounted with two jockies and a syce holding a rearing horse. The stem is a beautiful and natural representation of the vine, with its tendrils, grapes and leaves falling around it in easy and graceful profusion. Valued at a hundred gold-mohurs.

THE TRADESMEN'S CUP.

This cup is to be presented by the Tradesmen of Calcutta to the Calcutta Second Race Meeting, which is to take place next February. Messrs. Hamilton and Co. are to supply it. The cup, or rather shield, put aside by them for the occasion, is of exquisite manufacture, and represents a very spirited group, consisting of a stallion, mare and foal, in bold relief, surrounded with a border of laurel. This shield has been universally admired by all who have seen it; and is a beautiful specimen of Messrs. Storr and Mortimer's excellence in design and workmanship. Value between sixteen hundred and two thousand rupees.

THE LANCER GOLD SHIELD.

This splendid shield is given by the Officers of Her Majesty's 16th Lancers. It represents a lancer charging, in full relief, and both horse and rider appear very spirited and bold. Value one thousand rupees.

THE CHARGERS' CUP.

This cup is also given by the Officers of Her Majesty's 16th Lancers. It forms an elegant tankard with type laurel border, and a rampant horse for its handle. It is surmounted by a Lancer in full costume. Value five hundred rupees.

THE HADJEPORE SALVER.

This is a magnificent salver, thirty-two by twenty-four inches, and given by the Civilians to the Hadjepore Races. It is ornamented with racing emblems. Value eleven hundred rupees.

THE BREAKFAST SET.

This elegant breakfast set is presented by the stud to the Hadjepore Races, and is surmounted by a foal as distinctive of the stud. Value eight hundred rupees.

THE SKYLARK CUP.

This is a beautiful little vase, supported by a vine with clustering grapes and graceful foliage—a little Bacchus on the pedestal is in happy keeping with the rest of the vase. Value two hundred and fifty rupees.

THE CUTTACK CLARET JUGS.

Presented to the Races, we believe, by Mr. Ricketts. They are of classic beauty and elegance. Value six hundred rupees.

THE ENGLISHMAN.—A writer on the Resumption question, under the signature of GAUNTLET, has been instrumental, during the week, in showing up the good qualities of the folk in the Englishman office. They receive a letter, and, against the writer's wish, mutilate it to suit their own purposes. They then tamper with his servant, and endeavour to find out the writer's real name; but, failing in this, and being attacked by GAUNTLET for their malpractices, they attempt to wriggle themselves out of the scrape, but most signally fail. GAUNTLET has stripped the visor from their faces, and they stand exposed.

THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At a meeting of the Asiatic Society, held on the evening of the 22d inst., on a letter from Mr. James Prinsep being read, containing that gentleman's resignation of the Secretaryship of the Society, Sir Edward Ryan moved, that the resignation be not accepted, but that during Mr. Prinsep's absence the services of Professors Malan and O'Shaughnessy, the former in the Oriental and the latter in the Scientific department, be accepted, and that these gentlemen be appointed as joint Secretaries of the Society, and to act in conjunction with Baboo Ramkomul Sein. This motion was carried. Mr. H. T. Prinsep also stated to the meeting, that arrangements had been made to carry on the Society's journal from materials left by Mr. James Prinsep, to the end of the present year.

RAISING OF THE SIEGE OF HERAT.—Reports of letters from Colonel Stoddart and Lieutenant Portinger, of the 30th of September, announcing the raising of the siege of Herat by the Shah, in deference to the wishes of the British Government, are still current "upon the best authority." A letter, said to have been received by Lord Auckland from Colonel Stoddart, states, that the Shah, on being informed by him that the British Government would immediately consider itself in a state of war with Persia, if the siege were not raised, consented to withdraw his troops, and had reached Meshed on his way to TEHRAN.

THE BISHOP.—The Lord Bishop of Calcutta returned to the presidency on the 23d instant.

JHANSI.—The troops dispatched against Jhansi, have, not succeeded in obtaining possession of the fort, nor expected to succeed without further aid. The Agent for the Governor-General has applied for a reinforcement of 2,000 men and a battering train. Major-General Sir Thomas Anbury, K. C. B., proposes to command this force in person, and as he is well acquainted with the nature of Indian forts, from Seringapatam to Bhurtpore, we may soon expect to hear of the fall of Jansi.

The following are the particulars of the outbreak at Jhansi, given in a letter of the 13th of November:—The Mahratta principality of Jhansi is in open war with our authorities. Mr. Fraser, the agent for Bundelcund, on approaching the town, was fired at, and the general opinion at Gwalior is, that the British Government will take the place. Colonel Hewitt, with the 25th Regiment Native Infantry, is in attendance on Mr. Fraser; and it is believed that Sindia's contingent has received orders to be in readiness. The cause of the disturbance at Jhansi, and of the unsettled state of that principality, is a family quarrel. The two contending parties are headed, the one by the late Rajah's brother, who occupies the Gaddee, and the other by the late Rajah's widow, who holds the fort, and claims the regency of the state, during the minority of her adopted son. Mr. Fraser went to Jhansi to settle these conflicting claims and interests, and very nearly got shot for his pains. Such is the origin of the disturbance at Jhansi, which will end, perhaps, in the annexing of this state to our empire in India. The territory is excellent and nothing is wanted, but a good and firm Government to insure the prosperity of the country, and the comfort and happiness of the people. The present dissensions between the rival parties in the state, tear the country to pieces, and spread ruin and disorder throughout this fine country. The interference of the British Government will, under the circumstances, prove a blessing.

FIRE.—We regret to say, that a most disastrous fire broke out last night in the native part of the town, on the banks of the river. It began, as we are informed, in a hut among some stacks of hay and straw, and in a very short space of time extended for a space of several hundred yards towards the Mint. Fortunately the direction of the wind was to the South-east, so the entire square of native huts beyond that building would have been destroyed. When we left the spot at 9 o'clock, the fire had reached the pukka buildings to the Eastward; several of these were in flames; but it is to be hoped, that the progress of the devastation, was arrested in the street beyond them. The loss of property consisting chiefly of grain and up-country produce, must, we fear, have been immense; as this was the most extensive fire we have seen for some time past in Calcutta.

DORJELING.—Letters from Dorjeling to the 19th inst. have been received, and state that every thing was going on as well as possible. The great desideratum, a bazaar, had been opened for some days, and rice was selling at 22, 20, and 18 seers per rupee, according to quality, and the latter description was declared to be very superior. The Lepchas were coming in from the neighbourhood, and bringing good rice at 25 seers per rupee. Indian-corn at the same rate, yams, fowls, &c. &c. The road, making under the superintendence of Colonel Lloyd, was within 4 miles of Sonadah, and the latter is only 11 miles from Dorjeling. At Mauldaram, one of the Bungalow stations, a beautiful spring of water had been discovered, and enclosed for the use of travellers. We understand that applications for accommodation at the Hotel are coming in so fast, that it is anticipated an extra suite of bed-rooms must be built before May. Messrs. D Wilson and Co. are busily occupied in preparing all "essentials" for the comfort of the visitors of Dorjeling, and, in short, the undertaking promises to be successful beyond our most sanguine expectations.

THE ROB ROY.—The injuries sustained by the Rob Roy from having struck on the rock, were enormous; the whole of her main keel, fore and aft, was completely taken off, and the long copper bolts, which united the keel to her bottom, were sticking out, when taken into dock in Calcutta, in all manner of shapes and figures. On the arrival of the Rob Roy in Calcutta, her Captain had her taken into dock and completely stripped, to ascertain the extent of damage she might have sustained, when the above was discovered, together with some other injuries, such as the shutting of her caulking at her but-end, &c. The vessel has been since completely repaired.

MOFUSSIL.

DELHI.—It is said, that the Government have expressed to the Court of Oodypore, in the strongest terms, its detestation of such deplorable sacrifices of human life as occurred in the suttees after the death of late Rana, and its expectation, that effectual means will be taken to guard against occurrences so abhorrent to humanity on any future occasion. The recent lamentable suttees may, it appears, be ascribed to an interregnum in the Government of Oodypore, there having been no previously acknowledged and established successor who could, on the demise of the former Rana, have immediately taken upon himself the authority of administration.

It is said, that negotiations have been carried on for some time, with the Sinde Government, relative to the progress of our troops through their territory. According to a dispatch received the day before yesterday from Colonel Poltinger, it appears that the Sinde Government are determined to oppose our march.

The concurring native reports respecting the operations of the Herat, though not yet confirmed by official authority, render it highly probable that the King of Persia has finally withdrawn his baffled army, and relinquished those designs on Afghanistan, which our expedition, now setting out, was mainly intended to frustrate.

Cholera has been raging in Delhi.

A squadron of cavalry and two companies of infantry, have proceeded from Nusseerabad to Jeypore, to reduce the refractory Thakoor.

AGRA.—The 28th N. I., while on march, mutinied, and they have, consequently, been ejected from the army of the Indus, and the 20th regiment substituted.

RAJPOOTANA.—Major Forster, in a late incursion into Beekaneer, against a large band of public plunderers, killed 17, and arrested 130. He thence proceeded into the Jhodpoor district, in which he succeeded in seizing several persons of influence among those people, and destroying one of their forts. In consequence of these active measures, the districts of Jhodpoor, Shekawatee, and Beekaneer are almost free from these pests.

LOODERANAI.—The boats despatched some time since with freight, for the Bombay market, have entered the Sutledge, having made a trip such as is likely to increase considerably this trade.

KURNAUT.—On the 4th of November, two or three sepoy of the 48th Regt. N. I., received their dismissal, for the crime of endeavoring to seduce the rest of the men from their allegiance, by urging them not to carry their knapsacks. On detecting their proceedings, the commanding officer threatened instant chastisement, at all personal hazards, and thus succeeded in preventing mischief.

NATIVE STATES.

CAROL.—A body of one thousand men, the most trusted of the Cabool army, commanded by Mr. Campbell, a British subject, has marched from the Capital to occupy the Khyber pass.

JEYPORE.—A considerable degree of excitement prevails in Jeypore, which, it is feared, may lead to tumult and bloodshed.

The party of Jotha Ram appears to be intriguing to oust the Regent, Luchmun Sing, from his post; and the Mahjee herself is said to be desirous of trying a new man and new measures. To effect this, several of the *Thakoor*s, with all their forces, have established themselves in the city, to the infinite jeopardy of the Rawul, who finds himself totally unable to exercise and expel these evil spirits, who have possessed themselves of the "body corporate"!—Till recently, the state of parties was better balanced, but the Khur Moonna Lail, having lately thrown the weight of his person, influence, and—though last not least—cash into the opposition scale, the political equilibrium is destroyed, and Luchmun has been Sng compelled to solicit the assistance of his English supporters. This, if requisite, will be afforded, in the shape of the 13th Regiment of Native Infantry, and two squadrons of the 9th Light Cavalry (with its Head Quarters,) which are ordered to hold themselves in readiness to march from Nusseerabad on the shortest notice. It is not expected, however, that their presence will ultimately be needed, as Col.

Alves is already on his way to mediate between the belligerents, and negotiate a return to the status quo ante. He goes unattended by further escort than a company of the 52d Regiment; Major Ross having another, of the 22d Native Infantry, already at Jeypore; and these, with Major Forster's Shekawatee Contingent, which has been called in from Jhoonoo, may suffice to keep the peace for the present.

MADRAS.

THE BISHOP.—The Lord Bishop of Madras reached the presidency on the 31 of November, and was installed at St. George's Cathedral on the following day.

THE RAIN.—The rains of the monsoon have been falling at the presidency in good earnest. They have hitherto been accompanied by little or no wind, but have exhibited a fair, even down pour.

BOMBAY.

COOLY TRAFFIC.—Persons lately arrived from the south of India state, that the cooly-traffic is quite life along the coast, and that the Rajah of Cochin is selling them off down-right, without making "any bones of the matter."

SUICIDE.—A gentleman in the civil service, lately committed suicide, under the apprehension of the consequence of an investigation into his conduct.

DISTURBANCE OF OKAMUNDI.—A very serious disturbance at present prevails in Okamundi. The Guicowar authorities having burnt several villages belonging to a predatory tribe called the Wagheas, about 600 of them took up arms, one-half carrying matchlocks, the other swords. Being of Rajput descent, they pride themselves upon their courage, and in their present state of destitution, turn that quality to some account, by plundering all travellers who come within their reach. The principal sufferers from this state of things are the pilgrims who repair in great numbers to the temples at Dwarka.

FORCES TO BE DE-PATCHED FOR PERSIA.—It is said, that a force of 6,000 men will be despatched to the south of Persia, so soon as the necessary material can be collected, but the regiments likely to be sent from Bombay are not yet known. All Her Majesty's vessels of war in India, are ordered here, and the Ceylon Government have received instructions to furnish two regiments of European Infantry and a large detachment of the Ceylon Rifles, to aid in the approaching contest.

SNAKE BOAT.—On the 22d of October, a snake boat, to be manned with twenty-eight oars, was finished in the Fort dock yard. She is eighty feet in length and has a cabin beautifully decorated and fitted up with yellow damask and silver. Her external ornaments are composed of green and gold. She is intended as a present from the British Government to Runjeet Sing.

DEATH OF THE GOVERNOR OF GOA.—It is said, that the Baron Sabroza, Governor of Goa, died on Sunday the 14th of October, from the effects of the accident he met with.

THE GUICOWAR.—The Guicowar has not been disappointed; he has manifested so much anxiety of late to be ~~musketed~~, that with all the forbearance which could be exerted towards him, it has been found absolutely necessary to do something to constrain him to good behaviour.

By way of persuading this pugnacious potentate, to do as he ought to do, the remaining portion of Pettud has been taken possession of by a British force, as the only chance of inducing the advent of reason in the councils of his highness.

NAVAL FORCE TO THE INDUS.—The naval force proceeding to the Indus, is to be commanded by Captain Pepper, an able and experienced seaman.

MOUNTED DAK.—The Government have resolved upon establishing a mounted Dak between Aungraabad and Nagpore, which will accelerate the mail nearly forty hours.

SENHOR PERES.—Senhor Peres, the ex-prefect of the Portuguese States in India, who, it will be recollected, fitted out an expedition from Bombay in 1835 for the recovery of his seat of Government, is at present, in Bombay, awaiting the departure of the December Steamer, in which he is about to engage a passage for Europe. The object of his voyage is to present an address to Her Most Faithful Majesty, from the well disposed inhabitants of Goa, praying for the adoption of measures calculated to insure tranquillity in that colony, and prevent the recurrence of its being ultimately disturbed by contending factions.

SPECULATIONS IN HORSES. The horse dealers in Bombay, have already, in the course of a few days, disposed of nearly 700 horses at very high prices, some rare bargains besides.

THE SEPOYS.—It is said that the sepoys are very content and enthusiastic for the service in which they are about to be engaged.

BLOWING UP OF THE RAJAH OF MANDAVIE AND OTHERS.—The most effectual blowing up, or rather the most expeditious case of masculine suttee, heard of for some time, is that of the Rajah of Mandavie and eight of his attendants, who have involuntarily put an end to their existence by the instrumentality of a quantity of fireworks, which exploded about their persons. Particulars of this affair have not transpired, further than that by some such occurrence as this, during some rejoicings, such a catastrophe has taken place.

CEYLON.

THE ELEPHANT THAT KILLED MR. WALLET.—The elephant that killed Mr. Wallet, has been shot by Lieut. Gallway, 90th L. I., and Ensign Swoggs, 18th R. I., both of whom left Colombo with a determination to avenge the death of their friend. They met the elephant in his native jungles, who, on seeing them, gave a roar and rushed forward but four barrels brought him to his knees. He, however, rose again and made off, but was followed by the sportsmen, who killed him with six shots more.

AN ATTEMPT TO SHOOT.—On the 20th ultimo, as the 90th L. I. were preparing for evening parade, and just as one of the Sergeants of No 1. Company called to his men to fall in, Lance Corporal James Doolin, discharged his musket from where he was standing, at the Barrack-door, at the Sergeant, who was about 12 paces distant. The shot providentially, however, did not take effect, in consequence, most probably, of his having fired his gun from the hip, without bringing it to the shoulder. The Sergeant seeing he had been fired at, ran at the Lance Corporal, who retreated into the barrack room and threw away his musket, cursing himself as a bad shot, and expressing regret at not having killed the Sergeant. It appears that this Lance Corporal, who is but 20 years of age, had been a very well behaved young man and bore an excellent character, until lately, when he began to drink and to be led away by bad associates—both male and female. By these habits he contracted debts which he was unable to pay; and becoming distracted by his circumstances, he determined, he said, to commit some act that would for a time remove him from them. He accordingly loaded his musket two days before committing the offence, and declared that he left the barrack room determined to fire at some one, no matter whom; that he bore no ill will to the Sergeant; and that it signified not whom he met, as the first person should be his mark.

The man has been tried and sentenced to transportation for life, as a felon.

BURMAH.

The last accounts from Rangoon state, that the new Sherbunder [Antonio] who arrived at Rangoon on the 6th instant, met Colonel Benson above Yandaboo about the 24th ultimo. This man reported, that Tharraw-mandie had built a spacious house for the Resident, and the opinion was gaining ground, that he would, at all events for the present, affect conciliatory intentions and temporise as long as he can. He was daily becoming more unpopular.

PENANG.

Penang Gazette to the 27th of October, have been received during the week. There is a letter from Mr Commissioner Young, relative to the terms on which leases of the public lands are to be regulated in future. The principle now laid down is clearly an improvement on what was understood to have been the intention of Government, viz., "a reservation of its right to propose altogether new terms, at the expiration of the original leave for twenty years, and to settle the rate to be paid during the second period of 30 years, according to the value of the land or other intermediate considerations." Of course the effect of such an understanding was to deter parties from seeking grants, or, if they did take them, to prevent them from improving the land. The cultivator could have no inducement to spend labour or capital of which the fruits were to fall into the pockets of Government.

A letter from the Captain of the French ship L'Aglae, gives an account of a most atrocious murder and robbery by the Malays on board the American ship Eclipse, Captain Wilkins. The latter officer and an apprentice boy were killed, and the second mate and several sailors wounded.

Singapore journals to the 8th of November, received during the week, state, that some piracies had been committed in the neighbourhood of Tringanu, which are hypothetically ascribed to the followers of the Sultan of Lingin, who has of late been threatening an expedition against Tringanu, to coerce the payment of tribute which he claims from that territory. It is said, that the British Government have determined on preventing the Lingin expedition, and have adopted measures with that view.

The Dutch and the Bugis, it appears, are at loggerheads, and the former have invaded the Bugis district Boorattoe, destroyed the villages, and devastated the country. The Dutch schooner Maria Fredericka, which had been captured by pirates, had been offered for sale in several places on the north west coast of Borneo. The lives of almost all her original crew had been spared by the corsairs, and they were on board the vessel.

Advices from Bangkok, to the 15th of September, intimate, that the Siamese were very busy, making preparations of war against the Quedah Malays. The King had been extremely vexed at the loss of Quedah, and had vented his resentment in extensive decapitations; the late Governor of that province is among the number of victims who have suffered from his majesty's anger. Trade was dull, munitions of war being the only saleable articles.

CHINA.

SEARCH AFTER THE ANTONIO PEREIRA.—H. M.'s Ship Larne, in search of the Antonio Pereira, on the 25th August, sighted the Lincoln Island, on the 26th went round it, but found no sign of the A. Pereira, nor of any wreck. Fishing stakes were seen in a small bay on the N. side. Shoal water was seen on the S. E. side of the island, distant about 3 miles. The island appears to be a most dangerous place; in the night time it could not be distinguished from the water. The shoal is much more to the Eastward of the island than laid down by Ross, and extends a long way out beyond the discoloured water. In working up to the Bombay shoal, the current was so strong, that the Larne rather lost ground after two day and night. When the Bombay shoal, Triton Island and Triton bay have been examined, Captain Blake purposes to look in at Hainan Island on his return.

MUTINY ON BOARD THE JOHN BULL.—A very serious mutiny occurred on board the John Bull. Blood was shed on both sides, and Mr. Macdonald, 2nd officer of the Castle Huntly, was severely, if not dangerously, wounded. Captain Gillett, and other officers who had hastened to assist Captain Omond, were particularly active in quelling the mutiny.

The China papers to the 10th of October, received during the month, mention, that opium was dull, and excepted to fall in price. A few sales, of Malwa and Patna, had been effected. The quotations were, per chest of old Patna, 540 to 545 drs; new 535 to 590 drs. Old Benares, 525 drs; new 540 to 545 drs. Malwa 575 drs. A meeting of the British inhabitants of Canton had been held on the 31st of October, to take into consideration Mr. Waghorn's suggestions respecting Steam Communication between China and England, via Point de Galle and Suez. The meeting voted their thanks to Mr. Waghorn, for his exertions in the cause of Steam Communication, but were of opinion, that the proposition was premature and impracticable, until each communication be assured as far as Singapore.

A fast boat, in which were Dr. Parker and Mr. Leyton, was boarded, at the mouth of the Macao passage, by a Government boat, one of the crew of which inflicted several wounds on the crew of the fast boat and Dr. Parker's servant, and would have done more mischief, perhaps, if he had not been disarmed by the Doctor. The case was reported to the Hoppo, but no redress was obtained. H. M. Ship Larne, had returned safely to Macao roads, after an unsuccessful search, of nine week's duration, for the Antonio Pereira. The Larne had got into considerable danger while approaching the Paracels, owing to the reef near Lincoln Islands, extending much further than was expected.

ASIATIC NEWS.

THE FREE PRESS DINNER.

Last Saturday, the 15th of December, the fourth anniversary dinner, in celebration of the liberation of the Indian Press, was given at the Town Hall. About eighty gentlemen, among whom we observed nearly twenty natives, were present, and every thing went off with great éclat. After the removal of the cloth, Mr. C. R. Prinsep, the chairman, proposed the health of the Queen, to which due honor was done, the band playing the usual anthem "God save the Queen," and the Company standing all the while.

CHAIRMAN.—And now, gentlemen, having poured forth those libations to loyalty, which duty and affection prompted, I call your attention to the business of this day's meeting, the fourth celebration and the third anniversary of the Freedom of the Press of British India. Philosophers have told us, and for my part I devoutly believe, that the grand, perhaps the sole, distinction between the intellect of the human and of the brute creation, consists in the faculty of intercourse by speech, whereby the mind of man, not limited like that of the brute, to the bare result of his own individual perception and reflection, enables him to avail himself of the experience of his fellows, to gather and to store up the wisdom of by gone ages, and to build upon it calculations of the future. If this be so, it is easy to comprehend the vast importance of every invention, whereby either the circle of human intercourse is extended, or its circulation accelerated. And such is the Press, that mighty engine before whose earliest efforts religious thralldom shrunk into the shade, whose maturer growth gave birth to the principles of constitutional liberty, and whose every movement forwarded the progress of the arts, by which its own powers have been magnified some hundred fold, till it has become what it now is, the rail-road of human intelligence, conveying with electric rapidity from province to province, from nation to nation, from one hemisphere to another, each new conquest of mind over matter, each new discovery in the moral or material world, and each new flight of fancy in the regions of imagination. These are the advantages of the Press. Think you that they could have been attained, had its action not been free? I fear, gentlemen, that many of you will deem that, in a company composed of Britons, or of men of India worthy to be classed as Britons, to enlarge upon the benefits of the Press in general, or the expedience of leaving it free and unfettered, is superfluous, nay, even impertinent. But we must not forget, that however trite and common-place, such topics may appear to a people familiarized with the benefits of a liberal government, and that of the Press amongst the rest, here, in this country, nay, in this very hall, it is not many years ago, that the very mention of freedom in connexion with the Press, would have made young men look grave, and old men fidget on their seats, as if the very frame of order, and authority, and society would crumble to pieces at the sight of such an apparition. A fettered Press in a free country, is a downright anomaly; those who have been long in the enjoyment of liberal institutions are apt to consider freedom of the Press as a part of the system, inseparable from it. But in a country recently acquired by conquest and that, too, before the conquered and the conqueror have half forgotten their contentions, or become blended in a community of habits, of opinions, and of interests, the naturalization of so powerful an instrument was an experiment—aye, and a bold one. Men in power, and brave ones too, shrunk from the responsibility; till fortune at length gave us a Government equal to the occasion. To the short reign of Metcalfe was reserved the glory of triumphing over terrors, which the event has proved to have been for the most part unfounded. Ten years and more have now elapsed since the Press of India has been practically free, three years are now completed, since it has been free by law. And now let any man stand up and on his conscience declare, wherein has British India been damaged? Has her Commerce languished, her agriculture declined? Has the tone of morals of her population, whether of the conquered or the conquering race, been deteriorated? or corruption, either in private or in public life become more bold or more baneful? or, what is after all the main question, has British rule become more grievous to the provinces of Hindoostan? If all these questions must be answered in the negative, as conviction tells me they must, then I say, may the Press of India ever be constitutionally free, and grow in strength and power from generation to generation, and do honor to him, who, in disregard of the early and rooted prejudices of his class and station, of the fears and frowns of Leadenhall, dared to set his seal to the charter of its freedom, which will go down to posterity coupled with his name, till men shall cease to remember that the Press was ever other than free!! Wherefore, let our toast be, the Freedom of the Indian Press and honor to Metcalfe its liberator. (cheers and acclamations.)

This toast was drank with much fervor. After which Mr. R. S. Thomson sang the following song, composed for the occasion by Dr. Grant.

CHARLIE drew'd a peck o' maut
And a' Calcutta cum to see;
A blither party on that night
Ye wad na find in all Inger.

We are na fou, we're me that fou
But just a drappie in our ee.
The cock may crow, the day may da,
But still we'll taste of CHARLIE'S DEE.

And some of CHARLIE's freres there were,
Wha did na like at a' the bree ;
And his auld Annie scoulded sair,
And thought it should diluted be.
We are nae fou, &c.

She was a Carlin auld and dour,
That liv'd awa yont the sea ;
And aye her face wax'd wry and sour,
At ony but diluted bree.
We are nae fou, &c.

And why? She thought the Coolies a'
And Doolies, wad disloyal be,
Gin aught they quaff'd but what was innu,
And thin and cauld, as Adam's bree.
We are nae fou, &c.

Of a' my sons, the Carlin said,
And I have had twa score or three ;
CHARLIE alane took in his head
To brew sic strang and reaming bree.
We are nae fou, &c.

Lord FRANCIS lov'd it well, but yet
Although the flower of Chivalrie ;
His secret friends, said 'twas too hot,
And that he'd better let it be.
We are nae fou, &c.

Then, JEREMY sometimes gave it pure
And whiles he mix'd it buterly ;
But on the whole, ye may be sure,
He in his heart lov'd well the bree.
We are nae fou, &c.

JOHNNY follow'd, strang and bauld,*
Who deem'd it but a sort of tea,
And when folks said 'twas thin and cauld,
With aqua fortis mix'd the bree
We are nae fou, &c.

And next cam Portland Willie o'er,
A blon and honest cheil was he ;
And let folks drink at times galvre,
But whiles had scruples 'bout the bree.
We are nae fou, &c.

He granted it was cordial stoff
But wish'd aboon, a tank should be,
From which, at will, with quantum suff,
He'd plump ' come down' upon the bree.
We are nae fou, &c.

But Willie went, and CHARLIE cam,
And straight set to, to mak the bree
And scorning mixture all and sham,
He brew'd it pure, and strong and free!
We are nae fou, &c.

Then pledge a bumper of the best
To him who brew'd the honest bree,
And at whose manly high behest
We now enjoy it pure and free!
We are nae fou, &c.

CHAIRMAN.—Gentleman, as well as I could hear, Mr. Thomson had just enumerated the merits of our former Governors, it is necessary that we do not forget the claims of our present Governor-General. Circumstances, it is true, have not permitted him to reside long among us. He has been a wanderer, in search either of glory or of public objects; but wherever he may be, our interest and anxiety must always attend the man who wields for the time the destinies of British India. May he prosper in the arduous undertakings he is now engaged in; and may he prove as warm a friend to the Press of India as his predecessor. (Loud cheers). The Governor-General of India, gentlemen, with all the honors.

MR. DICKENS, VICE-CHAIR.—Gentlemen,—I give you the health of the President of the Council of India, Colonel Morison. He is the sole remaining Member of the Council, I believe, who concurred in passing the law which we meet to celebrate; the measure which gave freedom by law to the Press of India, long previously free in practice. I am bound to believe, he did concur in passing that law. I believe, in the absence of positive knowledge, that he concurred in passing it. He is now near the close of his career, and I am satisfied that it is with pleasure and pride that he will in his retirement contemplate late his part in that great measure, as it is with perfect satisfaction that I am enabled to propose to you the health of one of our present rulers, of the man only second in place of all those now in power, on this special ground, as one of the builders up of the legal freedom of the Press in India.

If he had done no other act as a legislator, of which he has reason to be proud, as I dare say that he may have done many, no man could desire a better epitaph on his tomb than this: as one of her rulers I gave to India the freedom of the Press. Gentlemen, let us drink to the health of Colonel Morison, President of the Council of India.

CHAIRMAN.—In these times of wars and rumours of war, we must not forget our brave defenders; and though in this country and under present circumstances, the Army might naturally claim our first attention; yet am I sufficiently an islander, although I have been in this continent now for many years, to recollect that it was the Navy that first gave stability to the Empire of Great Britain, and that by her navy her predominance and her commerce continues to be supported all over the world. I therefore give you, gentlemen, the Navy. Drink with all the honors.

VICE-CHAIR.—Gentlemen,—I give you the Army—The Army of India, both Crown and Company's, for they are one in feeling and actuated by the best and most perfect strict of unions—that Army which has won for us this dominion, and which I firmly believe, will ever maintain it, unless the caprices or the exactions of the civil power, shall disseminate permanent discontent among our native fellow-subjects, and render powerless its efforts by introducing disaffection in its ranks. A thing not impossible; for, gentlemen, we must ever remember, that the bulk of that Army sympathises with the people of India, and that it is in bone and blood, thews and sinews, eye, and spirit too, an Indian Army. It is not my desire on such a subject to enter into political questions at all: still less a debatable questions, but I may be indulged in the expression of an earnest hope, that every just cause of discontent may carefully be removed from the people, and then our Indian Army will continue to be, as it has ever been, the pride and ornament and main safeguard of our dominion. Gentlemen, I give you the Army of India.

Dwarkanauth Tagore rose, in the midst of loud and continued cheering, and spoke the following effect:

Dwarkanauth Tagore.—Gentlemen,—It has fallen to my lot to propose a toast in which I am sure you will all agree, whatever be your political opinion. Last year this toast was in the able hands of my worthy friend Dr. Grant. I cannot presume to do that justice to it which was done by that eloquent orator, but allow me to assure you that my feelings on this occasion are fully equal to his. The toast I have to propose is the cause of Civil and Religious Liberty all over the world. (Cheers) It has been said, gentlemen, that this is a conquered country and that the Mahomedans had conquered it before the English. I now find two members of a Mahomedan noble family, uniting with us on this occasion to celebrate the liberty of the Indian Press; could we have expected this in by-gone days? We are now said to be rising from a state of ignorance; but allow me to assure you, that before the conquest of this country by the Mahomedans, we were a far more enlightened people than we are now. To be convinced of this, you need but examine our ancient literature and sacred books; even the works of Sir William Jones will inform you of this. In ancient time we had free institutions, our females were not secluded from society, Geography, Astronomy, and other sciences flourished in this country; the inroad of the Mahomedans brought ignorance and darkness in this land, and changed its free institutions into those of slavery. The time however has arrived, when, after many years we have been placed under an enlightened Government, which has done something to raise this nation in the scale of civilization, the work of amelioration might be said to have commenced with the administration of Lord Cornwallis, who gave to the people a proprietary right in the soil. The next Government was involved in wars and could do little to benefit the country. The Marquess of Hastings came next, and it was he who commenced to give liberty to the Press in the days of Mr. Buckingham and the Calcutta Journal; (cheers) but the consummation of this great work was left for Sir Chas. Metcalfe. (Loud cheers). If civil and religious liberty is to be secured, it must be secured by a Free Press. Our Chairman has told you that education is the first thing requisite for this country; but education and Free Press must go hand in hand, in order to accomplish the object. You all remember, gentlemen, the name of Rammohun Roy, who translated the sacred Vedas into the vernacular language, and thereby gave to his countrymen the means of obtaining civil and religious liberty. I feel ashamed when I call to mind that this great man was put down by the prejudices and superstition of his countrymen. Had it not been for the liberty of the Press could we have had an INDOPHILUS, a GAUNTLET or even an ANTI-HUMBUG, to lay open before the public the measures of Government and to assign reasons for them. These writers, gentlemen, deserve our admiration and esteem for coming forward boldly and manfully to tell us what the measures of Government are. Their principles are very different from those which dictate the expediency of conducting all Government measures with the door of the Council Chamber closed upon the public (loud cheers and hear, hear.) We are this day met here to celebrate the liberty of the Press which must always co-exist with civil and religious liberty. I shall therefore give you, gentlemen Civil and Religious Liberty all over the world. (Loud cheers).

This toast was drank with great enthusiasm.

Dr. J. GRANT, on rising, was hailed with loud cheering. He spoke as follows:—

Dr. GRANT, —Mr. President and Gentlemen, before I come to the subject of my toast allow me, in the first instance, to return thanks on behalf of Captain Thomson, and all the gentlemen of the army whose health, a little while ago, you drank. Although I am only a non-combatant, yet I belong to that army, and therefore, as no one else has done so, I return thanks for them as well as myself, and that this should be performed by me is less my fault, than my misfortune. I now proceed, gentlemen, to the subject of the toast I have been requested to propose. Fortunately for me it is one that requires no eloquence to recommend it; it is simply the extension of education in India. Some of you will perhaps wish that I should give the toast without comment, and that would be by far the most agreeable course to myself; but it might appear disrespectful, not only to the subject but to those who have intrusted me with this toast. Let me, therefore, claim your indulgence for a few brief observations. By education, gentlemen, I understand the proper culture of the mind and the most difficult of all the sciences, that of self-education. Education is both end and means. To the juvenile aspirant, it is an important end, to secure which he must serve a disciplined apprenticeship of years in the shop of knowledge, and learn the use of his tools. Having attained the proposed end, he now discovers, that it is but means to further and varying ends. Alps on Alps arise, and some darling end still urges him onward. Such is the condition of man, and wisely has it been ordained that it should be so, otherwise would there be a general stagnation of the faculties of the mind—the inhabitants of one country could have no inducement to visit or hold communication with those of another, and there would be a stop to discovery and improvement.

Of all the senses we possess, that of sight you will readily allow is the most precious; there is no object so pitiable as a blind man; for he can neither see the approach of danger, nor ward it off. You all remember the magnificent invocation to heaven-born light in the opening of the third book of Paradise Lost. Do not be alarmed, for I am not going to inflict a quotation upon you: but merely to remind you of the most touching allusion made by the immortal bard to his blindness. But he had the consolation of inward light, for the eyes of his powerful intellect were not obscured. Fortunate is it for us that Milton was an educated man, else should we not have had the "Paradise Lost;" but what is more opposite to the associations of the evening, we should not have had the "Annals of Agriculture," one of the most masterly defences of the Liberty of the Press, ever written, and one that effected good service for civil freedom, by appearing at a time when the subject was not so well and generally understood as it now is.

But are we to confine our compassion to physical blindness? Have we not sympathy with millions of our fellow men around us, to whom the fair earth is as a limbo of gross ignorance and hideous superstition, that reduce man almost to the level of the creatures that browse the hill or crop the valley; and generate in his nature the low mischievous cunning of the ape with the cowardly ferocity and blood-thirstiness of the tiger? What then is the remedy for this state of things. I say education, and I am borne out in saying so, by the manly and straight-forward testimony of an enlightened native gentleman now present, in a communication that lately appeared in the newspapers. A gentleman who is himself a fine illustration of what may be effected by education, and what is more honorable to himself of self-education. I mean my friend Dwarkanauth Tagore, whom you have just now heard addressing you in English. I do not deny that fault might be discovered by a verbal critic in that speech; but I defy any man to discover in it a solecism in sentiment or logical deduction. You have heard him deliver his sentiments in English, will any of you be able to express yourselves in Bengallee with equal facility?

How vast is the field for education here, but inadequate the means! "They are well enough as they are," observes some philosopher of the "let-well-alone" school. But are they well enough? If they were, I should not now be troubling you with my feeble advocacy for an extension of education! Many people have a dread of what they call the "March of Intellect," a sort of Dr. Fell like intuitive dislike; perhaps for some such reasons as prejudice some small minded men against learning in women and instruction to the working classes. To be sure it would be mighty inconvenient, to be corrected in a false quantity by a classical wife, or to see a smile flickering across your butler's face on detecting you in a historical misquotation! No sentiment is more in favor with such cavillers than that a little learning is a dangerous thing? Now this I do deny. A little learning may make a naturally weak and frivolous man a little more absurd, and what does that signify? Pope was very fond of antithesis and as it has been said of some wits that they would sacrifice a friend for a jest,

I do not think it is unjust to say of Pope, that he sometimes sacrificed truth to a paradox. To a man of plain understanding and common sense, a little learning is a very valuable acquisition; and I need not remind this company that it has sometimes saved human lives. "Drink deep" if you can, of the Pierian spring, but I protest against being forbidden to taste at all, even at the last extremity, unless I can drink deep, which may be utterly out of my power.

A great Moralist whose memory (albeit some prominent infirmities and hard sayings regarding my countrymen) I hold in high respect; has left a saying, that every Scotsman has got a mouthful of learning, but not one a bellyful. I am content to take the saying as thus stated. I do not cavil at it in the least, but make this answer; so admirable and assured has been the result of this mouthful system in Scotland, in a peaceable, orderly, steady, industrious, religious, and high-minded population; that I heartily wish it were extended to other countries and particularly to India.

The raw material is excellent, for where is there a more frugal, hard-working and submissive body of men than the Bengal ryots, and is their state so completely what it is desirable it should be, that it stands in no need of improvement? The people themselves are beginning to take a deep interest in the question, especially the poorer classes; and as a Member of the Committee of Public Instruction, I can state that we are sometimes under the painful necessity of negativing earnest entreaties of the poor inhabitants of some populous village, to aid them in founding schools for the education of their children. Such petitions I say we cannot comply with from not having more extensive means. Would that the wealthy and influential "Natives" would in greater numbers aid the cause with their hearts and their purses! But there is one splendid exception; need I mention Dwarkanauth Tagore? Would that they imitated his philanthropy and liberality—instead of squandering large sums yearly upon funeral obsequies and Doorgah Poojah nautches! And what are the recollections associated in the minds of the poor with shrods? Are they those of respect for the memory of the dead, and of gratitude for the living? No—they are recollections of a home rashly quitted for a beggarly dole, of a wearisome journey, of exposure to the inclemency of the weather, of hunger, thirst, and not infrequently of death! Those of Doorgah Poojah nautches again are associated with nocturnal dissipation and dissoluteness, find too often of the disgraceful drunken squabbles of the foreigners who degrade themselves by frequenting such revels. I would, indeed, most earnestly entreat of the natives to spend their money to better purpose in founding scholarships or charitable institutions. I would beg of them to recollect the impressive truth that education is the antagonist principle of the impossible, and that it has achieved many victories over the impossible. To the educated man many things are possible which to the uneducated is totally impossible. The very elements become subservient to the purposes of the man of science. Twenty years ago that person would have been scouted as a visionary, who should have foretold that a letter from London would reach America in a fortnight and Calcutta in fifty days. Nay, ten years ago he would have been called a wild Enthusiast who should have foretold that within that time Hindoo youth would be wielding the powers of Chemistry with the adroitness of adepts; and more, that the son of the Brahmin should be seen learning anatomy as only it can be learned, scalped in hand, by the side of the dead body! This sublime victory over prejudice and superstition, has been effected by the Medical College, a truly noble institution which is effecting much good—that we owe in the first instance to the enlightened and wise Government that provided it, and in that second to the ability, science, and energy in active operation within its walls.

But I must not intrude further on your time. I conclude by saying, that education, in a word, elevates a man nearer to the source of light. Knowledge itself has been emphatically called Light. The broad highway of knowledge, though to some extent we behold its course, eludes our gaze in the far distance, passing beyond the veil of infumate. On that high way there is no halting. The traveller must onward—ir retrograde; and in proportion as he advances or recedes, will be the usefulness of his talents or the benefits he confers on society. Within the heart of man there is a sacred craving for knowledge that cannot be satisfied here. There is no quenching of that divine thirst until the Regal Cup-bearer come with his "cool black wine" that must be drank, and by the dread mysterious power of which, an end is put to our groping pupillage below—to perfect our Education in the Heavens!

Here Mr. Hays sang—"Bright, bright are the beams of the morning sky," and was applauded with loud cheers.

MR. LONGFVILLE CLARKE, in a very eloquent speech, which we could not take down, spoke to the following effect. The toast which he had to propose was not a party toast, it concerned every body, and he would deny that the present meeting was a party meeting. All were invited to it and all were welcome. None, he said, entertained any doubt regarding the usefulness, nay, the necessity of a Free Press. The trial by Jury, which was his toast, was of the same universal character. It was an institution common both to England under the name of Jury, and to India under the name of Panchait, and he would appeal to Dwarkanauth Tagore to say, whether he was not correct in this assertion. Freedom of the Press and trial by Jury, he considered as inseparably united to one another. Destroy the one and you necessarily destroy the other. He adverted to the new code from which he quoted certain passages to prove that an attempt had been made to destroy in this country the right of trial by Jury. Dwarkanauth Tagore, he said, was the proprietor of a Press, in the concerns of which he took no part; suppose some libel were published by that Press, according to the provisions of the new code, he could, he might, if convicted, be sentenced to two years' imprisonment, and at any time before one-third of that period expired, a Governor-General might banish him for life from the territories of the Company, and thus the Government would thus manage to get rid of troublesome zemindars. This was not the state of the laws now; but if the new code came into operation, that would be its state, and the country would fall back to the times when a Buckingham and an Arnott were persecuted. He enumerated several instances of the triumph of the Jury in England, even in cases which concerned poor men whose cause the Government would not take up, and asked if such were the beneficial results of the institution in England, why similar effects would not attend it in this country. He then adverted to the struggle against the Stamp Act, supported by Sir Chas. Grey, the then Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and to the victory obtained by a resolute Jury, the foreman of which was Mr. Robert Brown. Mr. Clarke concluded by proposing—Trial by Jury; which toast was drank with loud and continued cheers.

MR. H. M. PARKER.—It devolves upon me to propose to you, and I do so with sincere gratification, a great, a valiant and an enlightened people. To propose to you a mighty Nation which Sir Phillip Sydney, that honor to England and flower of English chivalry, designated in his day, and in the true spirit of a brave and noble Englishman as he was, "That sweet enemy France." There is still, I grieve to say, a party, and not a weak party, lingering round the mouldering altars of prejudice and ignorance which occasionally takes all that is fine and noble out of Sydney's fine phrase, and calls the subject of my toast "that natural enemy France." By this party the irreligious, the unchristian, the foolish and disgusting feeling I have alluded to The "Natural enemy" feeling was strenuously sought to be revived only a few weeks ago, thanks to Steam Communication I can say weeks, on an occasion when, if ever, all such unworthy prejudices and unholy feelings should have been allowed to sleep; when no sentiments should have prevailed but those of peace and happiness. They called upon the land to join their cry "Our natural enemy France," and the call was replied to. Yes, it was replied to as England, Ireland and Scotland, as the lands of Marlborough, of Wellington, and of Moore, could only reply to it, in a manner worthy of their fame, by one simultaneous burst of honest admiration and respect for the valiant veteran who having in so many gallant fields upheld the renown of the realm he nobly served in war, now came to represent in friendship and in peace "that sweet enemy France." But away with all talk of enemies or enemies when we speak of that great and noble nation, I shall call her, as I hope to find her, the true and valued friend, bound to us, as neighbour should be bound to neighbour, by mutual kindnesses, mutual wants, mutual sympathies, and mutual interests (Cheers.) For my own part, I cannot but feel that mankind owes a mighty debt to France; for arts, for sciences, for civilization, for literature, and above all, for her revolution. Aye, gentlemen, for her revolution! I do not disguise from myself the crimes or the follies of that terrible period; but, gentlemen, if we and our families had fed upon weeds and nettles that some gay Signeur might glitter in lace and embroidery through the galleries of Versailles. If we had groined for bread, and our answer had been a gallows forty feet high. If we had implored food, and been told by an insolent millionaire, that if hungry we might eat grass. If we had been ground by corvées, plunged in Bastille dungeons, and shot from off the house tops for amusement, by some gay noble returning from the chase; I say gentlemen, if we and ours had suffered these things, we should then better comprehend, and perhaps better allow for, that awful reaction of all the feelings of insulted humanity, of humanity tyrannized over, degraded, trampled on, debased for centuries which we call the French Revolution! Neither will I urge what has been so often, and so well insisted upon, that one battle fought in a war wages to gratify the spleen of some royal courtier, or to prevent the spread of a frivolous dispute, touching the size or placing of a window, between a vain glorious sovereign and a vain glorious minister, that one such battle in one such war, I say, has cost more blood twice told than unhappily flowed from all the scaffolds of Revolutionary France. But these are no justifications, I acknowledge with every Englishman, with every honest man, the solemn maxim that crime does not justify crime. Tyranny, cruelty and vice in a King, excuses not tyranny, cruelty and vice in a people: forunately the French Revolution has another and I trust a better ground of justification. In a world where evil is, we must of necessity balance such evil with the good that results from it. We must balance the miseries of the thirty years war with centuries of religious peace and freedom of conscience. We must balance; the whirlwind which destroys great ships and devastates islands, with the whirlwind which sweeps disease and pestilence from whole realms and purifies and sweetens, to the wholesome uses of life, the blessed air "that clips us round about." Since, I say, things in this state of our being must thus be judged, who shall say that the French Revolution has not been fraught with incalculable good to France and to mankind. To mankind, for it has taught, not the "great moral lesson" of our old Tory friends, but the "greater moral lesson" of a wholesome self-restraint even to the most assured of despots, while it has taught hope, blessed hope, even to the most enthralled of people.

"Sarmatia fell unwept without a crime," but even for Sarmatia there is the tri-color of eternal nature, the rainbow of hope, still shining in her sky of troubled clouds. For the heroic sons of Poland, reversing the well-known adage without departing from its truth, while there is hope, there is life, and God grant that hope may be fulfilled! As for France herself, the benefits ultimately arising from her Revolution were cheaply purchased if none other had resulted from her long, her fearful, her heroic struggles, than the freedom of the Press.—At that hallowed name, hallowed alike in France and England, and the best guarantee for the peace and happiness of both, I conclude by giving that you will aid me in doing all honor to my toast.

FRANCE, and may the cordiality and good will happily subsisting between her and Great Britain never be diminished.

CHAIRMAN.—My friend, Mr Parker, has given you for his toast, the nearest neighbour of Great Britain. I will now give you her nearest relative, England's elder child, the United States of America: an offspring of which she has reason to be proud; for young as she is, she has already surpassed most of the states of the old continent. From her we learnt an useful lesson at the time of her emancipation, and no doubt her enterprize will enable her to give us many more. Would that England had many such actions, to carry her arts, her literature, her glory, and her liberal maxims of Government from one pole to the other. May no petty jealousies or squabbles about a boundary, not worth the quarrelling for, disturb that harmony, which after two contests now so happily exists, and which I trust may be eternal.—Here's to Britain's eldest birth, the United States of America.

DR. HORNBY.—As an American citizen, and I believe the only one present this evening, I will detain you one moment, to offer my feeble acknowledgments, for your flattering recollection of the United States. It would not become me to eulogize my native land, else I might tell you of the blessings we enjoy under our free institutions; but as quite relevant to the purpose for which we have met together, I assert that with more than twelve hundred newspapers, perfectly unshackled and with facilities for their circulation unknown in any other country, we uphold the Freedom of the Press, as the safeguard of our liberties.—(Applause). It is happily no longer necessary, while returning thanks upon such occasions, to allude to national prejudices—where illiberal feelings exist, their origin may be traced to selfish motives. The Englishman, the Scotchman, and Irishman, all find a home in America, and the citizen of the United States meets a welcome and clasps the right hand of fellowship, wherever he dwells among the subjects of Great Britain.

But the uniting band between us, has, I hope, been secured by the triumph of the "Syrius" and "Great Western;" with the same interests and the same language we must be considered as brethren, since now, gentlemen! the Cataract of Niagara is only 20 days' distance from London.

MR. LETH then rose and said,—Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen, the duty of proposing the next toast has devolved on me, and I think that you will concur with me in considering it most appropriate on the present occasion. It is "the Chamber of Commerce in Calcutta and Freedom of Trade all over the Globe," (Cheers). Gentlemen, the prosperity and dignity of our own favored country, are to be ascribed under Providence, mainly, if not entirely, to its Constitution and Commerce. One of the integral parts of that Constitution is a Free-Press; and no class of men has been more forward, or sincere in the support of a Free-Press than the Commercial Community of Great Britain, in general, or than that section of it, in particular, located here, (cheers.) In giving the meed of praise to the Commercial Community of Calcutta, which they so well deserve, for their liberal, independent, and patriotic endeavours to secure for their countrymen in India, among other constitutional rights, that of a Free Press, I must bring prominently forward the name of one of that body, who by his liberal and munificent acts placed himself in its van—who, in his life, was honored and respected as a British merchant, and who, now that he is dead, is remembered to be most deeply regretted. Need I say that merchant was John Palmer! (Cheers.) But I am right glad to see here present this evening some of those merchants who have written and publicly advocated a Free Press, and who has suffered because he supported a Free Press. And right glad am I to see that many of those who laboured in the good cause have lived to see their labours crowned with success. You, gentlemen, who have seen the bearings and practical working of a monopoly in trade, the disadvantages and the unprofitable nature of that monopoly to the monopolists themselves, the serious injury thereby, inflicted on the general trading interests of our country, and the flourishing condition of the trade with India since that monopoly has been abolished, will be in no want of arguments to convince you of the commercial and social advantages of a free-trade all over the world. (Cheers.) Slow as their progress has been, we find that the nations of Europe are now arriving at the conclusion, that the extension of Commerce, is more to be desired than the acquisition of territory, and that the advantages of peace and a flourishing foreign trade, are much to be preferred to the honor and glory, which may be gained in a foreign war. (Cheers.) But I hope that many of us may live to see the states of Europe advanced one step further in liberal policy, and sound philosophy, by their making general Commerce the first object in international law, and by allowing that they consider Commerce not the end, but the means of diffusing civilization and happiness among all the nations of the earth! (Cheers.) I have the honor to propose the Chamber of Commerce, and Freedom of Trade all over the Globe.

Mr. FERGUSSON returned thanks, and observed, that the mercantile community had always been engaged in objects of utility, which were beneficial alike to the country at large as to themselves.

CHAIRMAN.—Allow me to propose a toast not on the list; but which ought by no means to be omitted. It is a branch of the public service highly useful and honorable. I regret to observe among the gentlemen present so few members of it various causes have prevented their coming and delicacy perhaps was the principal. Yet, that was no reason why we should withhold the due compliment on such an occasion. It is not to the lost sight of, that it was by a Governor-General selected from that service, that the good we are now celebrating was granted which other Governors of large professions had refused. He would propose the health of Mr. Dampier and the Civil Service. Drank with all the honours.

Mr. DAMPIER, in rising to return thanks observed, that as there was another member of the same service present he did not know why he should be so particularly singled out as an object of compliment on this occasion. He would assure the gentlemen present, that the members of the service to which he had the honor to belong, felt as they did, they were fully aware of the benefits of a Free Press, and believed that it would gradually do much good. He had been sent into the service when he was an uneducated boy, and he had for a time acted in his official capacity, in a manner that he could not now approve of. He was indeed ashamed of many of his acts, and he really believed that if a Free Press had existed in the country at that time, he would not have acted so (hear, hear and cheers.) He adverted to the character of the Civil Service in general, and said, that with but few exceptions, every member of it could stand the strictest scrutiny into his conduct; they therefore courted publicity, and when he said give us publicity, he was sure he expressed the sentiments of the whole service. It was composed of Englishmen, and like Englishmen they feel, like Englishmen they seek publicity and consider a Free Press as their best safeguard. Mr. Dampier concluded by returning thanks for himself and the Civil Service, and resumed his seat in the midst of deafening applause.

VICK CHAIR.—I give you, gentlemen, the health of the Trade Association. A more valuable body in its degree, I do not believe to exist in this place or country, or in any place or country. I believe that when their union commenced, there was a real necessity for it, I know that it was recommended to them by the then Chief Justice, Sir C. Grey, and I am sure that they united on the soundest and best considered principles of union, and if amongst those principles, there were motives of self-interest, it was a self-interest that was in complete agreement with the interests of every class of their customers, and of all society well considered. Besides that, gentlemen—beside the special purposes of their organization, they have always given the most thorough-going and cordial support to every measure of public benefit that has been originated in this city since their establishment. They who bear the grand burden, are the especial supporters of TRIAL BY JURY—they are the class from whom the law of England requires the performance of public duties, the exact and due performance, of which demands the exercise of the highest class of civic virtues—of duties which are ennobling and enable in their doing, all who are connected with their performance. It has been well recalled to your recollection by Mr. Clarke, that trial by jury is the Palladium of the Liberty of the Press, and I will go farther and say, that the honesty and public spirit of that portion of the middle class, from whom jurors are selected, and of which the tradesman form here by far the largest and most valuable body is the true Palladium of Trial by Jury. Gentlemen, I say it, and I repeat it to you here, that I think there is no class, be it what it may, in this city, that can compete with the class of tradesmen in the public spirited performance of burdensome and unobtrusive and gratuitous public duties. In this test of public spirit, they are second to none, and I think are above all, and the Trade Association is the essence and quintessence, so to speak, of its class. I give you, gentlemen, with pleasure, the health of the Trade Association, and I am sure you will drink it in the spirit in which I offer it.

Mr. REMFREY returned thanks for the Trade Association, as an officer of that institution. He would assure the gentlemen present, that the members of his community were always endeavouring to fulfil the duties enumerated by Mr. Dickens, and it was chiefly by them the duty of jurors were performed. He concluded by returning thanks for the Association.

Mr. G. PARSONS would propose a toast, which he observed had been allotted to Mr. Speir; but as that gentleman was absent he would act for him. His toast was the Agricultural and Horticultural Society, to which the community was indebted for such fine vegetables as were now to be had. Their Society was in communication with different parts of India, and engaged in developing the resources of the country. It formed, at the present moment, the nucleus of every information connected with the agriculture of the country. He would conclude by proposing the Agricultural and Horticultural Society and success to its efforts to ameliorate the products of India. Drank with the usual honors.

VICE CHAIR.—Gentlemen, I rise to propose to you the health of one who was invited to come amongst us to-day, and who, if he had come, would have been our most honored guest. The retirement which he seeks, and which I believe the state of his health renders necessary, and perhaps a natural reserve and timidity, a timidity, however, to which no man is more a stranger on all other public occasions, has prevented his acceptance of our invitation. You will not, however, do the less honour to the toast of the health of Alexander Ross. (Enthusiastic cheering long continued and renewed.) Gentlemen, we have just had the pleasure of drinking the health of the Civil Service, and the tribute we have paid has been responded to in a manner calculated to give the utmost pleasure to us all, who have heard the frank and manly way in which the gentlemen who replied to that toast has spoken out his sentiments. Amongst that Civil Service to which we have paid merited praise, one of the most honourable and distinguished men was Alexander Ross. By a laborious and distinguished life of forty years, spent in this country in that service, he acquired that knowledge which has rendered him one of the most pre-eminently useful, as well as bold and liberal public men that ever held rule in India. Here is a brilliant example of the virtues that flourish in that service. From the knowledge which his long experience gave him of the mischiefs which they inflicted on India, he did not hesitate, when others would have doubted of their power, to abolish the Infant Transit Duties, where he had the power, to do so, from a knowledge of the benefit would confer. He did not hesitate to concur in the abolition of all restrictions in the Freedom of the Press, and doubtless his long experience and extensive local knowledge was of eminent use in removing the fears of others respecting that wise and bold measure, both here and at home.

Gentlemen, I feel strongly on this subject, and on some occasions when I feel the most strongly, I feel too the most difficulty in expressing myself fully. I am proud to call Mr. Ross a friend. In later years, perhaps, and especially since he had held the highest seats of power, our intercourse has been less frequent and hardly such as to justify me in calling myself his friend; but still the recollections and the intercourse of former times, embolden me to use the name. In speaking of him then, as a friend, I feel and I own it, that I am not capable of fully doing justice to the conception I have formed of his public merits. Your recollections, gentlemen, will, however, supply my deficiencies. (Great cheering.) The value of his example and of his career to all public men in India and to India itself, I consider to be inestimable. As, when the sun sets in the horizon, he leaves light and radiance behind which long linger in the west after he has set giving promise of another morning as brilliant and as fair, so does the influence of the example of a statesman bold, upright, beneficent as Alexander Ross, endure long after the period of his retirement, and influencing the actions, and the maxims of his successors, tend to reproduce in their conduct and career, as occasions arise, the benefit of former days. Gentlemen, with sincerity and fervour, I propose to you, and I assure I am with enthusiasm you will drink, the health of Alexander Ross; and may the remainder of his days, passed in the retirement of private life, be as peaceful and happy as his public career has been honest, useful, laborious and energetic.

Dr. GRANT rose to propose the health of the Chairman. In his presence he could not enlarge upon his merits. The manner in which he had performed the duties of the chair, was known to all, and he would only add that in proposing his health, he proposed the health of an honest man and a scholar.—Mr. C. R. Prinsep, gentlemen, with all the honors. Drank with much hurrying.

Mr. PRINSEP returned thanks with a few suitable observations.

Mr. PARKER proposed the Calcutta Bar, in a short but eloquent speech.

Mr. LEITH.—As a humble member of that body on whom the honor has been conferred of being made the subject of the last toast, I rise to return thanks on behalf of my brethren and myself, to my friend Mr. Parker, for the handsome and flattering terms in which he proposed the toast, and to you, gentlemen, for the manner in which you responded to it. I speak my own sentiment, and in doing so I speak, I am sure, the sentiments of the whole bar, when I say that they value highly your good opinion, and more particularly as it has been, spontaneously, expressed in such kind and friendly terms by a most distinguished member of a most distinguished service, the civil service of India! Your approbation is a sufficient recompense for any little assistance which the bar may have been able to give in furthering our common interests, and in urging forward the measure, which we are this night met to celebrate. We have ever had in view, and I trust will ever keep in view, that it is for the benefit of the great body of the people that we ought to labour. Your approval will stimulate us to further exertions, not to obtain exclusive privileges, but to secure our common rights, and to obtain a participation in the enjoyment of those rights for all classes of the community.

Mr. PATRICK, with a few suitable remarks, proposed the health of Mr. Parker.

In returning thanks, Mr. Parker expressed his sentiments on the compliment paid to him, and observed, that he owed a heavy debt of gratitude to the Free Press, for having many years ago saved him from a broken neck (much laughter). You may laugh, gentlemen, observed the speaker, but you now laugh at what might have proved to me a very serious affair, if it had not been for the Press. Many years ago, when he was in the habit of driving about the town by day and sometimes by night, there used to be left a mighty bundle of bamboos, employed in public works by the McFarlen or Abercrombie of the period, and which encroached most abominably on the public road. The consequences were very serious to horse's knees and buggy shafts, and a neck or two might occasionally be endangered as was that of the speaker. A few writers and cadets might have been expended in this way to the advantage of all concerned, and no more made; but at length the bundle of bamboos began to break the horses' knees and the buggy shafts of grave and sober citizens. Many complaints were made of this nuisance, and murmurs were both loud and deep, but no notice was taken for some time. So! was it not a nuisance by authority; at length the patience of man and horse got tired out, and two or three letters appeared in the Calcutta Journal. Heavens, how magical was the effect. The mighty bundle of bamboos vanished like a morning fog, before ten lines of small print. In plain prose the abominable nuisance was instantly removed (cheers and laughter). This was one of the first practical results (a very little matter, no doubt, but worth much in the way of illustration), of an outspoken Press, and considering that this speaker had in all probability whole houses to be thankful, for inconsequence of its plain speaking it could not be wondered at that he felt bound to it by ties of gratitude in addition to those of principle. He had always advocated it as a measure suited to remove such great evils than a bundle of ill placed bamboos in this country and he always should.

Dwarkanauth Tagore.—I rise, gentlemen, to propose the health of a man who has spent his whole life in promoting the cause of education. I mean Mr. David Hare, who established a school in this city long before the Hindoo College came into existence. To him I, as a native, feel deeply indebted, for the zeal and assiduity with which he has laboured in the cause of education. Who, I ask, gentlemen, can go about like Mr. Hare, from house to house, enquiring after the pupils who absent themselves from his school—who can undergo the labour which he imposes upon himself in promoting the cause of native education? For these benevolent acts done to my countrymen, I consider myself so much indebted to him, that were I to leave this hall without drinking to his health, I would look upon myself as an ungrateful wretch. At one time Mr. Hare was a man of fortune, which he made by hard labour, but he is now (I do not intend to offend his feelings) in embarrassed circumstances, arising only from his liberality in the education of my countrymen. I think it incumbent upon the natives of this country to refund to Mr. Hare all the money he has expended upon them. What a pity it is that our countrymen, instead of following the example of truly good men, expend their substance upon the nautches of Doorga Pooja and such other absurd practices. For all the good Mr. Hare has done to this country, the only return which Government has made to him, is to give him the situation of the Secretary to the Medical College, which is scarcely worthy a tenth part of his services. I have much pleasure, gentlemen, in proposing the health of Mr. David Hare. Drank with enthusiasm.

Mr. Hare returned thanks, and with much diffidence and modesty observed, that all what he had done was more for his personal pleasure and amusement, than from any cause which deserved such high compliment.

At this Dr. Grant proposed his health a second time, which was also drank with much warmth.

Mr. L. Clarke proposed the health of Mr. Dickens. He adverted to that gentleman's career as a citizen and as a member of the Calcutta Bar, and took a retrospect of circumstances connected with his father, and his early life, which were alike honourable to him.

Mr. Dickens returned thanks.

UNION BANK CALCUTTA.

A meeting of the Proprietors of this Bank was held, pursuant to advertisement—Saturday, 15th December, 1838. T. Dickens, Esq., in the chair. The Chairman opened the proceedings.

Mr. Longueville Clarke stated, that as he had prepared the plan which the Directors now submitted to the proprietors for approval, it would be better that he should explain it to the present meeting. He believed it was well known, that he had taken a lively interest in opposing the institution of a third Joint Stock Bank in Calcutta, not only for the sake of the Bank to which he belonged, but also for the sake of the public, and of the proposed institution itself. It appeared to him that if the trade of Calcutta made it expedient to have an increase of Banking Capital, the shareholders of the Bengal and Union Banks, could readily furnish it from time to time, as it might be required; but to start an immense rival establishment, Dwarkanauth Tagore, with a few observations, proposed Mr. Dampier, who returned thanks in a very appropriate speech, again advertent to his faults, committed during the early part of his official career, and stated that he could not have committed those faults if there had at that time existed a Free Press in India.

Mr. Dias.—Mr. Chairman and gentlemen; may I crave your attention for a few minutes to remind you that among all the individual toasts proposed we have overlooked the memories of those who have departed from among us. After the oratory and eloquence that has been displayed by the speakers of the night, among whom may be rated some distinguished scholars, no field is left untrodden. I, who have never travelled beyond India's shore, shall claim from you the indulgence you so handsomely evinced towards my countryman Dwarkanauth Tagore. The occasion, and the glow which every heart must feel at the celebration of so essential, and of so great an advantage as the liberty of the Press, warms and forces the expression of my feelings a member of a community who is alive to the advantages to be derived from free discussion and the promulgation of the opinions of the world (applause.) One of the speakers alluded to an occasion on which a late celebrated member of the mercantile community distinguished himself in openly opposing the stamp act, the late Mr. John Palmer: with him was associated another individual, whose talented and valuable career was cut short by a premature death, the late Mr. Winter, the Barrister. The meeting on that occasion must be fresh in the minds of many. The two gentlemen to whom I have already alluded, were foremost in pointing out the objections to an impost which by far exceeds the fees, or expensiveness of either the Supreme or the Mofussil Courts. Among the struggles for the obtaining of the liberty and amelioration of the people of India that meeting ought to be considered as one, among other perhaps stronger causes, which have led to the happy result that we now celebrate. Therefore, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I shall beg of you to drink to the memories of Messrs. John Palmer, the prince of merchants and Mr. Winter, a distinguished member of the Calcutta Bar.

This toast was drank in solemn silence.

The Chairman proposed the health of Mr. T. E. M. Turton, which was drank with the usual honors.

About this time 12 o'clock, the greater part of the company had retired, whose example we followed, leaving a few collected near the Chairman, enjoying the pleasures of conversation.—Huskaru, Dec. 18.

with three millions of Capital, would not only destroy the fair profits of the existing institutions, but make Banking business so bad, as grievously to disappoint the new Projectors. The public would also be injured, for if the lending of money became a matter of rivalry, then there would be such a fatal facility of borrowing, that it would not only lead to over-trading, but foster the rash speculations, and produce these scenes of mercantile ruin, which both England and India had already witnessed. When, therefore, the Bank of India was proposed, and his friend Mr. Dickens circulated a requisition calling a Proprietary meeting, to adopt such measures as might be expedient, &c. (Mr. Clarke) recommended an immediate doubling of the Capital, by increasing it from 40 to 80 lacs of rupees. Mr. Dickens approved of the plan, and recalling that requisition, found another, and the shareholders adopted the proposal. The Bank of Bengal had followed their example, and the consequence was the Bank of India was heard of no more. So far his opposition was successful, but he was aware that the scheme which had failed in Calcutta, might be carried into effect in London, and when he reflected, that it appeared by Parliamentary returns, that in 1827, Joint Stock Companies were projected requiring capital to the extent of 372 millions of money, of which £17,500,000 was actually paid up, it did not appear difficult to him to get up a project of this nature. On considering the matter, it had occurred to him, that if facility were afforded to English Capitalists, to purchase shares in the existing Indian Banks, that those who felt desirous of speculating in Indian Banks, would prefer joining those already established, to starting rival institutions. It would also be a great convenience to Indian Shareholders returning home, as it would afford them ready means of converting their stock into money. His brother directors had unanimously agreed with him in these views but one serious obstacle was suggested. If shares were transferable in England fraudulent holders might at the same time transfer them, or pledge them, or else transfer and pledge them both in India and England to the loss of the bona fide purchaser, and mortgagee, and involving the Bank in difficulties. He, (Mr. Clarke) readily admitted the possibility of such an evil, he had therefore framed a plan, by which he believed it was completely obviated. Perhaps it might be thought the plan was intricate, but he (Mr. Clarke) felt confident that the working of it would be most simple. He had endeavoured to provide for every thing which could happen, and to leave nothing unprovided for, and the detail though long,—if carefully read over two or three times,—would shew, that the carrying out of the measure would be easy. With the 9th article he had nothing to do, he had left that to the mercantile Directors, the majority of whom had fixed on 1s. 11d. as the rate of exchange, there was however a difference of opinion on that, but there was no difference of opinion that the notice of the Proprietors should be particularly called to this article, and that the settlement of it should be left to them. The 10th article he (Mr. Clarke) thought defective, and instead of powers of Attorney to sign the directors' names to the certificates, he would propose the simpler plan of authorizing the London Agent to do it. Mr. Clarke then read the plan, article by article, commenting on each, as he proceeded, and pointing out the object it was intended to accomplish, and he concluded by stating that his first motion would be the first article, which was a simple declaration of the expediency of adopting the plan; if that were carried, he should then move the detail.

The motion was seconded by Dwarkanath Tagore and supported by Mr. Dickens, who addressed the meeting to the following effect.

GENTLEMEN,—I wish to make some observations on the Resolution moved by Mr. Clarke, to which I give my full support. The intent of that Resolution, however, is not to attract more money from England in order to increase the capital already employed in Banking operations in this city or India, but simply to give the married men in England an opportunity by becoming Proprietors of the Union Bank to participate in the higher rate of profit which banking in India (as well as all other commercial pursuits), at present yields to the capitalist. I say which banking at present yields, for I am by no means sure that the rate of dividend hitherto paid by Banks in India, can be expected long to continue with the extension which has already taken in banking capital. I wish to guard myself and such of you, gentlemen, as hear me, and share my opinion, from letting the supposition go forth to the world, that in our opinion more money is needed in Calcutta for the specific purpose of banking. I speak my own sentiments, and I believe I may venture to assume that I speak the sense of the majority of you here present, when I say that the contrary would seem to be the case. Since the last period when news from London respecting the Bank of India in England appeared to give us reason to suppose it might be established, an increase, present and prospective, (but the latter portion likely to be very speedily realized) of no less than 170 lacs or taking the rupee at two shillings, of £1,700,000 has taken place in the amount of capital employed in banking in British India. It was about July 1837 just previous to the last late panic that we had ground to suppose that the Bank of India with its 3 millions sterling capital might be established. The panic and distress in the money market in England put an end to the project apparently and since then, we have heard no more of it until rumour has recently announced a similar project under the title of the Bank of British Asia. About July, 1837, the capital of the Banks in India stood thus; the Bank of Bengal had 50 lacs, the Union Bank 32 lacs, the Agra Bank 10 lacs, in all 92, of paid up capital. Now we have the Bank of Bengal,* 112 lacs. I believe it is 112, but I throw out the fraction, the Union Bank 80 lacs, the Bank of Bombay 50 lacs, and the Agra Bank 20, in all 262 lacs. It is true, that the increase of the capital of the Bank of Bengal, and the whole capital of the Bank of Bombay are not yet actually paid up, but I believe I am quite correct in supposing that the moment a few necessary formalities are completed, the whole amount will be speedily forthcoming if indeed it be not already in great part subscribed. Our own increase of 40 lacs which was to have been paid in two years, by successive fourths, and by payment of one-fourth in each half year, if proprietors chose to take so much time has been so rapidly paid up that I understand nearly three-fourths, or about 68 lacs in all have been or will be added to our Capital in the first half year. Thus since the month of July, 1837, we have beheld £1,700,000 devoted in India to the increase of Banking business, and considerably above a million of the increase is in this city alone. Now, gentlemen, I am one of those who think we have been going quite fast enough and indeed I very much doubt taking both Banks together in one view, whether it will not be seen hereafter that we have been going on a little too fast for immediate profit, though I freely admit that I think with time, all this capital will find profitable employment. Let us look to the Bank of Bengal, with its large circulation and deposits taken together, it is believed, that some 60 lacs or so are now; or were quite recently, lying idle and unemployed. They are going to increase this mass by 50 lacs more, and it will not be easy to say what is to be done with the money. In fact, as it seems to me, the Bank of Bengal labours under a money-plethora, a sort of apoplexy, an "embarras des richesses" most hurtful to the health of dividends, which are the life of Proprietors. Their dividends are diminished and will I think be still more diminished, and so must ours be, at least I for one am quite prepared to expect it for a time. In the long run I have no doubt in both cases the money will be absorbed in safe, regular and steady channels of business, but not so speedily perhaps as the sanguine are disposed to think.

* With reference to the sum of 112 lacs, it having been subsequently mentioned to Mr. Dickens, that as the Government did not take up their share of the increase, the capital of the Bank of Bengal, would be less by 15 lacs. Mr. Dickens explained that the increase of banking capital in India since 1837 had been overrated by him at £1,700,000 but was still more than a million and a half sterling.

If I thought then, that the concluding words of Mr. Clarke's resolution which dwell on the importance of attracting English Capital to the Calcutta Market mean to imply, that we wanted more capital here for the Bank, (for one should object to them, but the words bear no such meaning; they mean simply that it is expedient to offer to monied men in London, an opportunity of becoming interested in the Union Bank by which its Proprietors who may transfer their stock will probably be benefitted as well as those who remain because the increased facility of transfer and negotiability of shares will have a tendency to raise premiums. I have thought it right, Gentlemen, in supporting Mr. Clarke's resolution to make these few observations to obviate misunderstanding of my views and those who think in the same way.

Mr. Clarke concurred in Mr. Dickens' observations, the motion was then put, as follows, and carried unanimously.

1. Resolved, that it is expedient to adopt a plan, for facilitating the purchase and sale in London of Union Bank Shares, thereby enabling the Proprietors resident in England to convert without delay their shares into money, and attracting British capital to the Calcutta money market.

After considerable discussion and several alterations, the following details of arrangements to give effect to the above resolution, were proposed by Mr. Clarke, seconded by Mr. Collier and carried unanimously.

2. That the shares in the Union Bank be henceforth divided into two classes to be denominated Indian shares and English shares, and that Indian shares be transferable to new Proprietors in Calcutta only, and English shares be transferable in London only, but that the Proprietors may at any time exchange an Indian for a corresponding English share, for a corresponding Indian share.

3. That a mercantile or Banking house in London be appointed Agents for the purpose of effecting the transfer of Union Bank shares in England, who shall be entitled to charge a fee to be paid by the purchaser for each transfer, the amount of the fee to be fixed by the Directors.

4. That a counterpart of the deed of copartnership be deposited with the London Agents, and that after the intending purchaser shall have been accepted by the London Agents, he shall sign the counterpart deed, and that no transfer of a share be complete, nor the old Proprietor released, until the deed be signed by the purchaser.

5. That at the time of executing the counterpart of the deed in London, the new Proprietor shall also sign in triplicate, a Power of Attorney, directed to the eight men or Directors of the Union Bank, empowering them jointly, or severally, to execute for him in the counterpart of the copartnership deed in Calcutta, and that duplicates of these powers be forwarded every three months by the London Agents to the Secretary in Calcutta, and that one of the Directors named, in the power, do accordingly execute the counterpart deed.

6. That a new form of certificate be prepared to be entitled Indian and English certificates, and that no share held under an Indian certificate be transferred to a new Proprietor in London, nor any share held under a London certificate be transferred to a new Proprietor in Calcutta; and that on all the Indian certificates the following notice be conspicuously printed in red ink.

"N. B. This share can only be transferred at the Union Bank in Calcutta," and on the English certificates the following notice be printed. "This share can only be transferred at Messrs. A. B. and Co.

street, London, the Agents of the Bank."

That Indian certificates shall be exchangeable for English certificates in Calcutta only, and not in London, and that English certificates be exchangeable for Indian certificates in London only and not in Calcutta.

8. That when a Proprietor shall be desirous of converting his Indian, into an English share he shall deliver his certificate, to the Secretary of the Bank by whom it shall be cancelled, and an English certificate shall be prepared corresponding in number, date and every other respect with the cancelled certificate, excepting, that it need not be signed by the same Directors, and that a similar course be observed by the Agents in London, on converting an English into an Indian share.

9. That the dividends in Indian shares be payable in Calcutta only, and that the dividends on English shares be payable at the London Agents only, and that the Remittances be made in Bank post Bills at three days' sight, at four per cent. per annum from date to time of payment, which Bills may be negotiated in Europe.

10. That the London Agents be authorized to sign the Certificates which may be granted on the transfers of shares in England, or on converting English into Indian shares.

11. That the London Agents transmit every two months a list of the transfer of shares, which may have been made during that period.

12. That printed copies of the copartnership deed be sent to the London Agents, and that every half year a complete list of the names of the Proprietors, and of the number of the shares held by each, be transmitted to the London Agents, and likewise copies of all resolutions passed at general meetings of the Proprietors, and that the above be always open to the inspection of any Proprietors in England.

13. That the Secretary's Report, and the Accounts published every half year in the Calcutta papers be likewise published in the Times and Morning Chronicle, and that a book containing copies of all the Reports, since the commencement of the Bank, be likewise forwarded to the London Agents for the inspection of Proprietors in England, and that all future Reports be entered in the same book.

Mr. Clarke then addressed the meeting respecting the appointment of a London Agent, as follows:—

Mr. Clarke stated, that he had now to call the attention of the meeting to a most important point, the selection of their London Agent. It was a point on which he felt great anxiety, for he was conscious how much the success of his plan depended on a proper selection, and he had not had any opportunity of consulting his brother Directors on the propriety of the proposition he was now about to submit,—and which was in fact altering a determination which he and his brother Directors had at their last meeting all coincided in. At that last meeting it had been proposed, that the Agency of the Union Bank, should be offered to the Firms of 'Coutts' or 'Clarks'. He Mr. Clarke knew very little of London Banks, or of Mercantile affairs, and he was always desirous of being guided by his brother Directors on these points,—in which practice and experience were so essential. But circumstances might occur, which involved general principles, and as circumstance of this nature had occurred, which had convinced him, that he had found a Bank far preferable to those which had been proposed. It was only two or three days ago and since the last meeting of the Directors, that he (Mr. Clarke) had accidentally met with a work, by Mr. James William Gilbart, entitled the history and principles of Banking. The book was a clear and excellent compilation, and in it was contained a full account of the London and Westminster Bank. Of this Bank, he had often heard, of its details he knew nothing, until he came across this work, and the account given of it proved it to be a most prosperous institution. It had commenced on the 10th of March, 1834, when 10,000 shares had been subscribed. At the end of the first year 17,713 were taken, at the end of the second 20,310 were taken, and at the end of the third 29,362. Thus in three years from the commencement, the number of shares taken up, had nearly tripled. The number of shares was limited to 50,000 at 100£ per share, as yet only 20£ had been called for, and the paid up capital in March 1837 amounted to 297,255£ or in round numbers sixty Lacks of Rupees, the paid up capital of the Union Bank was sixty Lacks, and it would shortly be eighty. The Westminster Bank had made their first dividend on December 1834, when they divided 2 per cent putting by a surplus profit of 1205£. the second year they divided 4 per cent, with a surplus profit of 4407£ the third year they divided 5 per cent putting by a surplus of 7027£. In consequence of having incurred an outlay of 19,509, the preliminary expenses of their establishment, they sold 9333 share at a premium of £1-10, which gave them a profit of £41,993, with this they paid off the debt of preliminary expenses, leaving a surplus of £20,003, which added to the surplus of the third year, formed a reserved fund of £27,050 independent of sixty Lacks of paid up capital. Such was a brief outline of the progress of the Westminster Bank from March, 1834, when it commenced, to March 1837, beyond which he had seen no report, and he felt justified in saying that it had proved itself to be a most prosperous institution and must have been most ably managed. He did not know the number of shareholders, but as there were 202, when 17,000 shares had been taken, he presumed there must be eight or nine hundred now, when there were nearly thirty thousand shares taken. There were sixteen Directors, Mr. Clarke here read their names.

The head office was in Throgmorton Street and they had five branches, in Waterloo Place, High Holborn, the Borough Whitechapel, and Mary-le-bone. Among the terms of business he found. "The Bank will act as Agents, to Joint Stock Banks, private country bankers, and other parties residing at a distance."

To him it appeared that this was precisely the sort of Institution which the Union Bank should select for their Agents, and from the similarity of the institutions, their views, and objects, much more cordial support, and accommodation might be expected, than perhaps would be the case in a private Bank, and thus at some future day might lead to other relations, and to mutually important and beneficial results.

It was a fortunate circumstance for the Union Bank, that his friend Mr. Thomas Holroyd, the present Chairman of the Directors was about to proceed to Europe, he had kindly undertaken to make the necessary arrangements, but as the intervening distance made it necessary that much should be left to his discretion, and as they could place implicit confidence in his discretion, he should propose vesting him with ample powers to act according to circumstances, and concluded with moving—

Proposed by Mr. Clarke, seconded by Mr. Cragg and unanimously resolved—

14. That Mr. Thomas Holroyd be requested and empowered to make arrangements with the London and Westminster Bank to act as our Agent, or in case of that not being practicable then with Messrs. Coutts or some other established Bank.—Carried unanimously.

After which the thanks of the proprietors were voted to the Chairman and the meeting broke up.—

MEETING OF CATHOLICS.

Last Friday, in pursuance of the requisition which appeared in the newspapers, a Meeting of the Roman Catholic non-entrants of Calcutta took place at the Town-Hall. The number of persons present was upwards of one hundred and fifty. The proceedings commenced at half past seven, by Mr. John Lickerstein being called to take the chair. Having read the requisition by which the meeting had been convened, he addressed them in the following words.

GENTLEMEN,—I feel proud of the honor of being called upon to preside on so interesting an occasion, although I feel that my own personal feelings tend to embarrass me not a little. But, gentlemen, when I see before me so large and respectable a body of what I must consider the friends and admirers of the most Rev. Dr. St. Leger, I cannot but feel assured that common sympathy, a universal feeling of sorrow, unites us on the present occasion. There is but one opinion of the talents, virtues and valuable qualities of the venerated Pastor whom we are about to lose. I will not detain you further, gentlemen; but will merely state, that I have seen the address which has been prepared, and am conscious that it contains the sentiments and expresses the feelings of all who have had the honor and the happiness of knowing that illustrious individual. Of him I will take the liberty of saying, that there is no man who carries with him a greater portion of the regret, the good wishes and the respect of the community of which he has been a distinguished ornament. To lose such a man, is indeed a trying calamity, aggravated as it is by the apprehension that the heavy loss we have sustained, cannot be easily supplied.

Mr. J. P. DeVine.—Gentlemen, I have had the advantage of reading before now, the address alluded to by the chairman and I feel convinced, that it contains all that need be said on such an occasion; and as I fully accord in all that is said in it, I am sure you also, when you have heard it, will agree with me in opinion. Therefore, gentlemen, without further preliminary remarks, I beg to move, "that the address alluded to by the chairman be read." The resolution was seconded by Mr. J. Leal, and carried unanimously.

The chairman then read the following address :

MOST REVEREND SIR,—We, the undersigned Catholic inhabitants of Calcutta, contemplating with deep regret your approaching departure for Europe, respectfully beg leave to convey to you the expression of our unfeigned sorrow at the great and public loss which the Catholic Mission of Bengal has experienced.

Had we been made aware even in the slightest degree of your intention to resign the important office which for more than four years you discharged with the most distinguished zeal, piety and talents, we should have implored you, with persevering earnestness, to recal the intended measure of your resignation, and to continue to impart to us the blessings of your spiritual government.

But that regret is unavailing, and all we have now left is to indulge in the melancholy pleasure of pouring forth the warm feelings of our hearts, actuated as it by one impulse to declare, that we owe you a very heavy debt of gratitude which it will scarcely be in our power ever to discharge.

When you came amongst us, we were a community torn by civil dissensions and engaged in rancorous warfare; the bitterness of party and the spirit of hatred were rapidly destroying all brotherly love and Christian charity. But how soon did the silent and irresistible influence of your personal character create a salutary change. You restored harmony, awakened religious zeal, and timely arrested the progress of an unholy strife. We are now proud in the consciousness of having advanced several degrees in the scale of social importance, and can we ungratefully forget the friendly hand which raised us?

It is also our pride to remember, that by the persuasive charm of your amiable qualities, the most important results were produced amongst our separated brethren in Calcutta. How frequently were we pained to observe the disorder that prevailed in our churches; how often had we suffered the humiliation at witnessing the indecorous behaviour of strangers, and what always added to the poignancy of our insulted feelings was, that the great mass of our own community gave an implied sanction to these outrages, by the impety and rudeness of their own conduct. It was a task reserved for you, our highly venerated pastor, to dispel the long gathered mists of prejudice, and to exhibit the splendour of truth in a clear and healthy atmosphere. Our separated brethren soon saw in you, the head of the Bengal Vicariate, a man who frequently, in his public capacity, explained the doctrines of his church with remarkable clearness and talent, and defended them with acerb reasoning yet in courteous and temperate language. They also saw you in private life associated with the most distinguished member of society, who, while they differed from you in opinion, were united in respect and regard for your personal character.

But what materially contributed to attract the respect of our separated brethren was the circumstance of your respected name and labors being intimately associated with several useful plans for promoting education. Soon after your arrival, was founded the Calcutta college of St. Francis Xavier, which you readily permitted to be opened under the sanction of your valued patronage. With equal readiness you consented to become the President of our Catholic Free School in Calcutta, warmly entering into all its details, suggesting and carrying into operation several material improvements, and generously adding to its pecuniary resources from a very limited income. In the same spirit of active benevolence, you forwarded the establishments of Free Schools in Chittagong, where no such provision existed for the children of a large Catholic population. These are measures not only important and salutary in themselves; but highly effectual in disarming the prejudices of those who were taught to believe that catholicism was inimical to the spread of knowledge.

But one of the happiest results of your ministry, is the plan of that stupendous work of education, La Martinière. It cannot be denied that it was the rare union of personal and intellectual worth which placed you in a position to achieve this great moral triumph. It should be indeed a subject of self-congratulation to you, respected Sir, that you have been the instrument under providence, to secure for the Catholics of India a great and well conducted seminary, where their children might deserve a splendid and liberal education with the free and unshackled exercise of the religion of their fathers. The experience of more than two years has proved the excellence of the plan, and you enjoy the consciousness of leaving this noble institution under the guardianship of a talented and influential body of men, who, though some of them were at first consciously opposed to your views, have one and all cordially co-operated with you in its admirable management.

When we take a review of what you have done for us in the brief period of your pastoral government; when we reflect how greatly your virtues have helped to adorn even the high station to which you were called; and when we weigh the unbiassed testimony in your favor of the great and the good of all persuasions, we can scarcely believe that we have deserved to possess you; and it is only in contemplating the dismal prospect of losing you, and in you, of those transcendent qualities that were so beneficially exercised for us, that we know the real magnitude of our loss, and feel how unprepared we are to sustain it.

We now respectfully beg leave to close this address, which feeble and imperfect as it is, convey the sincerity, though it cannot the fulness of our sorrow, at your approaching departure. In bidding you, our venerated and esteemed pastor, a long and we feel a last farewell, we most earnestly pray that Almighty power which protects the virtuous, will safely guide you on to the close of a long and honorable life, the best energies of which have been devoted to the Glory of God and the spiritual welfare of mankind.

With profound veneration, we beg leave to subscribe ourselves,

Most Revd, Sir, your faithful, humble and devoted servants.

MR. M. CECIL.—Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen. The address that has been just read to you does not inform you of any circumstances with which you are not already acquainted: it only recalls to your remembrance which you all know, and you must have perceived, that the manner in which those facts have been recorded, is such that none can have any objection to join in this address which is the last mark of the respect and esteem which for our late and venerated pastor. I therefore trust, gentlemen, that you will all join heart and soul in adopting this address, and I propose, "that the address just read be adopted." Before I resume my seat, I have to call your attention to one particular, Doctor St. Leger, you must know, is on the eve of his departure for Europe. Wednesday next will see him on board of the ship that is to carry him away from India, and this address ought and must be presented to him before that day: I would therefore further propose, that the address when adopted be signed immediately by all who are present, and that none who intend to sign it will leave the room without having subscribed his name to the document:

This resolution was seconded by Mr. F. Rodrigues.

MR. R. DIAS then addressed the meeting as follows—Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen, in rising to support the resolution that has just been seconded, I am sure I am doing only that which every one of this large assembly is prepared to do; but as an individual I cannot repress my feelings at the sudden and distressing departure of a friend the deservedly revered and beloved object of the Roman Catholic community of Bengal in Doctor St. Leger. I ask if there is one among you who can withhold declaring that as a friend he was sincere, as a gentleman honorable, as a prelate pious and exemplary, and as a man generally would it be presumption to say "we shall never see his like again" (much applause). Do we not know that his disposition was so blended with benevolence, that he met a lord as a lord, and a peasant as his equal—who can say to the contrary? Then let us enquire into the acts of that dig ilitary among us. Did he not at first behold in this community the deplorable picture of confusion, disorder and schism? and was not he the great artist whose skill alone softened down the harshness of the feelings that then existed? and did not he ultimately transform that picture into one of which we are now justly proud? This excellent man ever, we about to lose, and the present occasion to me is one of mourning and sorrow; but to find that there are so many who are sensible of the good we received and of the heavy loss we shall soon sustain, is a gratification and to Dr. St. Leger it will be satisfactory. — In the expression of my feelings on a late occasion, accusations have been made against me; but I shall avail myself hereafter of the same channel to refute the calumnies that have gone abroad. Yet, and I feel it deeply when I am obliged to say, this dignitary, to whom we are so deeply indebted, has been affronted by one; but of him I shall say nothing just now. You are all unanimous, the loss is generally and deeply lamented, and I believe I need hardly say that I hope you all accord in the sentiments which I have attempted so feebly to express. It might have escaped my lips offensive to any of you, let me beg it may be forgiven, and if I have said no more than you all feel, I shall feel that I have done my duty (loud and continued applause.)

The Chairman now put Mr. Crow's resolution to the vote, and it was carried nem. con.

Mr. DeVine:—Gentlemen, there are many to my knowledge anxious to sign this address; but they have been prevented by causes over which they have no control from attending this meeting, and I am sure there are many more similarly situated, of which I am not informed. Under these circumstances, I beg leave to propose "that the address, after it has been signed by the gentlemen present be placed until Tuesday morning, at the Parochial house attached to the church of N. S. DeRozario, for the purpose of receiving additional signatures.

This resolution was seconded by Mr. W. Lackeestein, and carried unanimously.

Mr. Dias:—Gentlemen, I have just been informed, that a few friends of Dr. St. Leger have caused a portrait of that Rev. gentleman to be taken; and further, that the subscribers to that portrait have resolved to ask the permission of the Rev. Vicar of the church of N. S. DeRozario to allow the portrait to be hung up in the drawing room of the suit of apartments at the Parochial house lately occupied by Dr. St. Leger. Now, gentlemen, admitting the full right of the subscribers to dispose of this portrait as they think proper, I do feel myself called upon to say, that, as Dr. St. Leger was a public character among us, and as I am sure the Catholic public will be proud to join in this tribute of respect to their late much respected pastor, it would be gratifying to our feelings to join in, and as it were confirm, their resolution. I therefore, gentlemen, beg leave to propose, that the Rev. Vicar Fré Antônia De Santa Maria be asked to allow the Portrait of Dr. St. Leger to be hung up in the drawing room of the suit of apartments at the Parochial house lately occupied by Dr. St. Leger.

This resolution was seconded by Mr. Crow, who stated that he was one of the subscribers to the Portrait, and that he felt much pleasure in seconding a resolution in which he had already joined at a meeting of the subscribers.

This resolution was also carried unanimously.

Proposed by Mr. J. Heberlet, seconded by Mr. M. Augier.

That the following gentlemen wait on Dr. St. Leger to present the address.

John Lackeestein, C. R. Lackeestein, W. R. Lackeestein, E. O'Brien, J. O'Brien, T. Gregory, M. Crow, P. Bonnard, P. J. DeVine, F. Rodrigues, J. Rodrigues, and J. Leal.

Proposed by Mr. Ed. O'Brien, seconded by Mr. A. Lackeestein.

That the names of Messrs. J. Heberlet, M. Augier, and R. Fune be added.

The signing of the address being nearly ended, Mr. Dias addressed the meeting, and complimenting the chairman on his opening speech and the successful conduct of the business of the evening, proposed to him a vote of thanks. Mr. Crow having seconded the proposition, it was carried by acclamation.

Mr. Lackeestein:—Gentlemen, I rise to return my thanks for the handsome compliment you have paid me. Allow me to assure you, gentlemen, that I feel proud for the manner in which you have been pleased to accept of my services on this occasion. I feel still more proud of the honor conferred on me in having been called to the chair on such an occasion, and prouder still that the business of the evening has been carried on in so orderly and harmonious a manner. The sympathies of all seem on this interesting occasion to have been awakened, and to unite us all in one common feeling of regret at the departure of our worthy and much esteemed pastor, and in the desire to pay him this last tribute of respect. The thought of this overpowers me, and I am unable to give expression to what I feel; I must therefore conclude by returning you my sincere thanks for the handsome manner you have complimented me; and I now dissolve this meeting.

The meeting broke up about half after eight: perfect order prevailed throughout, and every one left the room well satisfied with the proceedings of the evening; but regretting the loss they are likely to suffer by the departure of their much esteemed and highly respected Pastor, Doctor R. St. Leger — Hurkuru, Dec. 18.

THE PARENTAL ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.

This interesting occurrence took place last Friday, in the hall of the above Seminary, in the presence of upwards of three hundred ladies and gentlemen, chiefly East Indians. Among the visitors we observed Revd. Messrs. H. Fisher, H. S. Fisher, Campbell, Picance, McQueen, Boaz, (one of the committee of management of this institution,) the Rev. Dr. T. Olliffe, J. M. Brandon, (attached to the Catholic Church of N. S. DeRozario,) the Rev. Mr. Piffard, Dr. F. Corbyn, Mr. Graves and several other distinguished supporters of education.

The business of the day commenced at about half after ten A. M., when the two last classes, the 5th and the 6th, were called on the stage erected for the purpose. These classes were examined by the Rev. Mr. Boaz, the Secretary of the Institution, Mr. W. Hyrn, and Mr. Crow, assisted by the respective teachers of the classes, in reading, Spelling, English Grammar, Geography, Scripture, History and Arithmetic.

To these succeeded the 2d division of the 3d class and the 4th class, whose examination was conducted by the Rev. Messrs. Fishers, Picance, and Boaz and Dr. Corbyn. The boys were well sifted in Latin and English Grammar, Parsing, Geography and use of the Globes, Scripture History, questions in the Old and New Testaments, and one or two other branches, in all which they seemed to give satisfaction to the examiners.

The 1st division of the third class was examined by the Rev. Messrs. Hoar and Campbell, and Dr. Corbyn. The boys continued and passed from Adam's Select Latin Sentences. They were also tried in English Grammar and Parsing, H. Jones of Greece, Rome, and England, Geography and the use of the Globes, general questions on the Scriptures, Arithmetic, &c. and acquitted themselves well.

The examination of the 2d and the 1st classes occupied a very long time; they had much to do and were thoroughly satisfied in the various branches of their studies by Rev. Dr. F. Odell, the Rev. Messrs. Fishers, Peabody, Campbell, Dr. Corbyn, Messrs. Baughton, Crow, Dias and several others, as also by the Secretary and the teachers of the classes. The studies of the first class were Latin, consisting of Virgil, Horace, and a part of Sallust; Mathematics, consisting of Algebra, Geometry, Trigonometry and mensuration; and general questions in Natural Philosophy, Book Keeping, evidences of Christianity, Political and Moral Philosophy, History of India down to the present time and English Classics. The studies of the 2d class were nearly the same but on a lower scale, and they had no Political and Moral Philosophy nor English Classics.

Throughout the trials of the different classes, we were particularly attentive as to the manner in which the questions were out and answered, and had the satisfaction to find that the students appeared fully to understand the rationale of their various studies. We also asked the opinions of the Rev. Dr. Odell, and the Rev. Mr. Campbell; the former expressed himself very cordially satisfied and the latter, who had attended some examinations of this Seminary, stated, that he found very great improvement had been made, especially in the evidences of Christianity and Latin. We ourselves closely examined several sets of books of merchants' accounts that were on the table, and found the successive entries correctly made, and the books opened and closed in a very business like manner.

There were also several specimens of drawing exhibited, all of which displayed considerable taste and freedom in the execution. We were particularly struck by a landscape in water colors; it was an Indian Scene, drawn on very rough paper, the boldness of coloring, the boldness and the freedom of the touches, and above all the general effect were highly creditable to Master Randolph, by whom it was drawn. We had the curiosity to call two of the boys of the drawing class and giving them a pencil, we had them sketch a lot and some foliage as well as the outline of the Indian face, in both these their success was astonishing, partly due to Master Foister, whose foliage was drawn in a masterly style.

A number of Prize Essays were also on the table. We noticed the following, viz. on the Benefits of Literature, the study of Mathematics, Friendship, the Administration of Lord Cornwallis and a Historical Sketch of the Punie War. We had no opportunity of reading any, but we were told by some good judges, that several of them did great credit to their authors; and Mr. Montague, the head teacher of the institution, informed us, that these Essays had not been improved by the teachers. Recitations were introduced at proper intervals, with which the ladies and the children appeared to be highly delighted, some of them were well got up, considering the age of the performers.

Towards the close of the examination, Mr. Crow addressed the assembly and stated, that in consequence of the changes which the position of the East Indian body had within a few years undergone, and in consideration of the prospects which now opened before them of employment under Government of a higher order than those to which they were hitherto exclusively confined, the Committee of Management of which he was one had thought it advisable to make a corresponding change in the system of education adopted in the institution. He informed them, that in pursuance of this object, a sub-committee had been formed, who had closely and attentively looked into the system of education pursued at this Seminary, and had remodelled it; by which the studies of the Bengali and Hindoostani languages, which had hitherto been pursued as extra studies, and indeed much neglected, would be placed among the regular studies of the classes and the Geography of India, Land Surveying, and the study of the Laws of England and the Revenue and Judicial Regulations of the Local Government, would also be made objects of particular attention. These changes he said were intended to be brought into operation on the re-opening of the school. (Cheers.)

The Bengali class was then called up and examined by Messrs. Fenwick, Dias and Crow, assisted by the Principal of the Institution, in reading the New Testament.

After this Mr. W. Byrn, the Secretary, who is deservedly considered the Chief Pillar of this institution, addressed the boys of the first and second classes who were then before him, to the following effect:—It is now time that prizes should be distributed to some of you, which will be done by Mr. Montague, the Head Teacher of the institution; but I feel myself called upon to bring to your notice, that in themselves the prizes are nothing, and if they are given only to create a zeal for study. Many of you will go without prizes, although your exertions have been considerable, and deserve great merit. That is appreciated by me and all those concerned in your improvement. The receiving of the not receiving of a prize does not alter the case. Indeed I do not consider it at all obligatory on the institution to award prizes, and am very much disposed to question the expediency of the prevailing custom. If, therefore, any of you feel disappointed at going away without prizes, I trust the reflections I have made will soon put that feeling, especially when I inform you, that I have watched your progress with care, during the past year, I have strictly examined you this day, and I have been perfectly satisfied with the result of your labours. But what gives me and ours a to give you the greatest satisfaction, is the fact that several gentlemen of great talents and judgment, but unconnected with this institution, who have also examined you to day, accord with me in opinion on this subject. This is very flattering to me and to your teachers, who have laboured for your improvement and who cannot but feel gratified to see their exertions met by corresponding efforts on your part.

The prizes consisted of two gold and ten silver medals, which were ornamented on one side with a very pretty and appropriated device—a bee hive in a shrubbery and a band of bees at work extracting honey from the flowers, and teaching, by their example, the value of industry and its sweet results. The name of the institution surrounded the upper part of the medals, and on their obverse side two sprigs of laurel and palm encircled an empty space intended, we believe, for the name of the winner. Among these medals we were particularly struck by a beautiful silver star presented by M. J. Wood, with the Latin inscription engraved on a flowing ribbon—"Palmae qui meruit Ferat;" but by far the largest number of prizes consisted of books, the selection of which was very judicious; the sets were suited to the respective classes, and to the utilitarian spirit of the times. Mr. Montague, in delivering the prizes, accompanied some of them with suitable addresses, upon the character of each book and of the receiver, lauding his exertions and pointing out in very plain language the particulars in which we thought there was room for improvement. Mr. Glass also presented, on behalf of Mr. Wood, Rollin's ancient History to Master Westropp.

The boys conducted themselves throughout in the most orderly manner, and every part of the business was got through with a degree of regularity, which manifested the strict discipline observed at this great and national institution of the East Indians, which now imparts the blessings of education to upwards of 200 boys. The only painting that decorates the examination hall, is the portrait of Mr. Ricketts, the late Secretary of this institution, and the Agent of the East Indians to Parliament. We should be glad to see the opposite wall decorated by the Portrait of its present Secretary, Mr. Wale Byrn, whose long services to this institution are invaluable.—Hurkaru, Dec. 17.

THE ST. ANDREW'S DINNER.

The St. Andrew's Festival on Friday evening, the 30th November, was well attended, and went off with the usual eclat and merit of that anniversary. The President's chair was admirably filled by Mr. Leith and that of the Cupbearer by Mr. W. P. Grant. There were several very eloquent speeches made on the occasion, of the plurality of which the following is, we believe, a tolerably correct detail :-

After the two first toasts—"The Queen" and "The Pious Memory of St. Andrew," which were drunk, without, by the bye, any predatory remarks from the chair—"The Land of Cakes" was proposed in the following terms by Mr. Leith.—Gentlemen,—The next toast which I have the honor to propose, is also a national toast; but it is one which both custom and our own feelings will allow us to respond to with more warmth, and onward demonstration of enthusiasm, than the last. It is the LAND OF CAKES.

Gentleman,—It has been often noticed as a national characteristic, that Scotchmen are fond of migrating from their native land, and this love of travel and the unbounded limits of our wanderings, which do not always have for their object a richer country than our own, have given rise to the facetious saying, that if the North Pole had been discovered a Scotchman would have been found pitched upon its top. With this national characteristic, however, co-exists another as strongly developed, and which cannot be denied to us, inconsistent as it may appear—our love of country! (Cheers.) Far as we may wander, and distant though we may be, from our native land, the Land of Cakes, Scotchmen will ever draw together, and unite in the bonds of brotherhood, and Scotchmen will ever and again, in the moments stirred to the deepest emotion and holdest feelings, turn their faces towards Scotland, with as true a devotion as the Mahomedan to Mecca! (loud applause.) We are this night met to celebrate the anniversary of our Intelel Saut, and to indulge in those delightful feelings which well forth from our hearts in thinking of our native land, and of our domestic hearth. In this yearly festival, we come forth, as it were from the world of business, and from the busy scenes of enterprise and professional exertion, that we may gather up our thoughts, and mark at leisure, features that else had vanished like a dream, to compare up "a thousand thoughts that were old household thoughts." Which of you does not turn with fond affection to the spot where you drew your first breath, or heard your farwell sigh, to some spot sacred to the best affections that "nestle there?" Is there not some tier, or brook, some mountain of some forest, that is hallowed by recollections of your earliest, and no doubt happiest years? While all of us must recall, with pleasure and with pride, those scenes of nature's grandeur, and Scotland's heroism which are stamped "with a local soul of independence and stern liberty."

I have said Scotchmen are given to journeying into foreign lands; but it is to their honor, that we find in the earliest records of Continental Europe, that the alliance of our wandering countrymen was counted, that they were prized as the elite of armies, and that we now see in modern and more peaceful times, that our countrymen are honored as useful members of society in those places where they sojourn; and in their honor Scotland has received honor. May we act our parts as well, while exiles from our homes, and return worthy of our country, to spend the decline of life in our native land, the Land of Cakes! I give you, gentlemen, as the toast, THE LAND OF CAKES. Air—"Auld Lang Syne."

Mr. Leith.—It was a saying of one of the Ancients, upon being asked which of all his friends he esteemed the most, that "they and all die before such a question could be answered." Now, this saying may be applied with a little alteration to the consideration of the merits of our Governor, who although they need not die a national death, must become tu acti cibem, politically dead, before we can form a just estimate of their worth, or at least, before we can pronounce an eulogium upon them, without running the risk of being charged with flattery! This must be my excuse for notwithstanding on the merits of our present Governor General, the subject of our present toast. This much, however, I will say, that Lord Auckland has entitled himself to our respect and thanks, for the encouragement which he has given, during his short residence in India, to commerce and education, the two great means of promoting the prosperity and happiness of the country over which he has been called to rule. THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL, with all the honors! Air—"Over the hills and far away."

Mr. Leith.—I give you, without preface or comment, the men who have braved "the battle and the breeze." THE NAVY! Air—"Rule Britannia."

Captain W. Crockett returned thanks.

Mr. Leith.—The next toast is the ARMY. In drinking to this toast, let us recollect that it was by the army that we won, and that it is by the army that we hold British India, the brightest and most coveted, although seemingly, least appreciated jewel of the British crown. When it shall be said of Britain as is now said of Venice, "once did she hold the gorgeous East on her," the British Parliament, and our home rulers, may be taught her true value, and to appreciate her loss. But, as long as the moral power of our army and navy remains unimpaird, we need not fear such loss; and we may boldly say to our various enemies and open foes, whether Russian, Persian, Barmah, or Afghan,

"Come one, come all, the rock shall flee

From its firm base, as soon as we!"

Ar—"British Grenadiers."

Col. Melcod returned thank in a brief speech of much ability and humour.

Mr. W. P. Grant.—Gentlemen, I have to call you back to the time when the independence of Scotland was fought for and established by our two great heroes, WILLIAM WALLACE and ROBERT BRUCE. They fought for all that is dear to man, their homes and their country, and secured the independence of Scotland, and in so doing, with-took one of the greatest perhaps of England's Kings, King Edward. It is remarkable that this was effected within the period of, I believe, twenty years, for Wallace declared the independence of Scotland by the battle of Stirling, and Bruce established it by the battle of Bannockburn, I call you to drink, gentlemen, to the MEMORY OF WILLIAM WALLACE AND ROBERT BRUCE. Song by Mr. S. Thompson "Scots wha hae."

Mr. Leith.—The next toast which I have the honor to propose, is the health of THE PRINCE OF THE COURT OF INDIA, Colonel Morrison, who is in every respect estimable as a man, and an honor to our country. Air—"The Banks of Allan Water."

Mr. Leith.—You have have just drunk to the rising sun, I now give you the setting sun. It has been said, and truly said, "an honest man's the noblest work of God." Such is our countryman, the subject of my toast, ALAN ROSS, the late President of the Council of India. (great cheering, which lasted several minutes.) Gentlemen, I am glad to see that I have anticipated your wishes, and that your feelings and opinions correspond with mine, and that I judged rightly in supposing that I might take upon myself to introduce this toast, although not in the list of toasts put into my hands. I proposed this toast because I believed, and that belief is now strengthened by the manner in which you have received it, that Mr. Ross, in descending from his high office and returning to his native land, carries with him the esteem and regret of all classes of the community. Air—"A man's a man for a' that."

Mr. Leith.—The next toast is the health of a gentleman, who has honored us with his presence this evening as a guest. I have the honor to propose the health of THE GOVERNOR OF SERAMPORE. Air—"The Copenhagen Waltz."

The Governor of Serampore.—I return my thanks to the Sons of St. Andrew for the kind manner in which they have drunk my health, and for the hospitable reception which I have met with from them.

Mr. Leith.—I have already said that the habits of our countryman are erratic. I have now to propose the health of a wanderer from his native land at present a sojourner among us. But although he is a stranger in our Society, he nevertheless comes among us this evening not as a guest but as a Scotchman, let us then give him a Scotch welcome. I would introduce him, gentlemen, to your notice, not only as a countryman, but as a late distinguished member of the British Parliament, who, in that body, represented one of the greatest countries of that great country, England. I have the pleasure to propose the health of MR. POTTER McQUEEN, late member for Bedfordshire. Air—"Here and there and wandering Willie."

Mr. Potter McQueen.—Accept my warmest thanks for the kind manner in which my health has been proposed and drunk. I have no claim to this honor but my being a Scotchman. I have been a wanderer, and during my stay in Australia from whence I have just come, one of my greatest enjoyments was to meet my countrymen at each returning festival of our National Saint. These meetings are most praiseworthy, they keep alive the best feelings, and conduce not only to keep up our affection for our native land and for our countrymen, but for all mankind. These meetings are known to have been instrumental in forwarding the most charitable and praiseworthy objects. I beg leave to return you my most grateful thanks for the honor you have done me.

Dr. Grant.—I shall perhaps horrify some of you by declaring that I feel strongly tempted to abuse the Supreme Court. You, of course, expecting to give my exquisite reasons for such a proceeding. In the first place then, it would be in such good taste, seeing that several honorable individuals connected with the Supreme Court are present; secondly, it is so easy to abuse, if you once can bring your mind to condescend to it. It is, indeed, so easy, that I should thus have the elements of a ready made speech quite convenient. (Cheers). In the next place I see no reason why one person, however distinguished his abilities or high his rank, should have a monopoly of abusing the Supreme Court. (Cheers) He must not, I say, be allowed to have it all to himself. It is too good a thing. Abuse must be also exceedingly refreshing, judging from the alacrity and energy with which some betake themselves to it. Thus have I heard of yore while enjoying the poetical fragrance of "the flowers of Edinburgh," two of those interesting Nereids who rejoice in proclaiming the excellency of "Cauller herring," amuse themselves much to their now apparent delectation and edification of all who heard them. Such a step as I have alluded to, would also have the desirable effect of producing a sensation, and what is the chief object of most people but to cause a sensation? What are you all assembled for here this evening, but either to excite or share sensation? What is life itself, indeed, in the abstract, but the giving and the receiving of sensation? (Laughter) But my reason of reasons for abusing the Supreme Court is, that were it not for the tyranny of that court, I should be sitting quietly in my chair instead of making a spectacle of myself for the slow unmoving eye of one or two humbled sons of St. Andrew to gaze at. By pursuing such a course too, you might be pretty sure of getting an excellent speech from my friend Mr. Clarke, or some other son of Themis would no doubt get on his legs and make one in reply. I thus logically make out my case against the Court; were there no Supreme Court there would be no Calcutta bar, and there no Calcutta bar, there there would be no John Farley Leith to be one of its most rising and brightest ornaments, and to preside here this evening, issuing his command (which must be obeyed) that I should propose a toast. Having thus vented my spleen against our Chairman and the Supreme Court, I now approach with the seriousness becoming the subject of my toast, for I have as yet hesitated to do so from consciousness of my own inability to do it justice.

It is but right, gentlemen, that you should be aware I rise by command, otherwise might I be deemed amenable to a charge of presumption for volunteering a toast, that to be done justice to requires no ordinary qualifications in the speaker, as you will allow when I state that it is the memory of SIR WALTER SCOTT. Nevertheless, while I disclaim its being supposed that I am volunteering a speech on this occasion, I consider it a very great honor to have been called upon to propose the toast, for I am second to no one in feelings of the highest admiration, and I may even say reverence for the character of our illustrious countryman, SIR WALTER SCOTT. (Cheers)

To attempt upon such an occasion as this to give an elaborate summary of his genius and acquirement, would be out of place, even if it were not superfluous, fresh as no doubt your recollections must be of his memoirs by his gifted son-in-law, one of the ablest, most honest and manly works of biography that has (at least so it seems to me) ever issued from the press. (Loud Applause.)

The genius of Sir Walter Scott was no less remarkable for the vastness of its range, than for its versatility. He was a wonderful painter not only of external nature, in all her varieties of aspect and change, but of man from the palace to the cot, from the senate to the dungeon. In each and every department you find the same strong, yet delicate;—flowing but accurate, pencil. There was a time when England might twit us with her glorious Shakespeare; but, without abetting a jot of our high admiration for him, we can now boast also of the Shakespeare of Scotland. In tragedy or comedy Sir Walter Scott was like Shakespeare, equally at home. To illustrate this by instances, to my present audience, would be quite superfluous. But it was not the tragedy and comedy of courts and camps, or of the great ones of the earth, that his genius exclusively devoted itself to. In both departments his representations of middle and of humble life are equally felicitous, affecting and true. Two allusions will sufficiently demonstrate this—"the Bride of Lammermuir"—thoughtful, and the moving scene in the fisherman Mucklebacket's cottage. What a magnificence of natural pathos in both—and yet each how different!

His acquirements were as manifold, extraordinary and recondite, as his faculties were vigorous and brilliant. For this he had the aid of a most capacious and enviable memory. How enviable—they only can say who have been denied save in a very limited degree the same gift. In that vast store-house of knowledge, that immense emporium of lore, he could readily find, and in abundance, whatever he required;—the judicial process, the obscure historical incident, the remote tradition, the wild legend, and the ancient ballad. Any order on that intellectual Bank was cashed at sight and at the pleasure of the drawer in massive bullion or bushels of farthings!

Having thus slightly touched upon his talents and his acquirements, we are next to consider what use he made of them. It is here that, indeed, we may be proud of our great and good countryman. Without laying himself survive out for it—his works have ever a moral, and generally a just one. The violent man will there find reflected the fruits of violence. The profligate will there read in fearful characters, the lesson that profligacy sooner or later learns to its undoing, and the good will there be further encouraged to love goodness for its own sake.

It is impossible not to be struck in him with that abundance of the milk of human kindness that makes us love the man, and which ever gave a sweetness to the keen perceptions of genius and governed his sense of the humorous and the ridiculous. He delighted not like some authors in gloating malignantly over the frailties of poor human nature or feathering against it, the shafts of pitiless satire and scorn. The elements we so bloudily mixed up in him that he was slow to any of the irritations of authorship, and utterly above that miserable captiousness to the merits of others, or those unhappy jealousies which have also been too much the reproach of the literary character. It is but just however to observe, that this moderation was not the result merely of a constitutional placidity, but of a lofty principle and a conviction of the worse than uselessness of such angry controversies.

For all these, then, let us honour ourselves by testifying our respect for the memory of the mighty dead. I fear that I am getting tedious [cries of no, no.] We might have a selfish feeling lament that he did not live longer; but he who has led an active and an useful life, has lived long enough, a sentiment I think beautifully expressed by Seneca. Vitæ scias uti—longa est. Vivere bonum non est, sed bene vivere. Itaque non ut diu vivamus curandum est, sed bene. Longa est vita, si plena est. Quid hominem Juvant Octoginta anni per metitiam exacti? Sapienter et fortiter factis, metiamur enjresque vitam non tempore. Laudemus, et in numero felicitum, reponamus cum qui quantulumcunque temporis contigit, bene collocatum est. (Applause.)

Have we not reason, indeed, to be proud of being the fellow countrymen of such a man, who was not only possessed of such admirable qualities, but was a true Scotsman to boot, and one who loved Scot, and dearly? If great were his merits, commendate, for a time, was his triumph. No writer ever lived, that in his life time attained such a height of extensive popularity, such an eminence of prosperity and glory, as Sir W. Scott. The prosperity alas! was hollow and fleeting, and withered in his grasp, but sublime were his efforts not merely to endure but to master adversity. The glory, on the other hand, remains and will continue to flourish like the ever green pines of his native hills, and imperishable as the blue mountains of Scotland.

He has laid our country under a lasting debt of gratitude, for there is not a hill or a valley of Scotland that he has not rendered classic by the magic of his genius. But let me close this hasty sketch, and that gratefully, for the indulgence with which you have listened to me. Of all the tragedies associated with the name of our illustrious countryman, the most moving appears to me to be the close of that precious life. Behold him setting out a premature old man, in search of that health and strength, which he was destined never to enjoy again. Alas! we now find in himself, the personation of an affecting portrait he had drawn in an immortal tale of his youth.

"The way was long, the wind was cold,
The Minstrel was infirm and old.
His wither'd cheek, and tresses grey
Seem'd to have known a better day.
The Last of all the bards was he Who sung of Border Chivalry."

Behold now that mighty genius eclipsed, that glorious intellect obscured; he has only one ardent, earnest wish, and heaven granted it—this was to die in his dear Scotland. At length he remembers his beloved Abbotsford, the cloud rises, his intellectual powers may again recover their strength, his health may return, some ideas flit across his mind; he desires to commit them to paper, he is wheeled by his affectionate family into his study, he is set before that desk whence emanated so many splendid and immortal works; his favorite daughter places the pen in his hand. Alas! that right hand has lost its cunning, the fingers have no power to grasp the pen, it drops on the paper, he falls back among his pillows and weeps—bear him away to his chamber, for there is nothing left for him but to die!

"Mourn genius high and lore profound,
And wit that lov'd to play not wound,
And all the reasoning powers divine
To penetrate, resolve, combine;
And feelings keen and fancy's glow,
They sleep with him that sleeps below;
And if you mourn they could not save
From error him who fills this grave,
Be every harsher thought suppress'd
And sacred be his last long rest!"

I give you, to be drunk in solemn silence, THE MEMOIR OF SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Mr. Leith.—The next toast is SIR JOHN PETER GRANT and the Judges of the Supreme Court. My own professional position, and the presence of my respected friend who does me the honor to sit on my right, and whose name is prefixed to the toast I am about to give, prevents me saying all that might be said in giving this toast. This, I will, however, fearlessly say, because it is the simple and well known truth, that the judges of the Supreme Court are not merely administrators of the law, but uncompromising dispensers of justice. Air—"The Judges are met."

Sir John Peter Grant.—I rise to return thanks to you, gentlemen, on behalf of myself and my colleagues, for the manner in which you have responded to the toast which my honorable friend has proposed. I am commissioned by Sir Edward Ryan, the Chief Justice, to express to you his regret at not being present this evening; this he feels the more, as it is the first time he has been absent from a St. Andrew's dinner for a number of years. The cause of his absence is this. Sir Henry Seton has only just arrived in this country, and does not yet feel sufficiently at home or acclimated to venture to a public dinner. He was, on this account, compelled to decline your invitation, and as he is at present residing with Sir Edward Ryan, the latter could not leave him.

Mr. Leith.—Gentlemen—THE CIVIL SERVICE, with all the honors, Air—"Tollin Hame."

Sir John Peter Grant.—I believe on the last occasion, I proposed the toast which I am now about to give. I suppose it is the gravity of my age and situation that is thought to fit me in a particular degree for giving this toast. Gentlemen, to the subject of this toast our nation owes all that she is, and to it we are indebted for all that we are. It is the Kirk of Scotland, (cheers). Allusions have been made to the national character of Scotchmen; that character is owing to the religion which the nation professes, and which not only brought us into existence, but has formed our character. The Kirk is, therefore, entitled to our utmost respect and reverence. [We regret that we could not sufficiently catch the remainder of this able speech of Sir John Peter Grant, which was received with many plaudits. He concluded by saying aloud, "I now propose THE KIRK OF SCOTLAND. Air—" Ay ain kind dearie."

Mr. W. P. Grant.—Gentlemen, I ask your permission, not the Chairman's, to propose a toast. It is the health of my worthy friend our Chairman, who has aided so much in promoting the conviviality of this evening, and who has always been ready to aid and assist at these our national meetings, since he has been in Calcutta. I give his health as a true Hearted Scotchman. The health of our CHAIRMAN, Mr. Leith. Air—" There's Cauld Kailin Aberdeen!"

Mr. Leith.—I return my grateful thanks to my kind and worthy friend, for the manner in which he has been pleased to propose the last toast, and to you, gentlemen, for the manner in which you received it. I regret, gentlemen, for your sakes, that this chair is not better filled. I cannot but be sensible of my own deficiencies, when I compare myself with those who have filled this chair in bygone times. There was a Craigdarrock; many of you, gentlemen, must recollect his eloquence and fervor in presiding at these meetings; and then there was my worthy friend opposite, Dr. John Grant, whose ability as Chairman is fresh in all our recollections; and then, though last not least, in our estimation and regard, Sir John Peter Grant, who filled this chair not only to the satisfaction, but to the delight of as all (cheers). Gentlemen, I have made a mistake, and I apologize for it. I said that Sir John Grant filled this chair, I ought to have said that it was Rothimurcus (cheers). This name puts me in mind of a toast which I have often had the pleasure to propose from this chair; and which has been always responded to, as I am sure it will be on this occasion, with acclamation. It is the health of a Highland Laird, who, notwithstanding his elevated position in our society, considers, I will venture to say, his paternal title—Rothimurcus, his proudest title and best loved name.

Knowing that his happiness is bound up in the happiness of another who is about to leave us, I regret to say, to seek for health in her native country, I trust he will permit me to join that lady's name with his in this toast; it is the name of Lady Grant, who requires but to be known to be esteemed. Nay, gentlemen, were I required to describe what a wife and a gentle woman ought to be, I would point to Lady Grant. May she soon be restored to the enjoyment of perfect health, and may she and Rothimurcus be soon re-united,—if not in this country, in their native Land. Here's to the health of Rothimurcus and Lady Grant. Air—" Rothimurcus Rant."

Sir John Peter Grant.—I am overpowered by my feelings, gentlemen, and cannot thank you as I would. My happiness is indeed bound up in that of another, in whose praise I ought not to speak, but of whom I cannot speak without praise. You will excuse me, gentlemen, in expressing to you but a small part of that which I feel. I cannot trust myself to speak, but I shall only say that the name I most love is that of Rothimurcus, and that I hope while I remain in this country, I may have many occasions afforded me of telling you so, and of expressing to you my thanks, in a proper manner, which my feelings will not at present allow me to do, for your good wishes for myself and Lady Grant.

Mr. Leith.—There is something melancholy in drinking to the memory of one we love—our toast is THE MEMOIR OF BURNS, who although dead yet lives in his poetry, and in the hearts of his countrymen. It is with mingled feelings of pride and shame, that I propose this toast—pride in being the countryman of Burns, and shame that our country allowed him to sing his "native wood notes wild" amid chilling poverty, and in a situation which his noble soul and independent spirit spurned. His fate is not, however, a solitary instance of neglect, nor is our country the only one which has allowed worth and talent to remain amidst poverty and neglect. Portugal allowed her Camoens to die in a common hospital without a blanket to cover him, and Spain admired the inimitable Cervantes, but left him to draw out a miserable existence in constant dread of a prison. Gentlemen, I give you THE MEMOIR OF ROBERT BURNS, which we shall drink in solemn silence. Air—" Flowers of the Forest."

Mr. Leith.—The next toast is THE COMMERCIAL COMMUNITY OF CALCUTTA, a body most respected and useful, which fosters the industry of the people, develops the resources of the country, creates wealth, and contributes largely to the prosperity and happiness of India. Air—" Money in both pockets."

Mr. Spier returned thanks, commenting on the general commerce of the country, of its prosperity, prospects, &c.

Dr. Grant.—By my getting on my legs again, you will say that I am disproving my own assertion that I would prefer keeping my seat; but I have a toast to propose, which I cannot decline. It is the CALCUTTA BAR. I am proud to say that ever since I have been in this country, I have numbered many friends in that body, which for talents, integrity and independence, is not surpassed by the bar in any part of the world. The members of the bar are ever foremost to aid their fellow citizens, when seeking to secure, or seeking an extension of, their political privileges. The bar is, as it were, a break-water against the inroad of—but, gentlemen, I am afraid I am going rather far. Well; we will say, the bar is a break-water against the inroad of something, no matter what, which had better be kept out. The bar will stand the calumnies that have been launched at it by Mr. Macaulay, whose opinion and judgment are not much to be thought of. When in this very hall, sitting as chairman of the St. Andrew's dinner, he took occasion three several times to assert, in excellent taste you will admit, that he was not a Scotchman. How different is the conduct of a gentleman here this evening, born to higher rank, and more distinguished than Mr. Macaulay has ever been—Mr. Potter McQueen, who, although he was not born in Scotland himself, but whose father and ancestors were all Scotchmen, as Mr. Macaulay's were, boasts that he is a Scotchman, and has shewn in his speech that he has all the fervor and warmth of heart of a Scotchman. Gentlemen, I give you MR. CHARLES PRINSEP AND THE CALCUTTA BAR.—Air—" Up and war them a' willie."

Mr. Charles Prinsep.—Gentlemen, I rise to return thanks for the honor which you have done me, and the body to which I have the honor to belong; but I wonder that you could receive with such marks of approbation, a toast which has for its subject the Bar of the worst court on the face of the earth. (Great laughter and cheers.) Gentlemen; Dr. Grant has said, the Bar has been calumniated by Mr. Macaulay. It is not surprising, gentlemen, that the man, who could deny his country, should turn traitor to his own profession.

Mr. Clarke, rose and said that he would return thanks on his own behalf, for the honor which had been done the Bar of which he was proud to acknowledge himself a member. In concluding he begged leave to propose a toast—the LADIES OF SCOTLAND—no, he meant to say THE LASSIES OF SCOTLAND. Air—" Lassie wi' the tint white locks."

Mr. Leith.—I take shame to myself in not having earlier in the evening performed a duty, and a labour of love, by proposing the health of my friend the Croupier. I do so now, however, with much pleasure, not only as Croupier, the duties of which office he has so kindly and so ably discharged, not only as chairman on the last occasion in which we met in this Hall, but as the Master of Rothimurcus—the worthy son of a worthy sire, and as warm-hearted a Scotchman as I would wish to call a friend. The health of my worthy friend our Croupier with three times three. Air—" Willie brewed a peck o' malt."

Mr. W. P. Grant briefly returned thanks.

Mr. W. P. Grant.—Gentlemen, I have the pleasure to propose the health of my friend, Mr. Charles Prinsep and our English guests, who have honored us with their company this evening. We are men of different countries, but now are one people. Air.—“The Roast Beef of Old England.”

Mr. Charles Prinsep.—It is not the first time that I have experienced your hospitality, and have heard the expression of your good will towards my countrymen. I return you my grateful thanks for myself on behalf of my countrymen present. We are, as has been truly said, separate only in name from Scotchmen, we are one people with common rights and common interests, and I pray that England and Scotland may ever remain so, and be united with Ireland in opposing our common enemies.

Mr. Leith.—My friend Mr. Prinsep's speech is a fitting introduction to the toast which I have now to propose, it is our IRISH GUESTS who have honored us with their company. And I will take the precedent which my friend's speech affords, of offering up a prayer, that the union between Great Britain and Ireland may continue, and that Ireland may in that union enjoy equal privileges, and equal rights with England and Scotland, Air.—“St. Patrick's Day.”

Mr. L. CLARKE made some remarks upon what had been said regarding the Calcutta Bar, and proposed the prosperity of Scotland. He felt particular pleasure in adverting to the victories which that country had won over the English, to which nation he belonged. The wars between Scotland and England were but the infantile exercise of those nations, which at last prepared them for the conquest of distant regions. Had it not been for Scotland, we would, perhaps, have never been here. Her early victories, although won over the English, were followed by the establishment of the cause of liberty on a firm basis. Their disputes had vanished, and the two nations, were now united in one. He therefore felt great pleasure in proposing the prosperity of Scotland. Drank with all the honors.

Mr. S. THOMPSON sung the national song, Should auld acquaintance &c., during which the company rose up and holding each other by the hand, joined chorus. The scene was exceedingly pleasing and marked the friendly and brotherly feeling so characteristic of the sons of St. Andrew.

Mr. PATRICK proposed the health of Mr. Longueville Clarke, which was drank with much warmth. Mr. Clarke returned thanks in a very eloquent speech.

After this the Bowl of Punch was introduced, and several other songs sung by those who yet continued to prolong the festivities. We left the company about this time enjoying the pleasures of conversation and merriment.

The greatest harmony and order prevailed throughout, and every one appeared highly delighted and gratified with the festive pleasures of St. Andrew's day.

addressed to J. Crawford, Esq., London, and mentioned that a credit for £100 had been forwarded to him for the purposes of the Society.

It was proposed by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, and carried unanimously, that as Thomas Holroyd, Esq., a member of the Society is about to sail for England, and has expressed his willingness to assist in promoting the objects of the Society, a letter be addressed to him by the Secretary, requesting that on his arrival he will communicate with Mr. Crawford, the Society's agent, for the formation of a permanent London Committee for the management of the business of the Society in England.

Read a letter from Baboo Woomeschunder Roy, enclosing a petition of the zemindars, isardars and royots of the Zillah Nuddea, to the Deputy Governor of Bengal, for a remission of revenue on certain inundated lands.

Resolved.—That a letter be written to Baboo Woomeschunder Roy, informing him, that as it is a private matter it would be better that the petitioners should first address their prayers to the proper authorities, and if no relief is obtained, the Landholders' Society will then take the case into consideration.

Read the following communication which had been addressed to the several offices.

GENTLEMEN,—Subjoined is a copy of two Resolutions passed without dissent at the Meeting of Secretaries held on the 10th instant, to which we crave your attention. The reason which led parties to wish the arrangement contemplated by those resolutions, was supplied by the fact, that the occasional meetings of Secretaries to fix rules and regulations, have failed to introduce into the practice of Calcutta Insurance, that unity which is so desirable, and have led to no useful and abiding result. To remedy the inefficiency of such fugitive meetings, it was judged necessary to embody a permanent Committee, deputed by the Directors and selected from their own number, to carry their views into effect, with a harmony of purpose which is now so much wanted—the two primary objects being, to establish uniformity in practice, and to effect a more distinct and equitable classification of risks.

Having been appointed at the aforesaid Meeting to take the preliminary steps for the establishment of a General Committee, and to draw up rules for its guidance, we now beg leave to wait upon you with a brief sketch of the plan, that you may take the sense of your constituents on the merits of the proposition, and obtain their sanction for the formation of the Committee as projected.

You need not be told, that the circumstance of the extended number of Officers, without any recognised standard to regulate their procedure, and without the maintenance of any mutual understanding, has an unavoidable tendency to over-stimulate competition, which cannot but be injurious to the interests of the shareholders; for amid the struggle for business, not only is it to be apprehended, that the premia in general will be apt to decline below their proper level, but the protective limitations of the policy are too often relaxed, and in risks of very unequal value, there seldom obtains a sufficient discrimination of premium. To prevent such consequences, and to introduce and maintain a sound economy in general practice, is one important object which is sought to be attained by the construction of the General Committee; but, independently of this desideratum, it is believed that the institution of this regulating Committee will prove largely useful, as a body of delegates from all the directions, well qualified to adjust such differences as may occur between offices and parties, and to deliver opinions on any difficulties, touching which those offices may desire to have authoritative information. The advantages will probably be more appreciated by the shareholders at the present moment, when, almost all the offices having suffered more or less from the many recent heavy losses, they will naturally be inclined to provide for the future, if possible, the protection of a better system.

It is, perhaps, unnecessary to add, that the General Committee is not designed, in the remotest degree, to take cognizance of the concerns, or to interfere with the internal administration of the respective Offices. It is, from its composition, insusceptible of being an adverse or controlling power. Its labors and jurisdiction are to be confined rigidly to matters in which all have a common stake, and which may serve to guard the interests of the shareholders at large. In a word, it is merely meant to represent the interests, collectively, of the Committees, for general purposes, in a more simple and efficient form.

To give full effect to the projected measure, you will be sensible that it is highly desirable, if not indispensable, that all the offices engage to support it.

The measure is conventional—no penalty clause is inserted—but, should it meet now the approbation of the insurers, and continue to be entitled to their respect, we hope its provisions will be adhered to.

In conclusion, we have to express our desire, that you will take the earliest opportunity to communicate to us the issue of this reference, adding whatever suggestions your Committee may instruct you to convey. Whenever we have answers from the several offices, a meeting of Representatives from the offices will be invested, to take the subject into final consideration, and to mature the scheme, if the body of under-writers shall have determined on its expediency.

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient servants.

Extract from the proceedings of the meeting of Secretaries, on 10th November, 1838.

Resolved, that a Committee of 5 members of the present meeting, viz. N. Alexander, W. Carr, J. Cullen, W. F. Fergusson, and K. R. Mackenzie, be appointed, to draw up rules and take preliminary measures, to be submitted to the several Insurance Offices in Calcutta, for the permanent establishment of a General Committee of reference, (consisting if possible of one member from the direction of every office,) on insurance matters regulating premiums, classifying risks, &c. &c.

Resolved, that if the arrangement be agreed to, W. Limond be appointed Secretary to the General Committee, and the sum of sixteen rupees monthly be paid to him by each office, as remuneration for his services and provision for all expenses incident to the operations of the said Committee.

Report of the Committee appointed by the meeting of the Secretaries, to frame the necessary rules, and to take the preliminary measures for the permanent establishment of a General Committee of reference.

The proper object of this General Committee will be, to improve and regulate practice, and to establish an uniform system among the different offices; to discuss and determine points in which all have a common interest, but in no wise to interfere in the routine of the offices' internal management.

It will also constitute a body of superior reference, where offices and individuals differ, appealing to the authority of discordant principles.

And it will charge itself with the graduation of premia, and the classification of risks.

For the present, it appears unnecessary to lay down more than a few rules. Others can be added, as experience may recommend further provision to be made.

1. The Committee shall consist of one member from the direction of each office; and they shall elect their own Chairman, possessing the privilege of a casting vote.

2. Ordinary meetings shall be held once every month, and special meetings, as often as the dispatch of business may require them, notice thereof being duly circulated by the Secretary, under the authority of the Chairman of the Committee.

3. At meetings of the Committee, all questions shall be decided by a majority of the votes of those present, provided such majority do not fall short of 3; and in case the majority be less, the question shall lie over till next meeting.

4. A scale of premias shall be prepared to be revised as often as circumstances may demand its modifications ; as also a graduation in the rates of premium chargeable on different articles of produce.

5. A classification shall be formed of the vessels belonging to this port, or frequenting it, to be adjusted from time to time, as the information which may be obtained, shall render desirable.

6. All the offices joining in this arrangement, shall engage to recognize, and to act on the decisions of, the General Committee.

7. Records of the proceedings of the General Committee, shall be kept for the use of the offices, at all times when they have occasion to refer to them.

(Signed) NATHANIEL ALEXANDER.
" K. R. MACKENZIE.
" W. F. FAROUSSON.
" W. CARR.
" J. CULLEN.

Proposed by Mr. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. Cullen, and carried unanimously :—That this report be now adopted, subject to modifications ; and be recorded as the ground-work of our future proceedings.

It was then, after discussion, agreed to modify rules 4 and 6, which shall stand as follows :

4 A scale of premiums shall be prepared, to be revised as often as circumstances may demand its modification ; as also a graduation in the rates of premium chargeable on different articles : both to be recommended by this Committee to general adoption.

6. All the offices joining in this arrangement, shall engage to recognize and to act on the decisions of the General Committee, under a penalty bond for Co's Rs: 10,000.

Resolved, that the monthly meetings of the General Committee be held on the same days with those of the Chamber of Commerce, viz. the first Tuesday of every month.

It is distinctly understood, that where the Representatives appointed by any Committee, may be unable, or do not desire to attend, there of course exists the power of substitution.

Resolved, that in addition to the usual premium on voyages hence to Europe of 2½ per cent. for sea risk, and one per cent. for insuring against British capture, a further but conditional premium of 15 per cent. be required on French vessels, 'to be returned in the event of France being engaged in no hostilities with any European or American maritime power.

The several offices will be requested to furnish a copy of their policies, and a scale of rates of premium upon different articles of produce.

REGATA CLUB MEETING.

A meeting of the subscribers to the new Calcutta Regatta Club, was held at the Town Hall last evening, and very respectably attended. Capt. Macleod, of the Richmond, was called to the Chair. The Secretary then informed those present that the object for which this meeting had been convened, was the establishment of a regular and permanent Club in Calcutta, to be called the "Calcutta Regatta Club," which would conduce greatly to the improvement in the building of ships, boats in general in this port, and, by the races which would be made up by the Club, would prove a source of amusement and pleasure to all lovers of aquatic sports and the community of this presidency in general.

The following Resolutions were then put and unanimously carried :—

Resolved.—That the gentlemen now present do put their names down as permanent members of the Calcutta Regatta Club, and that subscription books be left at the offices of the daily newspapers in the city, that other persons may have an opportunity of subscribing for the same purpose.

Resolved.—That an annual subscription of sixteen rupees do constitute a member of this Club for residents ; and that commanders and officers of vessels will be considered members who subscribe ten rupees every time they visit the port.

Resolved.—That the following gentlemen do form a Committee of General Management, with power to add to their number from time to time, as exigencies may require :—

Capt. Balston.	Capt. Bourchier.
" McLeod.	" McKinnon.
" Richards.	Mr. Hall.

Resolved.—That the Committee do draw up a set of Rules and Regulations for the guidance of the Club : the entering and classing of boats : of appointing umpires, &c., &c., from whose decision there will be no appeal.

Resolved.—That the entrance money for boats entering, be one gold-mohur each ; and that the first race take place on the 1st January, 1839—the first class boats to start at 5 p. m. the others, as in last race, in rotation, a quarter of an hour, after each other.

Resolved.—That no boats be allowed to enter for the approaching Race, after Monday, the 31st instant at noon.

Resolved.—That all boats entered must be ranged off the Governor-General's Ghaut, for the purpose of being classed, on Monday afternoon, the 31st instant, at four o'clock.

It was then requested of those intending to enter any boats for the next Race, to hand in the names of the boat with their length and breadth—the following were accordingly entered, but many more are expected to be entered in the course of this day and to-morrow, and we anticipate not less than twenty or twenty-five boats will be entered to run, before the 1st.

It was subsequently determined, that the Race Course should be below the shipping off the Esplanade, so as to enable spectators to have a better view of the whole race than it was possible they could have had at the last, from the number of pinnaces, boats and shipping lying between the shore and the racers, and thus intercepting the view.

Thanks were voted to the Chair, and the meeting separated.

Fifteen persons, of those who were present, put down their names as annual subscribers to the new Regatta Club, which will enable the Secretaries, we should suppose, immediately to publish rules, &c., for the Club and consider it as established.—Cal. Cour. Dec. 27.

SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Calcutta Seamen's Friend Society, was held last night at the Union Chapel, when Mr. J. W. Alexander was called on to take the chair, an office which this gentleman merits on account of his liberality to the Society. We understood from the report, and from one of the speakers at the meeting, that the above gentleman has relieved the society from this present incumbances.

The Secretary, Mr. Boaz, whom we shall denominate the "Sailor's Friend," read a brief and interesting report of the year's proceedings. The Report stated that there was an evident improvement in the attendance of sailors at the Bethel. That two ministers were engaged in preaching at the Sailor's Floating Chapel, and sometimes on board of vessels in the harbour. It also stated that an agent was employed to visit the ships as soon as they dropped their anchor in port.

Mention was made of the new Bethel, which we understand is now neatly fitted, that it was out of debt, and that the public will now be called upon to meet the current expenses in carrying on this useful institution.

Mr. Bayne moved the first resolution, which was—That the report now read be approved and circulated by the committee. In his speech he referred to the condition of sailors, which rendered an institution of this nature absolutely necessary. He rejoiced to find that some attention was paid both to the temporal and to the spiritual wants of sailors, and encouraged the meeting to continued exertions, by declaring that inspired prophets had not thought sailors beneath their notice.

Mr. G. Alexander seconded the resolution in a few words. He felt satisfied that the Society was doing good from the circumstances of having himself witnessed more than sixty at one time in attendance at the Bethel.

Mr. J. Atkins, of the Sailors' Home, proposed the second resolution, which was:—That this Meeting desires to offer its devout thanks to God for the success which has attended the operations of the Calcutta Seamen's Friend Society, during the last year, and for the happy circumstances under which it commences the operations of a new year, and not less would they render the praise due to His name for the pleasing intelligence contained in the report, of the general prosperity of the cause of religion amongst seamen. This was one of the best speeches of the evening, and was listened to with interest. He said that nothing could be done without the blessing of God. The pious husbandman commits the seed to the ground in dependance on the blessing of God. Pious merchants in engaging in commerce would look for the blessing of God; and pious parents in sending their children for instruction would pray for the blessing of God. The Seamen's Friend Society looked for all their success to the same source. He stated the melancholy fact, that seamen, had occasioned enormous mischief by their immoralities—that they had done as much harm as Missionaries had done good. He very ably stated the necessity of such a Society as that for which he pleaded.

Mr. J. A. F. Hawkins, C. S., supported the resolution with a few judicious observations.

Mr. M. Hill, of Berhampore, moved the third resolution, which was:—This Meeting, in appointing the following gentlemen to be a Committee of Management for the coming year, with power to add to their number, would do so with earnest prayers that they may be guided and blessed in all their operations, by the evident presence and favour of the divine spirit:—Messrs. G. Alexander, J. W. Alexander, H. Woollaston, A. Grant, J. Muller, D. Clark, W. Balston, and J. M. Vo. Treasurer, Mr. G. Grant. Secretary, Revd. T. Boaz. Minute Secretary, Mr. H. Andrews.

Mr. Hill's speech was the longest, but it was lively and interesting—on meeting would flag while he speaks. He made some excellent remarks on the potency of prayer. Men of science and merchants were energetic, patient and preserving, but were destitute of this powerful weapon,—prayer. In order that the Society for the good of seamen should succeed, he recommended the apostolic plan of setting the Committee apart by prayer, that they might resemble that useful order of character called deacons. He then called on the Secretary to offer up a prayer on behalf of the Committee.

Mr. J. D. Ellis seconded the resolution, and spoke also of the sad condition of sailors in general, and for the truth of his observations referred to Williams', interesting narrative, which ought to be read by every one; it has been called the last chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. Mr. Ellis concluded by recommending the audience to cultivate personal piety in order to be useful to others.

Mr. J. Penny, the Seamen's Minister, proposed the fourth resolution, which was:—This Meeting relying upon the faithful promises of God to all men, but especially on those which have direct reference to seamen, would pray this Committee, and all similar Committees, not to relax in their efforts to preach a crucified Saviour, and the necessity of the teaching of the Holy spirit, in order to the conversion and sanctification of the heart, and with reference to the imperative necessity that seamen above all others should be observant of the providence of God, the meeting would pray the Committee to continue these efforts, which, under God, must issue in the conversion of the abundance of the Sea unto himself.—Mr. Penny explained this resolution by tating, that the meeting expressed their subjection to the command of God, a belief in his promises, and a dependance on the Holy Spirit; and also that the meeting expressed the wish that seamen might acknowledge providence of God, and that others might be stimulated to care for sailors. Mr. Penny proceeded to state, that we were under obligations to sailors, that they were the safeguard of the nation, the protectors of our liberty; that they enrich merchants, supply the community with comforts, and convey missionaries to different parts of the world. He stated that it was the duty of all Christians and of denominations, to unite in this work, and that the union of Christians is one of best methods to destroy prejudice. He concluded with an anecdote that spoke to the purpose.

Mr. Boaz seconded this resolution, and spoke of the progress of these societies; that Sailors who had no home but the sea have now a home in every port, and a chapel to which they can resort for instruction.

The news which the Secretary had just received from England, of the attention paid to sailors appeared to light up his countenance with joy and gladness.

The meeting was an interesting one. None of the speakers were long—all their speeches were well timed, and what we might say of proper length. The Secretary complained, that the meeting was not so well attended as he anticipated, although it was much better than in former years. Some perhaps were absent on account of the holidays, and had the meeting taken place at any other time, there might have been a full attendance.

We are glad to see that the society prospers, and we wish it all success.—Cal Court, Dec. 27.

DUM-DUM CATHOLICS' ADDRESS TO DR. ST. LEGER.

TO THE MOST REVEREND DOCTOR SAINT LEGER.

Late Vicar Apostolic of Bengal.

MOST REVEREND SIR,—With feelings of profound and sincere respect, we who form the Catholic community of Dum-Dum, unanimously lay before you, our venerable and beloved prelate, our heartfelt sentiments of gratitude and esteem on your departure from us, perhaps for ever.

In you, Most Reverend Sir, who, during the period of nearly five years residence with us, both by precept and example, sedulously and unceasingly inculcated the glorious doctrines of the Christian Faith; in you a wise and patient admonisher, the friend and the father, whose every thought was devoted to our spiritual welfare, whose holy zeal was directed to our spiritual wants, and whose mild and paternal instructions, were delivered with earnest and fervid eloquence.

Accept, then, Most Reverend Sir, this attempt to portray what language is inadequate to express, the ardent affection which is felt by that community, who have received your benign instructions; and the members of which will ever recur with feelings of heartfelt gratification, to those days when you were their guide in holiness and truth, nor can we omit this opportunity of testifying our sincere gratitude to your able and pious coadjutor in the sacred Ministry, our beloved, our highly esteemed, and our much respected Pastor, the Reverend John Saint Leger, for his zealous and unremitting attention to the duties of his sacred office, whose counsel and pious admonitions were always promptly bestowed on the afflicted in spirit, and who taught those laboring under bodily infirmities, to look forward with joyous hope to the glories of an eternal hereafter.

And, Most Reverend Sir, as heaven has so ordained that we must part, in all probability for ever, we beg you to be assured, that you bear with you, that which your exemplary conduct in the discharge of your sacred office so well merits, viz. our fervent and unanimous prayers for your welfare, both temporal and eternal. And be assured Most Reverend Sir, that so long as we remain in this transitory life, we shall never forget the consoling Gospel truths, which you have so emphatically and eloquently infused into our hearts.

In conclusion, Most Reverend Sir, we beg leave respectfully and sincerely to convey our best feelings of gratitude and esteem to our late worthy Pastor the Reverend John Saint Leger; and each and every one of us request, that you will kindly convey to him those sentiments; and may he whose zealous servant you are—the Almighty disposer of events, grant you and him a prosperous and happy voyage to your native land.

DR. ST. LEGER'S REPLY TO THE CATHOLICS OF DUM-DUM.

TO THE ROMAN CATHOLICS OF THE ARTILLERY AT DUM-DUM.

MY DEAR FRIENDS.—It would be a vain effort were I to attempt to portray the feelings with which I received and perused your truly affectionate parting address. It is needless, I hope, to assure you, that the congregation of Dum-Dum, has ever been a peculiarly dear and cherished portion of my flock, and that some of my sweetest consolations, were derived from the Christian piety and faithful observance of religious duties, which often with admiration I there witnessed, as distinguishing a considerable number. You have been good enough to thank me for my exertions in your regard. I am compelled to disclaim in a great degree, the thanks offered, as any services, and far more than it was in my power to do, were abundantly due to your fervor and piety.

For the no less kind mention of your late pastor, the Reverend Mr. St. Leger, except my warmest acknowledgments, to which he joins his own. I well knew the sentiments that ever animated him in your regard, and I can answer, a heart more devoted to the welfare of his flock,—a heart more filled with affectionate regard to the welfare of his flock,—a heart overflowing with more abundant zeal for the good of those committed to his charge, has seldom beat in the breast of a Pastor. I abstain from saying more, as your kindness has anticipated all I could say, and shews me that further declarations of his regard and mine for you, are totally unnecessary.

In conclusion, let me beg you to pour out your prayers before the Throne of Grace, and to beg the Father of Mercies to impart to us his heavenly benediction. Consoling ourselves with the hope that this parting request will be abundantly granted,

I remain, my dear friends, with the most affectionate wishes for your health and every happiness, in which your late pastor cordially unites,

Your truly devoted friend,

Calcutta, December, 18. ROBERT ST. LEGER, D. D.

THE HIGH SCHOOL.

(From a correspondent.)

I am just come from an examination of the pupils attached to the above Institution. Need I say that the result was satisfactory. The boys appeared quite at home, even when the most difficult questions were put to them to be solved. I remember having seen our Diocesan, aided by Archdeacon Dealtry, Rev. Fisher and Mr. Graves, the Rector of that school, preside and take a deep interest in the progress of the scholars. The 1st, 2d and 3d classes were examined before them in Latin, Mathematics and other Sciences. Reading, Parsing, Geography, &c. &c. with all of which the several classes seemed well acquainted. The 4th, 5th and sixth classes were examined in a separate room by Messrs. Sevestre, Clermont, Dunbar and others in Scripture History, Roman and English Histories, Geography, &c., and these acquitted themselves in a praiseworthy manner. On the whole, the High School may be finally reckoned one of the best Institutions now adays.

Towards the conclusion of the examination his Lordship, in his usual easy, gentle, and affectionate manner, addressed the audience on the happy state of the Institution, as regards the progress made from year to year by the boys who are instructed therein, and directing his attention to them, dilated eloquently on the excellency of Religion, the Fear of God, as being the foundation of all knowledge, and then exhorted his hearers to meekness and humility as an adorning to all acquirements.

The Archdeacon then stood up and remarked, that the School owed its birth to the late Bishop Corrie, who, if he were alive, would be transported at its present thriving condition, which he now doubtless looks down from Heaven on with satisfaction.

The Bishop was now about to retire, but Mr. James begged him to distribute the several prizes to the boys for whom they had been set apart. His Lordship according to the request, handed, first of all, two golden medals (the one given by Mr. Cameron, formerly of that School, and now a teacher in La Martiniere, and the other by Mr. Heatley, the Mathematical Teacher in the High School) to the best informed boys, and next some boys of the different classes. Here the ceremony ended. 2 p. m. Dec. 20, 1838.—Hurk. Dec. 21.

EXAMINATION OF THE PUPILS ATTACHED TO THE CATHOLIC FREE SCHOOL.

This institution was established by certain laymen, long before the arrival, in this country, of Dr. St. Leger and his English Clergy, and has worked its way steadily, though quietly, ever since. On the arrival of that Prelate, it was placed under his patronage; but its management continued in the hands of a Committee. It is divided into two departments, Male and Female. In the former there are now about 130 boys, who receive a plain English education free of charge. Some of the classes are advanced as far as Syntactical Parsing, Geography, the Double Rule of Three &c. In the latter there are about 100 girls, who, in addition to a plain English education are, taught needle work, some very creditable specimens of which we observed on the table. Christian Doctrine, according to the forms of the Catholic Church, is, of course, an object of primary consideration; but the principles on which the seminary is conducted, are liberal; for among the students we observed several natives whose religious notions, as well as of others, who profess a different creed, we are told, are never interfered with.

The last examination which took place on the 21st instant, was very poorly attended, which certainly does not speak well of the interest which the Catholics of Calcutta take in the only Free School they have. The Bishop of Isarapoli, i. e. the present Vicar Apostolic of Bengal, was present, and took a part in the examination, aided by the Rev. Dr. Oliffe; and at the close of it, distributed prizes, which consisted of 2 silver medals and several well selected books. Each child, as he received his prize, kissed the glittering amethyst on his Lordship's finger, and received benediction.—Hurkaru, December 24.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting was held in the Society's apartment, Town-Hall, on Wednesday, the 12th Dec., 1838. THE HON'BLE SIR E. RYAN, PRESIDENT, IN THE CHAIR. Present.—Messrs. W. Cracroft, D. Hare, G. A. Prinsep, Charles Haffnagle, and Dr. Spry; Messrs. R. J. Bagshaw, D. Bras, C. Trebeck, M. Staunton, R. S.

Strickland, A. Harris, D. W. Speed, A. Porteous, W. F. Dawson, A. Grant, T. H. Gardiner, R. Campbell, C. K. Robison, Dr. Wallich, and a few other members. The following gentlemen, proposed at the last meeting, were elected Members of the Society, viz. Dr. J. W. Helfer, Messrs John Lyall, Robt. Watt, Chas. Storr, T.

Bellairs, W. McDowall, A. Ryrce, John Cowie, Thos. Latter, J. P. Hermanson, James Cowell, S. Finch, DeCourcy, James Melliss, P. J. Sarkies and Captain William Allen.

The following gentlemen were proposed as Members :

J. Gulson French, Esq., (Dacca) proposed by Mr. C. K. Robinson, and seconded by Mr. W. Cracroft.

George Buckland, Esq., (Porundah, Purneah) proposed by Mr. C. K. Robinson, and second by Mr. A. Porteous.

J. Marques, Esq., (Mohungunge, Pubnah) proposed by Mr. C. K. Robinson, and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Joshua Aithanassa, Esq., (Meerut) proposed by Mr. H. Cope, and seconded by Mr. Robinson.

Gilson Row, Esq., (Chunarandee, Jessore) proposed by Mr. Thomas Brae, and seconded by Mr. George Austin.

Charles Dubonlieux, Esq., (Dowlutpore, Jessore) proposed by Mr. Thomas Brae, and seconded by Mr. George Austin.

The President addressed the meeting on the great loss, which the Society had sustained by the death of its Secretary; and after commencing on the exemplary zeal and ability so conspicuously displayed by the late Mr. Bell, in conducting the affairs of this Society, drew attention to a motion which he felt convinced both the Members now present, and the Society at large, would recognize as a tribute justly due to the Society, to the memory of one, who had so materially contributed to its prosperity.

The President accordingly proposed, seconded by Dr. Wallich, "that the Society receives with feelings of the deepest regret, the intelligence of the death of their late most able and indefatigable Secretary Mr. John Bell. That a period of nearly for years that he has filled the office of secretary to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, the zeal, intelligence and ability which he has displayed, have been the raising the society to its present state of prosperity and usefulness. The society in thus recording their opinion, can only express their anxious hope, it may be possible to procure a successor equally competent and zealous."

Carried unanimously.—The President having explained, that Messrs. Robinson and Wallich had, at his recommendation, undertaken to act conjointly as Secretaries to the society, until the anniversary election of office-bearers next month, gave notice of the following motion, seconded by C. Hufnagle, Esq.

"That the sum accruing in the hands of the Treasurer to the society, from the period of the death of our late lamented secretary to the appointment of a successor, be presented to the widow of the late Mr. John Bell, as a slight token of the deep sense which the society entertains of the indefatigable exertions of its late secretary, promote the interests and prosperity of the society."

Proposed by Mr. Wallich, and seconded by C. Hufnagle, Esq., that as a further mark of respect to the memory of our late lamented Secretary, all further business of this meeting, with the exception of some matters which require immediate attention, be deferred, and that this meeting be adjourned.

Carried unanimously.

The Acting Secretaries having suggested the expediency of a Committee being now appointed, to examine into the state of the Society's collections and finances, and report the result to the next meeting of the society; the President proposed the following gentlemen as the members of the Committee. Messrs. G. A. Prinsep, W. R. Ewart, and W. F. Gibbon; and they were chosen by the meeting.

Read a letter from the Secretary to Government in the General Department, dated 23rd November 1833, enclosing copies of a letter from the Honourable Court of Directors, dated 17th August, and of several communications to them from the Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society; the object of which is, to obtain and lay before the public at home, information as to the nature of the most ordinary productions of India and their prices, both in the interior and on the sea coasts; as well as of the other productions, of which the knowledge is not yet developed.

With the view of meeting the wishes of Government, to be favoured with the society's suggestions, as to the best mode of obtaining the information required by the Royal Asiatic Society, it was proposed by the President, seconded by W. Cracroft, Esq., that the following Members be requested to form themselves into a Committee, for the purpose of reporting to the society, what should be the proper steps to be adopted on this occasion viz.

Messrs. R. Walker, H. M. Parker, W. H. Ewart, G. A. Prinsep, W. P. Grant, and Dr. Spry.

Mr. G. A. Prinsep produced before the meeting a cactus plant, with the cochineal insect upon it in a live state, which he had recently received from England by the ship Duke of Bedford; and stated that it appeared from letters addressed to him by Dr. Royle and Mr. Wilson Sanders, that the insect had been procured at their solicitation, with the assistance of Mr. Anderson of Chelsea, from the Garden at Claremont, where it had been introduced from Mexico, and sent out under charge of Mr. Henry Barchand. It was ordered that the silver medal be presented to Mr Barchand, in conformity with the late resolution of the Society.

Messrs. R. Guise, C. Fuller and J. H. Palsgrave, proposed as members at the last meeting, were balloted for and duly elected.

The following gentlemen were proposed as new members.

J. Esdaile, Esq., M. D. Bengal Service, proposed by Mr. Egerton seconded by Dr. Gouliere.

G. Wallich, Esq., M. D., also of the Bengal Service, proposed by Dr. Wallich, Senior, seconded by Dr. O'Shaughnessy.

Letters were read.

From J. Mellis, Esq., M. D., Superintending Surgeon, Neemuch, stating his wish to re-enter the Society from which he had withdrawn, solely on account of pecuniary considerations.

From J. Stewart, Esq., M. D., 59th Regiment N. I., stating his wish to re-enter the Society. This gentleman, in his letter, called the attention of the Society to the poppy seed oil of the Upper Provinces, which he proposed to employ as substitute for olive oil in India. He mentioned, that he had repeatedly used it in salad, and found it better than the oil sent from Europe. It could be procured fresh and pure for about 4 annas a pint.

From P. F. H. Baddeley, Esq., Scindiahs contingent, stating, that he should have much pleasure in becoming a member of the Society.

The two last letters were in reply to the President's circular.

From the Medico Botanical Society of London, returning thanks for the 3d and 4th Nos. of the Quarterly Journal of the Medical Society.

From Thomas Smith, Esq., Madras Service, requesting to have his name withdrawn from the list of members.

The Secretary having requested the opinion of the Society, with regard to the period from which the new rate of subscription should commence, it was proposed by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Dr. Wallich, that old members pay the reduced subscription from the 1st of January next, and that new members commence from the date of their entering the Society.

The following communications were presented.

1. Dr. Goodeve read a letter from a non-professional friend in the neighbourhood of Rungpore, in which was related a curious instance of the mode in which epidemic cholera attacks its victims. A few days since, the gentleman alluded to, brought to his factory six coolies from a village about 12 miles distant, where cholera was raging furiously, his own immediate neighbourhood being perfectly free from the disease. Five days after the arrival, two of these men were attacked with cholera, and subsequently one more, but no other individual in the factory or near to it, suffered. The sick strangers were immediately dispatched to their homes at their own request, but no trace of the disease was left behind them. It would appear, that the cholera poison, whatever it may be, remained inactive for a week in the bodies of the sufferers, and then manifested itself with its customary violence, at the same time offering a strong proof of its non-contagious character, by extending no farther in that neighbourhood.

Dr. Duncan Stewart, presented a paper upon poisoning by mushrooms, founded upon some cases which had lately occurred to him. This communication was then read and discussed.

3. A case of pur ures hæmorrhagica by John Wood, Esq., M. D., of Rungpore, was next presented. This was subsequently read and discussed.

4. Two communications upon land-scurvy, were presented by the Secretary of the Medical Board; one paper upon this disease, as it appeared in the 14th Regt., N. I., by Hugh Guthrie, Esq., Surgeon to the corps the other an official report on this subject, by superintending Surgeon Pantam, President of the Committee assembled at Agra, to investigate the causes of this disease in the above mentioned regiment.

SUPREME COURT.

SITTINGS AFTER FOURTH TERM OF 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Selton.)

Equity Side.

RADHAKRISHN NITTER VERSUS THE BANK OF BENGAL AND OTHERS.

A report of the former argument in this case appeared in the Hurkaru of July 16th, and the subsequent judgement of the Court (Sir J. P. Grant dissentient) was reported in the Hurkaru of August 3rd. The case now came on for a rehearing before a full Bench of Judges.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Nott for the complainants. It will be necessary for us to go more fully into the statement and argument of this case than we should be otherwise disposed to do, as one of your Lordships was not present when it first came before the Court. This bill was filled to restrain the negotiation of certain bills of exchange of which the complainant was drawer, and the firm of Fergusson and Co, acceptors, and which were endorsed and delivered over, for valuable consideration to the defendants, the Bank of Bengal. Various transactions had taken place between the Bank, and the firm of Fergusson and Co., previous to the insolvency of the latter, and the discounted bills had been renewed from time to time for the accommodation of the firm. Suffice it to say, that at the period when the house became insolvent, five of the bills were outstanding, payable at three months from the date thereof respectively, and upon which the entire amount due was four lakhs of rupees. The first bore (renewed) date 7th September, 1833, the 2nd and 3rd, 28th September, and the 4th and 5th 7th October. The petition of insolvency was presented by Fergusson and Co. on the 26th November 1833, before any of the said bills became payable. It is scarcely necessary to state that the firm of Fergusson and Co. were the only parties for whose accommodation these instruments were drawn, and that the complainant had no beneficial interest in them whatsoever. In fact, there was an express understanding (admitted in the answers) between the firm of Fergusson and the complainant, that the complainant, as drawer, was to be considered a mere nominal party, and not to be held liable upon the bills; and although there was no evidence that the Bank were, actually parties to be understanding, yet there are circumstances from which a constructive knowledge might be inferred. Now comes the material part of the case. Other transactions of loan took place between the Bank and the house of Fergusson and Co., which loans were secured by the deposit of certain copper as a collateral security, and certain instruments of agreement in the nature of promissory notes were executed. The first of these transactions was of the date 2nd September, 1833, when 10,000 maunds of copper were deposited as a collateral security for the sum of Rs. 2,45,600 at three months;—the second of the 6th September, 1833, when 2,000 maunds were pledged for Rs. 73,700, and the third of the 28th of September, 1833, when 1,500 maunds were pledged for Rs. 35,400. Now, had this copper been pledged generally, the case would have fallen precisely within the principle of Young v. The Bank of Bengal; but the promissory notes or agreements of deposit, contained a clause which distinguished the present case from that decision, and which (as the learned Chief Justice suggested) was, probably inserted for the very purpose of meeting that decision. By this special clause, the copper was declared to be deposited, not only as a security for the specific loan, but also for the securing all sums already advanced or engaged to be advanced, or which at any time thereafter should be advanced; so that a general lien was expressly given to the Bank for all past and future advances, and the Bank was bound to apply the surplus value of the copper beyond the amount for which it was specifically pledged, to the liquidation of the bills, before they could come upon the complainant, who was a mere surety. But what did the Bank do? They permitted the assignees of the insolvent firm to redeem the copper, and it appears in evidence, that the copper was afterwards sold by the assignees at a profit of rupees. 72,000. There is another transaction relative to a Bank share, to which the attention of the Court must next be directed. This Share stood in the name of W. F. Fergusson, the principal partner of the firm, but it is proved in evidence to have been in fact the joint property of the whole firm, who could not appear of course as the registered holders. In the month of February 1834, although formal notice had been given on behalf of the complainant, to the Bank to retain the Share, it was surrendered to the assignees of the firm, who afterwards transferred it to the assignee of Mr. Fergusson's separate estate, for the benefit of which it was ultimately sold in December 1835, at rupees. 16,449. Now, by the 15th and 21st sections of the Bank Charter, all shares are liable for debts due from the shareholder to the Bank. The Bank, therefore, had a general lien upon this share, and ought to have applied it pro tanto to the liquidation of the amount due upon these bills.

It may be mentioned, that when this case was first brought before the Court, there were two other transactions, (relating to the deposit of indigo, and of certain Company's paper) relied upon by the complainant as discharging his liability; but as the opinion of the Court was unanimous against us on this part of our case, we shall abandon it.

There are scarcely any facts in dispute between the parties. The only material matter which is not admitted on both sides, is, whether the Bank had any actual or constructive knowledge of the circumstances under which the complainant became a party to these bills. Mr. W. F. Fergusson, the chief and managing partner of the firm of Fergusson and Co., was also one of the Directors of the Bank of Bengal; and we contend that the knowledge of Mr. Fergusson, as a Director of the Bank, must be taken to be knowledge on the part of the Bank itself, and that the Bank, thereof, constructively at all events, was cognizant of the understanding which subsisted between the complainant as accommodation-drawer, and the firm of Fergusson and Co. as acceptors of these bills. It may perhaps be contended on the other side, that the case of a partnership, is different from that of a corporate body, and that the knowledge of a director would not bind the Bank generally; but the two cases of Waithman v. Raikes, and Ex parte Carbis & Deacon and Chitty's Reports, are in favour of our position.

But independently of any question of actual or constructive knowledge on the part of the Bank, our main argument, in support of the discharge of the liability of the complainant as drawer of these bills, is founded upon the general principles of the law of principal and surety. It is an established rule, that if the creditor has acted in such a manner as to affect the claim of the surety against the principal debtor, the liability of the surety is discharged. The surety has a right to be placed in the very same situation as the original creditor, and if this equitable right is prejudiced by any act of the creditor, his claim against the surety cannot be enforced at law or in equity. Thus, if time be given by the creditor to the principal debtor (Craythorne v. Swinburne, 14 Vessey Junior, Ges v. Milnes, Glyn and Jameson), or if the security be lessened, (Law v. The East India Company, 4 Ves. Jun.) which is precisely the case here, the surety's liability is at an end. The acts of the Bank, in permitting the copper deposits to be redeemed by the assignees, instead of applying their surplus value to the liquidation of the bills in question, and in surrendering the Bank share, instead of selling it applying the proceeds in the same manner, have prejudiced the rights of the complainant as surety, and lessened his security against the principal debtors, the firm of Fergusson and Co., and have, therefore, pro tanto exonerated him from his liability.

Sir E. Ryan, at the close of this argument, intimated to the counsel for the Bank of Bengal, that it would be better to defer their argument until to-morrow, as it was already a late hour.

The Advocate-General assented.

JADUBCHUNDER SEAL AND ANOTHER v. COCKERELL AND CO.

Mr. Clarke requested leave to mention this case, which was a motion for an injunction to stay proceedings at law. The common law action stood for hearing for the present sittings, but he (Mr. Clarke) had been perfectly prepared on behalf of the complainants (the defendants at law) to support the injunction. The motion had stood over, solely at the request of his learned friends on the other side, who had not been prepared with their grounds. He hoped the Court would not now consider it necessary to call the motion on as to-morrow, (this-day,) was the last day of the sittings, and his learned friends could not possibly bring on their action at law before next term. There were two or three short Equity causes remaining on the board.

The Court were at first doubtful whether Monday, was not the last day of the Sittings, but upon a reference to the Almanack it was found, that the Sittings terminate next Sunday, and that, practically, therefore to-morrow, Saturday, (this-day,) is the last day.

The Advocate-General had no idea of being thrown over until next term in this manner.

Sir E. Ryan, Well, Mr. Advocate, we will not hear you until the Equity Board is cleared. But if it is a matter that requires an urgent hearing, there is no objection to its coming on, after the Sittings, in Chambers, I do not see how it can avail you much until next Term.—Hurkaru, December 1.

SATURDAY, DEC. 1.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Priester were heard this morning for the Bank of Bengal. The transactions relating to the deposit of indigo, which involved by far the largest amount, have been abandoned by the other side, and very properly so, as this part of the case fell precisely within the principle of Young v. The Bank of Bengal, and the complainant could only have succeeded by impugning the authority of that decision. A little examination, will shew that the principle of that case extends even to the copper transactions, notwithstanding the express clause contained in the deposit bonds, by which a general lien was expressly given to the Bank for all past and future advances. Let it be assumed, for argument's sake, that the immediate sale of the copper by the Bank would have produced an available surplus:—how is it attempted to be shown that this surplus was to be applied to the liquidation of the sums due upon these bills? Suppose the assignees had offered to pay the amount of the bills when they respectively fell due, and claimed their right thereupon to redeem the property deposited,—can it be contended that the Bank could have refused to allow the assignees to redeem, and could have sold the deposits to satisfy other claims? Clearly not; because the right to sell was only conditional on default being made in payment. If so, the same rule applies equally where the assignees have allowed the time to elapse, and have not claimed to redeem until, at a subsequent period, there are third parties interested, whose rights must not be lost sight of; these are the general creditors of the estate, whose rights cannot be made dependent on the acts of the assignees. It is clear, then, that upon the application of the assignees to redeem the property deposited upon repayment of the advances for which it was specifically pledged, the Bank would have had no right to retain, to the prejudice of the general creditors, and they would have had no defence to an action of trover.

The law of set off and mutual debts and credits, is not applicable to the present case. It is true that that law may apply even where claims are not due in presenti, but in futuro:—the future debt, however, must be a claim certain, and not a claim contingent. In this case it was contingent, because the firm might have come in and redeemed the deposit at any time, and the assignees might have redeemed at all events before the time had actually lapsed. Now, it is absurd to say, that the mere possibility of a surplus value being realized, and accruing in the hands of the pawnee, constitutes a debt due to the pawnor, which may be made the subject of set off.

But, again; there is nothing whatsoever on the face of the evidence, to shew that the immediate sale of the copper would have produced any available surplus at all, or that a profit would have necessarily accrued from its retention by the bank, with the view of selling it at some future period. It is certainly true that the assignees, by keeping the copper on speculation, did actually succeed in eventually obtaining a profit; but this was nothing more than a mercantile speculation which might have turned out either profitable or the reverse, according to circumstances. It is absurd to say that the bank were bound to turn copper-merchants for the benefit of a third party, and incur the risk of a trading speculation! There is nothing, then, to shew that the disposal of the copper at the current market rates, would have produced a profit, and it does not appear, therefore, that there was any available surplus applicable even to the partial liquidation of the outstanding bills.

We admit, without qualification, the principle of the law of principal and surety, so earnestly contended for on the other side, that any wilful act, on the part of the creditor by which the rights of the surety against the principal debtor, are prejudiced—such as the giving time, without consent, or diminishing the security to which he is entitled,—discharges the liability of the surety. But, for the reasons already urged, the principle is wholly inapplicable here, because there has been no act on the part of the Bank, of which the complainant, in his character as surety, can complain. It has been contended, that the formal notice given on behalf of the complainant, to retain the copper for his benefit, was binding on the Bank; but let it be considered under what circumstances this notice was given. The notice was, merely to hold the deposited property, without any payment made on the part of the surety of the debt due, or even an undertaking to discharge the debt. Even if the Bank had the power of holding on the deposited property, were they bound to do so upon such a notice as this? There can be no equity raised in favour of the surety until he has placed himself in the situation of the creditor, as against the principal debtor by offering or at least undertaking to liquidate the debt due.

It has been attempted to be shewn, that the Bank must be taken to have been cognizant of the whole transaction, on the ground that the chief partner of the firm, Mr. W. F. Fergusson, between whom and the complainant the arrangement regarding the liability on these bills subsisted, was at the same time one of the Directors of the Bank. There is a great distinction, however, between the partners of a private firm and the members of a corporate body. Bank of Scotland v. Watson, 1 Dow's Reports. Under the Bank Charter, it is expressly provided that the Directors must concur to bind the Bank by their acts. A director of a bank established under a corporation, cannot be considered to stand in a position at all analogous to that of a partner in a private firm. It would be productive of endless inconvenience and injustice if such a mere theoretical rule were to be admitted, and all the members of a corporation were to be constructively affected with knowledge of matters of which they were in fact utterly ignorant, and which, indeed, they had no means of knowing, merely because they happened to be within the cognizance of an individual member.

With respect to the Bank Share, it is to be observed, that the Charter only gives the Bank a lien upon the dividends of shares, and it does not appear that any dividends had been here received. In fact the Charter prohibits the Bank from making advances upon Shares, and it is difficult to see, therefore, how the Bank could claim a general lien upon them for debts due. But further, it has been decided that Shares must be taken to belong to parties in whose names they are registered, and the Bank were not necessarily aware of the fact that the Share standing in Mr. Fergusson's name, was partnership property, and could not therefore refuse to surrender it to the separate assignee.

Mr. Cochrane and Mr. Sandes, appeared for the assignees of Fergusson and Co., but were not heard against the complainant. They were admitted to be entitled to their costs.

Mr. Leith appeared on behalf of the Secretary of the Bank, Mr. G. Oduy. The Court had refused to hear him on the first argument of the case, as they considered that the Secretary had no right to argue the case for the Bank; but it now became necessary for him to mention the question of costs, as he understood that his right to costs was not acknowledged by his learned friend on the other side, although, to the best of his own recollection, the Court had expressly declared him entitled.

Sir E. Ryan. In my notes, I find that I expressed an opinion at the hearings, that the bill must be dismissed against you with costs; but afterwards, in giving judgment, I was of opinion (whether right or wrong) that you were not entitled to costs, because you ought to have demurred to the bill.

Mr. Leith urged, that a demurrer would not have head. The Secretary to the Bank was certainly not a party beneficially interested, but he was made a defendant for the purpose of discovery; now the Bank being a corporate body, could only answer under seal, and the complainant was entitled to make the officer of the Bank a defendant, for the purpose of obtaining an answer upon oath Cartwright v. Hately, 1 Ves. Junior, Wynch v. Neale, 3 Peer Williams, 310. A mere witness might in general demur to a bill, but not if he is a co-defendant with a corporation.

Mr. Clarke was heard in general reply..

Sir E. Ryan. The Court will pronounce judgment next Term.

Cur. adv. vult.

The remaining causes on the Equity Board were then disposed of, decrees being taken by consent. This was the last day of the sittings.—Huskaru, December 3.

(Before Sir E. Ryan in Chambers, 1st Dec. 1838.)

IN THE MATTER OF JANE BROWN.

Mr. Clarke, on behalf of Mrs. Moffat, made a return to the Habeas Corpus obtained by Mr. Cochrane, that gentleman having put in a second affidavit by Mrs. DeRozario, shewing that Mrs. Moffat was subject to the jurisdiction of Court. Mr. Clarke's return did not enter into any other point, but merely denied jurisdiction, on which Sir Edward Ryan was of opinion, that the Court could not issue an attachment, or enforce the suit.—Ibid.

The Criminal Sessions commence this day, and we are sorry to say, that in the numerical amount of criminal cases to be tried, the calendar is heavier than it has been for forty years last past. As respects the cases of what may strictly be called great crimes, the list is comparatively light; the great increase in point of number of offences, arises out of a cause that must speedily be amended, or both grand and petty jurymen, will ere long petition to be relieved from a burthen, which it will be impossible for them to support, without ruinous consequences to their individual affairs. We stated on Wednesday last, that the number of prisoners committed to be tried at the ensuing sessions, which will commence this day, was very great. There were, on the evening of the 3d instant, 118 persons confined in the great gaol for that purpose. They now amount to 121. We stated also, that for the last 45 years, there has not been so large a number of persons committed for trial at the Supreme Court, and never on such very trifling charges as those now imprisoned. Petty theft is the crime for which most of the prisoners for trial have been committed, and, in some cases, the value of the property stolen, is as small as six annas.

We have been told, but we do not vouch for the accuracy of the statement, that the cause of this enormous gaol delivery, originates in a wiggling, which the bench of sitting Magistrates received from the Board of Law Commissioners, touching the summary mode of trial and conviction in cases of felony, which, it is alleged, and which it would be futile to deny, the Magistrates have been in the practice of adopting. It appears, as we have said above, that a man is brought before the Magistrate, charged with stealing to the value of 6 annas; the Magistrate, who has perhaps twenty such cases brought before him in the course of the day, has been in the habit of taking into consideration the mischievous consequences of committing all these petty delinquents to take their trial at the sessions, and has assumed the power of summarily convicting and punishing in such cases. We have neither right nor inclination to determine, whether the Magistrate should have this power; we think he should not; and so, it appears, think the Law Commissioners. We have told the Magistrates, that they had not this power; and so have the Law Commissioners. We have pointed out a remedy, whilst we pointed out the mischief; and so have now the Law Commissioners, and the consequence is, that the Magistrates, who would not listen to us, have listened to the Law Commissioners; and the result is, that numerous cases of petty thefts, have been thrown upon the Supreme Court for trial at the present Sessions, and the gigantic machinery of this Court, with its grand and jury, is to be employed for weeks in determining the petty cases of theft, with which the calendar is overwhelmed. We have no doubt, the grand jury, before they separate, will bring this to the notice of the Court, formally; for, of course, the Court cannot help noticing a fact, which will affect them, as much as the juries—the extraordinary burthen imposed upon them at these Sessions. As a remedy for this mischief, we would suggest Courts of Quarter Sessions, with juries of five; and with regard to Courts of Quarter Sessions, to shew their utility and necessity, we cannot do better than republish the charge of the Chief Justice, on the occasion of the introduction of the new criminal act.

"I am fully aware that it has not of late years been usual to hold any Court of General or Quarter Sessions, except for the purposes of making assessments on the owners or occupiers of houses, according to the provisions of the 33d Geo. 3, 52. s. 153. I find, however, from the minute book of the Sessions, that Courts of this description have been held by the Governor-General and Members of Council; and that Grand Juries have been summoned and charged by the Chairman to enquire, though no persons appear to have been tried. I can have no doubt of the power of the Governor-General and Council to hold a Court of Quarter Sessions. The Charter of 1753, expressly empowers the Governor or President of Fort William and the Council, for the time being, or any three or more of them, to hold a Quarter Sessions of the Peace, four times in the year, and they are authorised to do all acts that Justices of the Peace in England may, under a Commission from the Crown. By section 36 of the Letters Patent of 1774, the power given to the Governor and Council under this clause, to act as Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer, was, and is, repealed; but their jurisdiction as a Court of Quarter Sessions is expressly recognized by the 21st section.

"The 38th sec. of the 13th Geo. 3, 63, also expressly enacts that the Governor-General and Council are to have authority to act as Justices of the Peace, and to do all matters and things which appertain to that office, and are empowered to hold Quarter Sessions within the settlement of Fort William four times in every year, and the same shall be at all times a Court of Record.

"I know that it has been considered a question of some doubt and difficulty, whether any of the statutes enable Justices of the Peace under Commissions from this Court, to hold a Court of Quarter Sessions, for any other purpose than those of making an assessment, but I will not now enter into the difficulties to which the various statutes relating to this subject give rise.

"I can only say that whatever may be the inconvenience (which I should have thought would have been present to those who assisted in the framing of this act) it will be absolutely necessary that a Court of General or Quarter Sessions should be held, in order that the directions of this statute may be complied with. This necessity is the more apparent from the provisions of the 48th and 49th sections.

"The 48th section provides that in all cases (not limited to paid conviction under this act) where the sum adjudged to be paid on any summary conviction shall exceed fifty sicca rupees; or the imprisonment adjudged shall exceed one calendar month; or conviction shall take place before one Justice only; any person who shall think himself aggrieved by any such conviction, may appeal to the next Court of General Quarter Sessions. The clause goes on to direct the notices, &c. which the party appealing shall give, and provides for his discharge, if in prison, under the conviction, on his giving sureties, to try the appeal. The Court at such Sessions is to hear and determine the matter of the appeal.

"The 49th section provides, that no such conviction or adjudication made on appeal therefrom shall be quashed for want of form ; or removed by certiorari, or otherwise, into any of His Majesty's Superior Courts of Record."

If the two sections to which I have just referred, are to be construed as applying only to convictions under this statute, there can be no doubt that a Court of Quarter Sessions should be regularly held, the necessity for which would be still more apparent if these sections are to be taken according to their literal meaning without reference to the other clause of the act which precede them, whichever may be considered the right construction to be put on these sections, it is clear that the charter under which we act, expressly recognizes the Court of Quarter Sessions as instituted under the proceedings by writs of mandamus, certiorari, &c. If therefore any party felt himself aggrieved by a summary conviction under this act, against which, owing to no Court of Quarter Sessions being held, he was unable (though entitled) to appeal, he would have a right to institute proceedings in this Court, to compel the Court of Quarter Sessions to assemble and hear, and determine his appeal.—Hurkuru, December 8.

4TH SESSIONS, DECEMBER 8, 1838.

(Present Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant, and Sir W. H. Seton.)

At a little after 11 o'clock, the Court assembled, attended by the Sheriff and his Deputy, and after the formal proclamations, the following gentlemen who compose the Grand Jury, answered to their names.

J. A. Dorin, Esq., Foreman.

J. Gilmore,	W. G. Frith,
W. Brightman,	J. C. Palmer,
N. Alexander,	J. Richards,
G. A. Prinsep,	Colin Campbell,
J. S. B. Scott,	E. Oakes,
G. Vint,	W. Storm,
J. S. Smith,	J. H. Aratoon,
D. M. Gordon,	B. H. Betts,
A. C. Bedel,	Burnsring Mullick,
H. Cowie,	Motololl Seal and
A. F. Smith,	Govindochund Sein, Esqs.

The Grand Jurors being sworn, His Lordship the Chief Justice, addressed them in an eloquent speech touching specially as to the great number of prisoners to be tried at the present Sessions, of which address we are sorry we can give but the outline.

His Lordship believed, that more than 120 persons were now confined in jail to take their trial, and regretted the number should be so enormous, arising owing to peculiar circumstances. The Magistrates for a long time past thought they could, and they did, dispose of minor cases before them under a certain Regulation of 1814, sanctioned and approved of, by the then Chief Justice, Sir E. H. East, which provided, that in those cases the Magistrates might proceed to conviction by fine or imprisonment on non-payment of fine. Doubts have subsequently arisen with the Law Commissioners, and the Magistrates have thought proper to send all these classes of cases for trial at the Sessions. Thus the number has been enhanced, whereas it would not have been so, if, as heretofore, the Magistrates would have disposed of them, and which would be just, and precisely in accordance to the opinion of Sir F. Roe, the Magistrate at Westminster, according to whom, pursuant to the report of 1837, of the Criminal Law Commissioners, it would appear that Sir F. Roe is not guided by any circumstances, character or features, other than the probable expences falling on the county in making commitment in such cases, instead of the Magistrate disposing of them, and the benefit and service arising in regard to time; which his Lordship added, might be applied as well to this metropolis, but until suggestions from higher authorities, at present this mode must be attended to. It rested with the legislature to remedy the evil. His Lordship then went on to comment at length on the report of 1837, of the Criminal Law Commissioners, and the above alluded to dictum of Sir F. Roe, the Magistrate at Westminster, or rather which appeared to have been in reply to certain questions arising on the report of the Criminal Law Commissioners of 1837, and his Lordship adverted to the local Police Act and the Vagrant and Juvenile Criminal Laws at Home; and that by the latter, Juvenile offenders, under the age of from 8, 10, to 12 years, should not be committed for trial, and those of 16 years of age for larceny, not exceeding the value of 10 shillings, could be tried and convicted by two Justices of the Peace, and if they thought fit, sentenced for six months' imprisonment in jail.

His Lordship continued, that in certain cases, this summary mode of proceeding might be questionable, but if not, this summary jurisdiction to the Magistrates, some other mode, or tribunal, should be substituted—the revival of the Court of Quarter Sessions; by which later, on the other hand, the want of benefit or jurors witnesses and the public, and the encroachment on the time of all, (except the judges) would be precisely the same; but the question as to the mode of modifying the evil rested with the Government, and as regarded the French, his Lordship added, with the concurrence of the others of them, that they would feel the least by a subdivision of their time, although they might be better employed, and would gladly and cheerfully do so; but yet his Lordship could not refrain from repeating, that the evil complained of, was great; for, amongst the present cases, as the gentlemen of the Grand Jury would observe, better than half of them consist of simple petty larcenies.

The witnesses in which cases, attended at first from day to day at the Police, will now have to attend before them, the Grand Jurors, and, next on the Petty Jury, men; and the number of the witnesses in the present instance, comprise no less than 370, all from amongst the poorer classes of people, and in all probability, people who depend on their daily labour, for the daily subsistence of themselves and family;—and another glaring evil existed, this Court sitting promiscuously, a long intervention of time necessarily elapses, so that persons committed for petty offences, might in the interval of their trial, suffer longer imprisonment than they should, or at any rate, a difficulty will naturally arise as to a proportionate punishment, considering the imprisonment they suffer anterior to their trial.

His Lordship then pointed out cases in the present calendar, and noticed, that happily, one only was for murder, that of one D'Cruz, for the murder of Caroline Isaac, and if the gentlemen of the Jury believed the propositions. His Lordship regretted, that they have not the option but to return a true bill for wilful murder. The prisoner, it would appear, was anxious that the deceased would have yielded herself to him that, which she repeatedly and peremptorily refused, and the unfortunate women, in the absence of her mother, was murdered, under circumstances which left no doubt of the crime, as will appear. If, however, the gentlemen of the Jury should see any necessity for consulting the Court, they were of course at liberty to do so.

His Lordship next dwelt on the case of one Chunga, for child-stealing, which appeared to be not a common case, this being the first of the kind in this country that His Lordship remembered. His Lordship pointed out the law in such cases, and the punishment to be Transportation, and that it would appear by the evidence, that the child was at school with the prisoners, and so continued up to the 25th of August last, when, as usual, the boy, 8 years old, returned at about 10 or 11 o'clock, and was seen until about 1 o'clock of the same day. The boy had gold jewels about his person of the value of 150 rupees, and formerly it had been known that children having on jewels were for the sake of them murdered, and in this case strong suspicion existed of the murder of the child by the prisoner, with whom the child has been traced to have been, up to the last that the child had been seen. Yet his Lordship said, that the inflictment could not be returned for the crime of homicide, the general maxim and principle of law being to the contrary, according to that celebrated authority. Lord Hale; unless the body of the deceased be found, or the actual commission of the crime be proved,—except in some cases, and amongst which, this present case did not come in. These were in cases of murder on the High Seas, and the bodies being thrown over board.

His Lordship next adverted to some cases for burglary and larceny, and to three cases for cutting with intent to commit murder, observing, that in these latter cases, three females have been most cruelly stabbed, and this class of crime, seems of late to be much on the increase. As to the law, however, in these cases, his Lordship felt satisfied there could be no doubt, or necessity to explain; but if the gentlemen of the Grand Jury desired, in any case, or point, to consult the Court, the Court would be ready and glad to attend to them; and His Lordship concluded by alluding to the case of one S. D'Silva and J. Gomes, charged for violence under evidence, and confirming evidence. The Jurors then left the Court and Sir J. P. Gait left the Bench. The Jury soon after returned with a true Bill against Khoda Bux for larceny.

The following Petty Jurymen, were called, who answered to their names:

Mr. C. P. Sealy,	Mr. J. Ridley,
" M Crow,	" F. Allier,
" J. P. Devine,	" H. Griffin,
" J. Talber,	" J. G. Parker,
" W. E. Jenkins,	" S. Jones and
" J. B. Vendenberg,	" T. Allardice,

Mr. J. B. Vendenberg, one of the Petty Jurymen, objected to serve on Jury, being under age. The Court informed him that if this mode of objections were allowed, it would be difficult to select a set of Jurors, and that Mr. Vendenberg ought to have taken the objection through the regular channel, according to advertisement in the newspapers for that purpose, viz. in the month of May, every year, these points are disposed of, and the names of disqualified or exempted Jurors, removed from the Jury list. Mr. Vendenberg pleaded that he was ignorant of this rule. The Court replied, "every body is bound to know it," and ordered Mr. Vanlenberg to take his seat—which he did.

The Jailor informed the Court, that the prisoner Khoda Bux, against whom a true Bill had just been returned, was at the Hospital, and therefore could not be brought up for trial. The Court intimated to the Petty Jurymen, that two sets of them, and not the rest, would be required to attend, one set to relieve the other and that from Monday the Court would sit every day at 10 A. M. and this arrangement being entered into, as to the Petty Jurymen, the rest of them would be discharged, and every day at about 1 o'clock P. M. or so soon about that time, as a then pending trial would admit; one of the two sets of the Petty Jurymen, would be relieved for the day but every morning at 10 both the sets must be in attendance or, considering the state of the Calendar, the Court would be obliged to impose and enforce heavy fines.

The Grand Jurors, in the course of the day, returned the following indictments as true, against Gopaul, Petumbar Ghose, Sebo, Sisidhur, Mohun, Sobaratty, Gour Doss, Sebochaund, Govindoo, Casserrun and Ramchund Dutt, all for larceny, and against Ussurrun and Kisto Doss, for burglary, against Manick, for shop-breaking, and the bill against Satty Hurry, for larceny, they returned as untrue.

The prisoner Gopaul was put on his trial for stealing a dotee, value 12 annas, one Company's rupee and 32 pice, the property of Taraneychurn Bhuttachargee, who appeared, and 2 other witnesses were examined, one a Police chowkeydar. The charge was proved and the Judge addressed the Jury formally, who returned a verdict of guilty. Sentenced to one month's hard labor in the House of Correction, considering the imprisonment from date of commitment.

Beebo was next put on his trial, for stealing from the house of Mrs. M. Sinaas. 1 lotta, value 1 rupee, 1 dhoote value 8 annas, the property of Lalchand beaser. The prisoner said he was drunk at the time and could say nothing of the matter. The Court recorded a plea of not guilty for him. The beaser and 2 other witnesses proved the case. Verdict guilty. Sentence 1 month's hard labor in the House of Correction.

Sistedhur, was also tried, charged for stealing a dhoote, valued at 1 rupee, and 9 annas and a half of pice, the property of Junggul. The case being proved, the prisoner was found guilty, and sentenced to 1 month's hard labor in the House of Correction.

Kistno Doss was also tried for burglary, in entering the dwelling house of one Sreemutty, and stealing rice, value 9 annas, turmeric 2 annas, dhoote and chudder, 6 and 10 annas. The prisoner pleaded not guilty. From the evidence before the Jury, they returned a verdict of guilty. Sentence 5 years' transportation.

Petumber Ghose, was tried for stealing a lota of the value of 12 annas, the property of Dhokeram, who, together with a female and one witness, proved the charge, to which the prisoner pleaded not guilty; and in the course of cross examination by the latter, it appeared, the prosecutor was indebted to the prisoner, who, in consequence frequented the prosecutor's house to get paid, and that they were neighbours; also that the prisoner was a man of property according to his standing in life. The prisoner called two witnesses on his side, the first of whom corroborated what had been elicited in the cross-examination, gave the prisoner a good character, and the reason for the same, and concluded by saying, that the prosecutor being in debt to, see the prisoner, whenever asked for payment, used to threaten to ruin the prisoner or to use the witness's words to "see the end of him," in order to get rid of his demand. The other witness proved, that an affray commenced in the house of the other witness, when the prosecutor gave him in charge of the police, and after which the female witness for the prosecution picked up a lota, handed it to the chowkydar, and charged the prisoner with theft. The chowkydar confirmed this part of the evidence, and added, that the prisoner was let at large on bail by Capt. Birch, when taken before him on the night the charge had been preferred. The prisoner was about to call other witnesses, when the petty jurymen declared, they were agreed, that this was a case of complete conspiracy against the prisoner, and that he was not guilty. The Court told the Jury, that such being the case, the trial ended, and that the Court agreed with the Jurors, and would have intimated that opinion to them, for, independently of the evidence for the defence, that on the part of the prosecution had been contradictory, and that the Court would not pass over this matter as to that part of it, which regarded the Police, in thus exposing an innocent man. The prisoner was discharged.

The Traverse Board stands as follows:—2 cases on the prosecution of Mr. W. D. Shaw for assault and false imprisonment, against Mr. Ogilvy, one on the prosecution of Denouath Ghosall v. R. Barlow, for the like charge.—Hurk, December 10.

The Chief Justice said, that the Presentment as above, could be received by the Court only as an address to the Judges and not as a Presentment in its legal sense, and continued, by explaining what "Presentment" meant. His Lordship added, that the address would be forwarded through the proper channel to Government, where, no doubt, it would meet due attention, as it should, considering the respectable body, such as the Grand Jurors, who compose the address, and that this is what his Lordship presumed they desired, to which the foreman assented and then took leave of the Court.

It is supposed that for the remainder of this Sessions, Sir H. W. Seton alone, will preside on the Bench, except on such occasions as when a full Bench might be legally necessary.—Hurkaru, December 19.

The Police Naib deposed, on oath, that owing to serious indisposition, the prosecutor was unable to attend. The Court observed, that this intimation ought to have been given to the Clerk of the Crown previous to the prisoner being arraigned for his trial, and now that he was arraigned and the Jurors were sworn, the prisoner had a right to insist on his trial, which, accordingly proceeded, and two witnesses were examined; but these witnesses did not prove the charge against the prisoner. The Jury therefore returned a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoner was discharged.

Jugga bearg, was next tried and convicted of larceny. Sentence 4 months' hard labor in the House of Correction. —Hurkaru, Decemr 24.

THURSDAY DECEMBER 27, 1838.

THE QUEEN V. J. B. O'GILVY—THE QUEEN V. THE SAME

These two cases, (both for trespass and false imprisonment) which had been traversed from last sessions, were mentioned to the Court this morning. Their Lordships said, that they should appoint a day specially next Monday.

THE QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF DEENONAUTH GHOSAUL V. ROBERT BARLOW.

This case was called on pro forma, and the parties were permitted by the Court to speak with each other.

THE QUEEN V. AUDINATH GHOSAUL.

The prisoner was arraigned for burglariously entering, with intent to steal, into the dwelling-house of Bissanauth Poramanick, in September last.

Mr. Merton appeared for the defence. The prosecutor, being called as a witness, deposed to having found the prisoner in his house about midnight, whereupon he gave the alarm, and a chokedar came up and seized him. The witness admitted that nothing was found upon the prisoner, and no property was found missing or even removed from its place; nor could he speak with precision as to the mode in which the prisoner had obtained entrance. There was an old mat partition, which appeared to have been partly torn or cut in the fastenings, but the prosecutor was quite uncertain whether the matting had not been in the same condition previous to the night in question.

Sir Edward Ryan, addressing the jury, said, that it appeared useless to go on with the case, as the prosecutor, who was the party most likely to be able to speak to the point, gave no evidence of a breaking and entering. No actual robbery was attempted to be proved or even charged, and the substance of the case, therefore, was to prove that there had been a forcible entry with felonious intent. It was impossible for the jury to draw the inference from such vague evidence, that this had actually happened.

The jury then returned a verdict of not guilty.

The prisoner was ordered to be discharged.

THE QUEEN V. RANDIALL NOY.

The prisoner was arraigned on a charge of embezzling money, the property of his Master, and found Guilty, but recommended to mercy.

The Court adjudged him to suffer six months' imprisonment, with hard labour, in the House of Correction.

Upon this Jury being discharged, and informed, that their attendance would be required on the day after to-morrow at ten, one of the gentlemen rose and addressed the Court with great gravity, requesting that as that day would be the first of the Rares, (which the whole world were very anxious to behold!) the Court would kindly postpone the hour of attendance from ten to eleven o'clock.

Sir E. Ryan, with great courtesy, granted the request, adding that they should expect their attendance punctually at eleven.

THE QUEEN V. SALIGRAM THAKJUR AND TWO OTHERS.

The prisoners were arraigned upon a charge of stealing certain maunds of Mint copper, on the 30th of October last. The indictment contained three counts one laying the property in Kriparam, another in Lochun Dow, and a third in those parties jointly.

Mr. Merton appeared for the defence. There was no counsel for the prosecution.

The first witness, who was the Gomastah of the prosecutors, stated, that he purchased the copper in question (15 bags) for his Masters, and gave it in charge of a Jemadar, for the purpose of being put on board of a boat. It appeared from this witness's testimony, that the prosecutors were partners, (father and son) and that there was a third partner not named in the indictment, a grandson, by name, Nundilall. This grandson, who was 28 or 30 years of age, was in fact the managing partner of the firm.

Sir E. Ryan said, that it was useless to go on. The copper was proved to be the property of three persons jointly, and it was described as the property of two only. This misdescription did not arise from any fault on the part of the Clerk of the Crown; for by him everything had been done to obtain the requisite information, but that information had not been supplied. The present acquittal of the prisoners of course would not prevent a fresh indictment from being preferred against them.

Mr. Morton begged leave to mention, for the sake of his client, that witnesses had been summoned, who (he was instructed) would have been able to prove a clear alibi.

The prisoners were acquitted.—Hulk. December 28.

INSOLVENT COURT.

(Present Sir E. Ryan.)

IN THE MATTER OF G. H. SWAINE.

This Insolvent was not opposed, and, after the usual oath, was discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF MATRICE CHARDON.

Mr. Attorney Waddington applied for an Adjudication of Insolvency in this matter, the Insolvent having departed from out of the jurisdiction to evade payment of his debts. He made the application on the part of Messrs. Cantor and Co., creditors of the Insolvent, to the extent of 3,800 Rs. on a promissory note.

IN THE MATTERS OF JAMES CULLEN AND R. BROWNE; COLVIN AND CO.; M. SCHLATER; CALDER AND OTHERS; MACKINTOSH AND CO.

The Assignees in these several matters applied for and obtained leave, to file their respective accounts.

IN THE MATTER OF KISTNO SONDER SEAL.

Mr. Strettell applied on the examiner's certificate for further time for the examiner to make his report in this matter, which was granted.

IN THE MATTER OF BEBEE AUMFRUN.

This case, as reported on the 20th ultimo, stood over for this day; but the Insolvent having been in the interval discharged from custody by her detaining creditor, no order passed in this matter.

IN THE MATTER OF BEBEE SOHOO.

The like as the above preceding matter.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES YOUNG AND OTHERS.

Mr. T. Holroyd, an assignee in this matter (cojointly with Mr. W. C. Hurry) applied to be relieved, as to his assigneeship. The Court granted it. Mr. Hurry to continue, and of course not relieving Mr. Holroyd as to past responsibilities.

IN THE MATTER OF W. F. CLARKE AND OTHERS.

Mr. E. McNamara made the like application as in the next preceding matter, and Mr. J. W. Alexander was proposed by several creditors to be placed in the stead of the resigning Assignee. Mr. Clarke, on the part of several other creditors proposed Mr. Alexander nomination of Mr. Alexander, or rather, as Mr. Clarke termed it, he proposed more a modification than an opposition, viz. that a co-assignee be deputed with Mr. Alexander, to whom there could be no objection other than that he, Mr. Alexander, was acting as assignee to 200 estates, and being a Commissioner of the Court of Requests, he could not devote that time which would be necessarily requisite in the discharge of the duties of Assignee in this Estate, wherein a great deal yet remained to be done, for the purpose of winding up the affairs. The Chief Justice refused Mr. Clarke's application on two grounds.

1st. That his Lordship felt quite satisfied that if Mr. Alexander was unable to discharge the duties of the Assigneeship, he, Mr. Alexander, would have relinquished the appointment, and the absence of any such information on Mr. Alexander's part, considering also that Mr. Clarke represented only a few of the creditors in his present application, his Lordship could not maintain the application.

2dly. A decided objection exists as to the gentleman intended by Mr. Clarke's application to be associated with Mr. Alexander, Mr. H. Holroyd, whose avocations in the Supreme Court, could not possibly admit of his nomination, owing to the arduous duties he was to perform. It, however, a largely body of creditors than what Mr. Clarke represents in his present application, could make out a case, that the Assignee, Mr. Alexander, could not discharge his duties as ought to be, or that the business was retarded, and not conducted with that ease and facility so as to render them, the creditors, ample justice, the Court might, in that case, entertain the application differently. Mr. Clarke repeated that he wished it to be understood, that no ground of complaint laid against Mr. Alexander, or any other objection than that he was Assignee to too many estates. The Court replied, that most of those to many estates entitled a great deal of trouble on Mr. Alexander and yielded but little, if any, emolument; and therefore it would be very unfair towards this gentleman, to take away from him the Assigneeship of this estate, likely to remunerate him, and that for no other reason than that he acted as Assignee to estates which cost him labor with no gain.

Mr. Alexander was nominated.

IN THE MATTER OF J. CULLEN AND OTHERS.

Mr. T. Holroyd applied for leave to be discharged from the Assigneeship, and Mr. J. W. Alexander, was proposed by several creditors to the substituted.

Mr. Clarke, on the part of several other creditors took objections, first as to the irregularity of the application, the resigning and the proposed Assignee applying together; whereas Mr. Clarke maintained, that it ought to have been two distinct orders, for the one could not be before the Court until the final and actual removal of the other. The Court informed the learned Counsel, that the order had been so framed by the directions of the Court, there having been no application to the contrary when the order passed.

Mr. Clarke resumed his application and said, that creditors to the amount of 22 lacs applied for Mr. Alexander, but Mr. Clarke applied for Mr. Leighton, on the part of creditors, to the extent of 40 lacs, and had affidavits to prove the signature of these creditors, and also to those who signed by proxy; and Mr. Clarke pointed out, that amongst the grounds put in, in the application for Mr. Alexander's nomination there was no affidavit filed as to the correctness of the debts of the creditors applying for Mr. Alexander, nor as to the signatures by proxy on the part of those creditors.

The Court intimated, that this objection taken by Mr. Clarke, bordered upon that of irregularity for want of the affidavit, as alluded to by Mr. Clarke, and that that deficiency could, and would, be allowed to be supplied; for it cannot be supposed, that the signatures were not genuine. Mr. Clarke then went on to state, that Mr. Leighton had been the principle and managing assistant in this firm for many years previous to its insolvency, and had a thorough and perfect knowledge of all its affairs and business, and of the several and extensive constituents and debtors and creditors of the firm, together with that of their residences and resources in different parts of the globe; and that the resigning Assignee and his predecessor, acted in the office solely with the aid of Mr. Leighton, who in fact, conducted every thing under their superintendence and direction, to the entire confidence and satisfaction of all parties, and Mr. Leighton was a person of probity and property, is in a lucrative mercantile business on his own bottom; under these circumstances, Mr. Clarke contended, that it would be unjust and unfair towards Mr. Leighton, to disconnect him now. Moreover, that creditors to the extent, as before mentioned, of 40 lacs of rupees, were anxious that Mr. Leighton should continue, which could only be by appointing him, no doubt from an impression, and very justly, that Mr. Leighton alone could do them justice; and this gentleman, not from any desire on his part, but to meet the wishes of these creditors, had arranged with his partner to be allowed to devote a part of his time to this matter, wherein Mr. Leighton interested himself, in order that the assets and effects be rightly appropriated and disposed of to the benefit of the creditors, many of these creditors being his relatives and intimate friends.

The court proposed to associate Mr. Leighton as a Co-Assignee with Mr. Alexander. The question as to the nomination, the court intimated, did not rest as to the extent of the amount of the debts due to the creditors, and that nominating Mr. Leighton a co-assignee with Mr. Alexander, would be meeting the wishes of all classes of the creditors, keeping in view the distinction of the creditors, one class applying for Mr. Leighton and another for Mr. Alexander; and the court observed, that most part, or at any rate a great number, of the proxy signatures to support Mr. Leighton's nomination, appeared to be signed by one of the Insolvent Partners, (Mr. Cullen) as the constituted attorney.

Mr. Clarke repeated to the court, that the matter had been forced on Mr. Leighton; it was no wish of his; and Mr. Clarke concluded, by reading a letter that passed by which this fact appeared; and he informed the court, that as Mr. Leighton wished barely to meet the wishes and interest of his friends, he, Mr. Leighton, not being nominated the Assignee, refused to act as a Co-Assignee with Mr. Alexander. Mr. Clarke immediately afterwards mentioned to the court, that he wished it to be reserved until the next Court-day, for Mr. Leighton to decide whether he would or would not accept of the Co-Assigneeship. The court accordingly reserved him the option, and Mr. Alexander was of course appointed the Assignee.

IN THE MATTER OF A COLVIN AND OTHERS.

Mr. E. McNaghten resigned his office of Assigneeship.
Mr. J. W. Alexander was appointed to succeed him.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES CALDER AND OTHERS.

Mr. T. Holroyd resigned his office as Assignee and Mr. Alexander was substituted.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOB.

This matter, as reported on the 20th ultimo, came on to-day for rehearing, and Mr. Strettell, attorney for the insolvent, applied for leave until the next Court day for the hearing of this matter, to enable the insolvent to file an amended or additional Schedule, which, Mr. Strettell added, the insolvent had not time to prepare, owing to his accounts and papers being partly destroyed by white-ants and the remainder in a confused state. Moreover, that he has not been able to get access to certain accounts of the late firm of Alexander and Co.

Mr. Strettell then put in an affidavit, verifying these facts, and also a book containing accounts, that the insolvent had prepared, stating that he had not been idle or dilatory so far as laid in his power, and asked for leave to put in this book of account, which the court said could not be received but by the Assignee; and the court granted the extension of time for the hearing as asked for, observing at the same time, that the grounds as set forth by the application, did not seem altogether satisfactory, particularly as to the allusion to the accounts of the late firm of Alexander and Co., which it cannot but be presumed must at all times be come-at-table at the office of the Assignees to that Estate. Mr. Strettell wished to offer some explanation, but the court said that at present nothing remained, but to allow the matter to stand over until the next court day, and the insolvent was remanded to prison.

Mr. Strettell filed with the Assignee the book of accounts before spoken of. Mr. Leith mentioned to the Court, that it would perhaps enlarge the order by adding, that in the making up of the amended or additional schedule, certain sums of money be brought into hotch-pot, viz. monies received by Mr. Jacob from time to time, subsequent to her marriage with the insolvent, which are alleged to have been legacies and presents to her, and to have been appropriated towards the building of a house, in the purchase of which is invested a sum of 4,000 rupees that had been settled on Mrs. Jacob by a deed, previous to her marriage. The learned Council added that the 4,000 rupees and the deed in question, having preceded the marriage, that sum alone, and not these others, received by Mrs. Jacobs, either as legacies, presents, or otherwise, ought to be reserved to her under that deed, in exclusion to the creditors.

The court entertained Mr. Leith's application as premature, and concluded by adding, that the additional or amended schedule to be filed in Court at least a week previous to the next day of hearing. Hickaru.

HOOGHLY SESSIONS COURT.

NOVEMBER 29, 1838.

(Before J. Curtis, Esq., Sessions Judge.)

TRIAL OF PERTAB CHUNDER.

Assad Ullah, nazir of Zillah Burdwan, deposed. I recognize the soi-disant Pertab Chunder, the Rajah of Hurdun, Hafiz Futehollah, Radakissen Ghosaul and the other prisoners in this case. I first saw the pseudo Rajah in April last at Culna. The darogah of Culna having, in Byasack last, reported to the Burdwan Magistrate the arrival of the soi-disant Rajah at that town; and having further added, that this Rajah intended to have landed with an armed retinue at Kaiti Khal, and that he had dissuaded him from it, the Magistrate thereupon dispatched at two dispatch at two different times, two jemadars with some hired burkundauzes to prevent this Rajah from landing with his followers; subsequently the darogah dispatched another report to the Magistrate, that the pretended Rajah had landed near the burial-ground of the Burdwan Rajah, and followed by a drunken mob all armed; and this Rajah had ordered his adherents to seize the muskets of the peeps on guard at the burying ground, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he dissuaded him from it. "The Magistrate, on receipt of this report, said the deponent, dispatched me on the 29th April to Burdwan, to disperse this Rajah's assembly and to arrest him and take him prisoner to Hooghly. I arrived there the next day, and saw only the naib darogah, the moonshy and a peon on guard; and having heard that the darogah had gone to see the soi-disant Rajah. I sent information to him of my arrival and he came. I enquired of him whether the assemblage had dispersed, and he replied in the negative. I then gave the darogah's purwannah to him, and desired him to accompany me to the Rajah, to disperse the Rajah's party. I saw several boats moored to the shore, and 30 or 40 boats and the Rajah's budgerow at anchor in the stream. I desired the darogah to go and give the Rajah notice of my arrival. The darogah then called Futehollah, the Rajah's darogah, and Mirza Hossanee, the petition-presenter of the Rajah, and I requested them to communicate to the Rajah my arrival and wish to see him. They replied, the Rajah is not at leisure to see you at present, and advised me in the interim to go to the Hurdun Rajah's boat and see him; and I did so, and informed the Hurdun Rajah the reason of my coming, and explained to him the purport of my purwannah. The Hurdun Rajah spoke a great deal about this pseudo Raja being the real Rajah, and the probability of his soon seating himself on the Burdwan guddy. I replied, I have no interest in this matter; all that I have to do is disperse the assembly. The Hurdun Rajah then left me in his budgerow, and proceeded to the pseudo Rajah's budgerow, and shortly afterwards one of their domestics, called me to come on board this Rajah's budgerow. I then proceeded there, accompanied by the jemadar and a few armed burkundauzes. The men on guard at the Rajah's, informed us that we could not go on board thus armed; but that I and the darogah, with 2 or 3 others, may come unarmed and communicate our message. In compliance with this request, I and the nazir, accompanied by 2 or 3 peons, went on board. I gave the purwannah to the Rajah and he looked at it; and Monshy Hurrochunder read its contents to him; after which I told the Rajah that it was necessary for him to disperse his retinue. The Rajah replied they are not a mob, but my domestic and indispensable servants. I replied, be that as it may, you should not keep so many persons about you. The Rajah replied, I wish to go to Burdwan. I said if you desire to proceed to Burdwan, discharge this concourse, keep a few necessary servants, and I will see you safely attended; then, on his objecting to go with so few servants to Burdwan, I counselled him, in compliance with the purwannah, to return to Hooghly; and I would accompany him there. He replied, my attorney, Mr. Shaw, is arrived; I will see him during the day and give you, in the evening, a final reply to your orders. I then returned home, and, as I imagined from the obstinate and overbearing conduct of the Rajah and his rabble, that they would not disperse, I reported this conversation, and the state of the affairs at Culna, to the Magistrate, and began to investigate into the correctness of the statement of the Rajah having landed at Culna with an armed force, and the general conduct on shore; and having ascertained the correctness of the darogah's report on that subject, and dispatched it to the Magistrate. Towards the evening, although I despaired of dispersing this Rajah's men, yet, that the Rajah may not have cause to say that I had failed to call for his reply, as he had desired me, I went to the ghut and desired the darogah to go on board; and if the Rajah should show any dispositions to disperse, let me know. Some delay having occurred in the darogah's returning, I, after dark, returned to the thana, after having desired a person to call him. Soon after my arrival at the thana, the darogah and the police peons came. I enquired of the darogah what reply the Rajah gave him. He said that Mr. Shaw, on behalf of the Rajah, had told him that the Rajah was proceeding to Burdwan with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, and he would go there with his whole retinue. I then sent another report to the Magistrate, informing him of my inability to disperse this concourse; and this report I dispatched by horse-dak. This was on the 30th April, and the Magistrate arrived on the night of the 12th May at the thana, with the military and the civil surgeon and awoke me and inquired how matters stood. I said in statu quo, and showed him the Raja's boat; and I took the gentlemen to the residence of Mr. Alexander, and, by the Magistrate's desire, stationed persons on the road to give intimation of the arrival of the soldiery. During the night, the officers retired and slept with their companies, I in my palkee, and the Magistrate and Doctor at Mr. Alexander's. Early next morning, before day break, we proceeded and woke the military and roused them on the banks of the river, and pointed out the Raja's boats to the Magistrate. The firing then took place and the men were captured. I took out a gold-nilted sword from under the Raja's pillow, and the other arms were found by me on searching the other boats.

Cross-examined by Mr. Shaw.—I, on that evening, received two letters from the Raja, written in Persian. The Raja had brought 11 concubines with him, and there were 7 in his budgerow at the time I found the sword under the Raja's pillow. There was no riot in Culna, from the time of my arrival till the dispersion of the assemblage. I never told Mr. Shaw that the darogah's reports were all false. Rada Kissen Ghosaul presented a petition to the Magistrate of Burdwan, previous to my departure from Burdwan. When I was going, I heard a popular rumour at Burdwan, that neither the Raja of Burdwan nor the Nabob of Moonshee dead are dead, but they have become ascetics, and are wandering over the country. The robbery written by Takoor Ally, was engrossed from rough drafts after the Magistrate's return to Burdwan.

Govind Sing, Jemadar, deposed. The witness corroborated the evidence of Mayaboulla, late the daroga of Culna, and of Asseod Ally, the nazir of Burdwan, regarding the transactions which occurred at Culna during the stay of the pseudo Raja at that place.

Dusseet Palluck, deposed like the former witnesses, in confirmation of the transactions which occurred at Culna during the period the sui-distant Rajah was anchored off that town.

Hurochunder, was brought up from the jail. It appeared that he was connected with the charge against these prisoners, and is to get his release from the jail on this charge, provided he spoke the truth.

Mr Bignell said, that he had no charge at present against him, but if he perjured himself he would have; and the Zillah Magistrate said, that the written agreement with the man is in conformity to the existing regulations in this country; and if he does not depose to the truth in this case, he can be sent back to jail, and recommitted on the present charge.

This witness deposed. I know all the prisoners—I was the Secretary to the sui-distant Rajah, and wrote his letters for him by his dictation. Letter No. 1 is signed by Burcklawur Sing, the nazir of this Raja. Who wrote the contents of it, I don't know. No. 2 is signed by the Raja. Who wrote the body I do not know. No. 3 was written by me, and signed by this Raja. It is addressed to Mudden Soodun Nundy, desiring him to meet the Raja at Ambeeka. I cannot say whether it was ever dispatched or not. No. 4 is likewise signed by the Raja, and written by me to the Nazir Assood Oodeen, appointing him the Jemadar of the female household, the salary to be settled on his being installed as the Raja of Burdwan. No. 5 is a list of names. It is not signed, and who wrote it I cannot say. On re-examining it, he said, it is signed in Nagree, which I cannot read. No. 6 is missing. No. 7 is a petition from Assood Ally. Who wrote it I know not. The next No. is 15, and it is a draft of a letter written by me, to Matab Chunder, at the dictation of this Raja. There was a letter copied from this, addressed to Matab Chunder, at Goyah, but as it could not find Matab Chunder there, it was returned. Another draft by me, written to Matab Chunder, is a letter complaining of his arrival at Burdwan, and his fears of Prawu Bobon, and that he has employed persons for his protection; and that his case regarding the Rajaship of Burdwan, was to be tried in the Supreme Court of Calcutta. No. 17 is signed by this Raja. Who wrote the body of it I cannot say. It is addressed to Thakoor Ghosal, desiring him to attend to the Raja's business as a salaried person at Houghly, and after the Raja would succeed to his gaddie, he would appoint him daroga of the Rajbarry at Ambeeka. No. 18 is missing. No. 19 is not written by me, and bears no signature. No. 20 is an unsigned memorandum, written by me, of the arrival of 200 guests of the Rajah to play the holes. No. 22 is written by me; it is a memorandum, not read, of the arrival of the kettle-drums and flags. The next is not numbered, and is an order to Rau Chunder Moler, to come and attend to his duty within seven days; and Sebou Jemadar, to entertain 100 sepoys to attend the Raja's train at Ambeeka, and to accompany him to Burdwan. Two letters, signed by the sui-distant Raja, to the address of Poybit Raja, were admitted.

Cross-examined by Mr. Shaw.—I was one year in the sui-distant Rajah's service. I was with him all the time he was moored off Culna. There was no disturbance caused by him there. When the darogah explained to the Rajah the purwanna for him to disperse his subjects, the Rajah replied, I have no unnecessary attendants about me, but only my domestic, who have accompanied me from Calcutta. Report this reply of mine to the Burdwan Magistrate, and let me know his order on this representation. The nazir arrived after this, and the darogah accompanied him to the Rajah's boat, and shewed to him the purwanna to disperse the illegal assemblage. On that evening the darogah went again, unattended, on board the Rajah's boat, and he did not appear to be alarmed. There were two burkundazes with him, who stand out whilst the darogah went to the Rajah's room. The darogah never attempted to apprehend the Rajah. Mr. Shaw, on this occasion, sent for the nazir; but he did not come. There was a purwanna read that evening. Mr. Shaw dictated a letter to the nazir, signed by the Rajah, requesting him to mention how many persons he was to disperse. I wrote it in Persian. Pentaub told the darogah I am come, send for the nazir, and let him explain his purwanna to me, and then I will take measures to comply with its purport. The Rajah had the same servants with him at Culna that he had at Calcutta. Some of the shopkeepers and others of Culna, used occasionally to wait on the Rajah with presents. The only respectable person that came to see the Rajah, was the Burdwan Rajah. The pseudo Rajah had presented a petition to Government, to be permitted to proceed to Burdwan to be recognized, and from the evidence the application was refused; but a letter was dispatched to the Magistrate to see that no collision took place between the pseudo Rajah's and Prawu Bobon's men. I do know Mr. Graham, the attorney of the Supreme Court. He had promised the Rajah to accompany him to Burdwan. He is a very good man, and had no wish to quarrel with any person. This Rajah had 60 or 70 burkundazes; they formed his guard and sentinels at his house, offices, and boats at Culna. The Rajah had 1 pinnare, 8 or 9 budgieows, and 2 or 3 bhowlas and 334 boats. There was an aviary in one of the boats, and the music and the kettle-drums on another. One was a bottle khana and the other the ablute-khanna, a fourth the cookroom, and the sleeping budgieow was separate from the audience boat. The burkundazes were employed in guarding these boats. I was for a few days in the criminal jail, after my arrival from Burdwan, but since have become a Government witness, I have been removed to the civil side. The men in custody on this charge, were some of the Rajah's servants and some merely candidates for services. I was 8 or 9 days in the criminal jail. I was arrested on the 21st of Bysuck last. I was 10 days released on bail and then remanded to custody. My bail did not render up his bail. I do not know whether my bail has been released from his liability on my account. I did not commit any fresh crime during the time I was out on bail. I had a subpoena served on me from the Supreme Court. I waited on the Magistrate to inform him of it, and the Magistrate then said, you are a Government witness, you must remain confined in the civil jail. My bail-bond was not returned to me. I was sent down by the Joint Magistrate in custody of 2 peons to Calcutta. The Rajah is a peaceable and noble looking man. Mr. Bignell remarked, that this was irrelevant to the case. Mr. Curtis concurred in this opinion. Mr. Shaw replied that he only wished to show how the prosecution got their witnesses, but if the Judge objected he would discontinue it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Bignell. The Rajah wrote to the darogah, that he had 350 men with him at Culna. He did not discharge any of them, because he wanted for the Magistrate's reply to his letter, which he had requested the daroga to forward to him.

Mr. Shaw, when Mr. Bignell was about to file the documents found in the Rajah's boat, said, that he opined that if Mr. Bignell filed these he ought to file them all. Mr. Bignell replied, that he would file those he thought favourable to his case, but they were all acceptable; and if Mr. Shaw wished he could apply for and file the others.

When this witness had concluded his testimony, the Judge ordered him to be released.—Hurkaru, Dec. 1.

The case of this person has been postponed from Friday the 30th November 1838, until Monday the 3d December 1838, in consequence of the indisposition of the prisoner. Dr. Wise, the civil surgeon of the station, reported, that the prisoner was attacked with a fever and a swelling in his legs, likely to end in elephantiasis, and that it would be advisable to let him have two or three days rest.

Mr. Shaw wished to know whether, under the present circumstances, bail would now be taken for the prisoner; he likewise wished to be permitted to accommodate him with a charpoy and a coverlet.

Mr. Bignell replied, that he believed it was against the jail regulations to admit the articles Mr. Shaw requested; and as to bail, he considered that if the prisoner's removal from jail was necessary, no place could be more appropriate for him than the station hospital, where the civil surgeon, no doubt, would in such case order his removal.

Mr. Shaw stated, that at present the Rajah is obliged to sleep in his palkee.

Mr. Curtis replied, that if a petition were presented to him on this subject, he would order what he considered necessary for the prisoner's comforts. With regard to the bail, he had better apply to the Nizamut Adawlut. Hurkaru, December 3.

MONDAY, 3d Dec. 1838.

Premchund Bonerjee, nazir of the Criminal Court of Zilla Nuddea, deposed:—I recognize the prisoner Kisto Lal and the Hurdhon Raja. In the Bengal year 1234, when I was the kootwal of Goowaree, Kishenagur, Kisto Lal was then a candidate for the situation of a jamadar or a thana. At that time his father, Sham Lal, and his two brothers, were alive. Sham Lal's monkey had, during that period, strayed into the tent of an European merchant, who had his tents pro tempore pitched opposite Sham Lal's house. This led to a disturbance, and some men were wounded on both sides in the affray. I got notice of it from Jawun Sing, the patrol of the division. Two of three men in the service of the Europeans and Kisto Lal and his two brothers, were arrested on that occasion, and examined before Mr. D. Mc Farlan, the magistrate of the division. Kisto Lal was the complainant in that case, and I was entrusted to observe, that the European did not quit the village until the decision of this suit. It lasted fifteen days. At the expiration of that period, the case was compromised, and Kisto Lal filed the deed of adjustment. I believe that the prisoner who alleges himself to be Pertab Chunder, the late Rajah of Burdwan, is the Kisto Lal I have been deposing about. I resided near his homestead fifteen years; but in consequence of his assuming the titles of the Rajahship of Burdwan, I cannot speak confidently as to his identity. Kisto Lal composed a book which no resident of Kishenagur could read. He formed a picturesque arbour, in which he secreted a corpse, and used to read this mysterious book during the night over the body. During the first ten years of these fifteen years, I repeatedly saw him at various times; but during the last five years, I lost sight of him, and only saw him last year near the Ayherretollah ghaut in Calcutta, when he was riding in a tonjohn in great state, followed by about two hundred attendants. He once, about ten years ago, quitted his house for about six months, and then returned again; and then he again quitted his house for five years. During this period I did not see him.

Questioned by the Mohomedan Law Officer. I cannot tell the exact year of the quarrel between Kisto Lal and the Europeans at Kishenagur. I was the city daroga at that period.

Deponent added. Kisto Lal was for a few days appointed acting darogah of Santipoor; but on the representation of the shristadar of his Court, that Kisto Lal was a debauched character, Mr. McFarlan recalled him. Sham Lal died intestate; his property is in the custody of the judge of Zilla Nuddea.

Cross-examined by Mr. Morton. Prisoner is darker and stouter than when I knew him in Kishenagur. Kisto Lal had apparent small pox marks on his face, Sham Lal Bose knew Kisto Lal.

Neel Comul Ghose, shristadar of zilla Nuddea, Criminal Court, deposed. I recognise the Hurdhon Rajah, and I saw a person resembling the pseudo Pertab Chunder at Kishenagur, named Kisto Lal, son of Sham Lal; but whether this prisoner is that person or not, I cannot certify. I knew Kisto Lal and might have spoken to him occasionally.

Brijamohon Mookerjee, peeshkar of the Criminal Court of zilla Nuddea, deposed. I recognize the Hurdhon Rajah and the pseudo Pertab Chunder, whose name is Kisto Lal. I have known him for seven years at Kishenagur. He is the son of Sham Lal, and he had two brothers, Gour Lal and Roop Lal. This prisoner's countenance resembles Kisto Lal's. The rest of this deponent's evidence was in confirmation of the testimony of Premchund Bonerjee.

Cross-examined by Mr. Morton. The statement in the Magistrate's Court, in which it appears that I expressed my doubt to the identity of this prisoner with Kisto Lal, is not correctly engrossed. I deposed there the same as I do now here but; I had no time to read it and correct the error, before I signed it.

Ramechunder Biswas, deposed. I am a retail dealer, reside at Kishenagur, and have known the pseudo Pertab Chunder for ten years intimately. His name is Kisto Lal, and he is the son of Sham Lal. His two brothers, Gour Lal and Roop Lal, are dead. I kept a school at Gwarree in those times, and the prisoner used to come there and read Bengally and Persiad. The prisoner's uncle was a robber. Kisto Lal has studied astrology and law; but latterly he kept a concubine and became a drunkard, I therefore discontinued his acquaintanceship. About 18 years ago, the prisoner, who was 18 years of age, had a fall from a horse. I saw the prisoner latterly at Chorebagan, in Calcutta. He is 36 years old.

Cross-examined by Mr. Morton: When the prisoner fell from his horse he was hurt severely and bled, and there was a seer of blood came from somewhere towards his back.

Gunga Govind Bonerjee, deposed:—I recognize Kisto Lal, the son of Sham Lal I have known him ever since he was 10 or 12 years of age, and I was educated in the school of Finskoondah, a resident of Burdwan, with Kisto Lal, for four years. About 15 or 16 years ago, Kisto Lal quitted his house, but returned again, after staying away eight or 10 years.

Cross-questioned by Mr. Morton. During the last 16 years I saw Kisto Lal three or four times, and once since his return. When Kisto Lal went away, he was about 21 years old. Although I only saw Kisto Lal during the last 16 years three or four times, yet I am positive that the soi disant Pertab Chunder is that person. Within this time his complexion has not changed, but he is a little stouter. I do not remember whether he was marked with the small pox or not.

Questioned by Rada Kissen Ghosaul. I never gave evidence before in the Court of Requests, or any other Court.

Moyhes Pundit, deposed. I first saw the pseudo Pertab Chunder, when he called himself Kisto Lal. It was about six years ago, at Burdwan, on the Sealmaree road. Four years ago I saw him at Kishenagur. When at Burdwan he wore the Brahmanical thread, and his hair was long and tied up behind in a knot, and he was dressed as a devotee. At Kishenagur he had his hair cropped, and did not wear the same fashioned clothes as he did when I saw him at Burdwan. He used there to argue with me, Paul Christian and Padre Krukenberg, on the theology of the Hindoos, and did so for three years. Prisoner reminded me of my former acquaintanceship with him at Burdwan. I questioned him with regard to his change of dress and appearance. He replied it is not the same day that you now see; it has undergone a change since I quitted Burdwan. I conjectured from this reply that there was some mystery in the prisoner's conduct, which he wished to conceal. I went to the Hooghly Jail with the clergyman, and there, in the presence of Mr. Samuelli, the Magistrate, and Dr. Wise, the Civil Surgeon of the station, said, I recognised the prisoner to be Kisto Lal, the son of Sham Lal. Prisoner's father was a Bremacharee, i. e. a hermit devotee. I was introduced to him by Mr. Krukenberg, whose pundit I was, to dispute with him on the Hindoo theology. He declined to dispute with me; but referred me to his son Kisto Lal, and I from that period commenced these religious disputations with him. I am positive that this prisoner is Kisto Lal, the son of Sham Lal, Bremacharee. I have not the slightest doubt on this subject.

Cross examined by Mr. Morton. I saw Kisto Lal once at Burdwan, and seven or eight times at Kishenagur. When I first saw the prisoner in jail at Hooghly, I did require 10 days to consider of it, before I could state precisely whether he was Kisto Lal or not. This I did because, although certain that he was Kisto Lal, I did not wish to depose to his identity on oath, without seeing him again, two or three times within these ten days. I did not see him within those days, so I was not enabled thereby to refresh my memory; but as I am a pundit, I can, from that very circumstance, remember facts more tenaciously than other people do, and in proof, thereof, witness recounted the particulars of a meeting he had with Mr. Curtis, when he was Judge of Burdwan; but Mr. Curtis denied all knowledge of this meeting. Questioned by the prisoner. Although I reside at Burdwan I am not a servant of the Rajahbarry there.

Gunga Persad Teewarry deposed. I recognise the prisoner to be the son of my Cousin Sham Lal. His name is Kisto Lal. I knew him at Kissenagur ever since he was 10 years of age. He was the eldest of three brothers; the next eldest to him was Roop Lal, and the youngest Gour Lal. I am a resident of Jessore and am a Brahmin. In B. S. 1230, he resided near Ramchand Mitter's house at Kishenagur, in whose house I used often to see Kisto Lal; but I did not see him for these five or six years, until I lately saw him in custody at Bancoorah. His dress and habits were then changed. He kept then a long, bushy beard. I had no conversation with him on that occasion, but after it I have heard much of his movements. I have not seen him subsequently, with the exception of the time when I was examined in this case in the Magistrate's Court of this district. I am quite sure this prisoner is Kisto Lal, the son of Sham Lal, Bramacharee, of Kishenagur. I have known him ever since his childhood. He is 36 years old. When my brother-in-law, Jugmoohun, was a jemadar of the Kung Mahal of the Burdwan Rajbarry; and when I used to go there I used to put up with him. He was a witness in this case, and gave his deposition regarding the death of Pertab Chunder in the Magistrate's Court. He died last Kartick. I have within the last 18 months resided at Ambeeka. Sham Lal's relatives were originally natives of Moohloodae, in Zillah Jessore; and they removed to Kishenagur during Kisto Lal's infancy. With the exception of three years' journey to Burdwan. I never knew Kisto Lal to quit his house, and I used invariably to see him at intervals of two or three months. The prisoner is my nephew. Questioned by Mr. Morton. Though I have for these two years, know that the person alledging himself to be Rajah Pertab Chunder, is my nephew, Kisto Lal, yet I never mentioned this circumstance to any person. I am out of employ and will be most happy to get a situation wherever I can. I have no hopes of procuring service in the Rajbarry of Burdwan, as I have no friends there. I never was called by any other name than Gungapersad Tewarry.

Mudden Chuckerbutty. The whole of this witness's evidence tended to corroborate the testimony of the witnesses whose examination preceded to-day, regarding the pseudo Pertab Chunder being the son of Sham Lal, a resident of Kishenagur, and his name being Kisto Lal.

To a question of Mr. Bignell, Mr. Graham replied, that he would give to-morrow the names of some of those witnesses whom he required the soonest.

It was arranged that by consent of parties the evidence of Mr. Alexander before the Magistrate, should be read in this case, and filed a documentary testimony.

A charpoy and warm clothing were ordered to be supplied to the pseudo Rajah to-day by Mr. Curtis. Mr. Trower has objected to come up and give his testimony before the Sessions Judge, unless his expenses be paid to him. Major Stork Carter Webber, formerly commandant of the Burdwan Provincial Battalion, has made the same objections to come down as witnesses.—Harkaru, December 5.

DECEMBER 4, 1838.

Rambur Tewarry, a retainer of the pseudo Rajah, was brought up from the Civil Jail of the district and deposed. I recognize Maha Rajah Pertab Chunder and his retainers, the darogah, mookhtar and others. I likewise recognize the Hurdhun Rajah. In Chait last, Ghosaul dispatched me with letters to Rajah Gour Narain of Kishenagur, and to the mad Rajah of Pachite; and likewise with a letter to Saloo Baboo, the brother-in-law of the Pachite Rajah. This letter I lost on the road. Ghosaul, when I left him, said, the Rajah will go with Government permission to be recognized by the Ranees of Burdwan. This son of the Pachite Rajah replied, that when Pertab Chunder will mount the gaddies, I will go and visit him. I was arrested by Captain Hannington at Purreelea. No letters were in my possession, but on the bed of Moothoor Mohon Mitter, by Captain Hannington's sheristadar. I am subject to fits of aberration and cannot read and write, but by a mark on these letters, I can recognize them. (Here, Mr. Shaw remarked, that these letters had been admitted.) Witness recognized No. 18, in which it was stated, that the Rajah would come, aided by the authorities, to mount the Burdwan Raj, and craved aid of money; and two others which he recognized were much of the same tenor. The 4th, deponent could not identify.

Cross examined by Mr. Morton.—I first saw Rajah Pertab Chunder to the North of Moonghur, in a village; mounted in a palkee about 7 or 8 years ago and he had two deer with him. I had on conversation with him on the occasion, but I recollect his features perfectly. I first became acquainted with him about three or four years ago, at Bushenpoor; at that period it was generally reported, that he was Rajah Pertab Chunder. After this witness had finished his depositions he was released.

Kasinath Bose, deposed.—I recognize the soi-disant Rajah. I do not know his name. I first saw him about six months previous to the fruit of the reappearance of Rajah Pertab Chunder. He was then living with a young man at Shampooker, in the house of Goopenath. I went to see him there in company with others, in consequence of a rumour, that two hand-some devotees had come to reside there, and some believed them to be saints. I am not certain as to the purport of this conversation, but I believe that one of them said, when four persons combine, in a short time the world will know who we are. I have on further recollection if ought else transpired between us.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell.—I was acquainted with Rajah Pertab Chunder. I saw him chiefly at Burdwan. I believe I have distinct remembrance of his features. I have seen the pseudo Rajah subsequent to my interview with him at Shampooker, at Mr. DeSouza's, and likewise at his residence in Calcutta. No, from my recollection of the features of Pertab Chunder, I cannot say that I believe the prisoner to be that individual. I cannot say whether in assuming the name of Pertab Chunder, he is or is not an imposter; but he is not like that individual. I saw Mr. Hutchinson, of the Civil Service, after a lapse of eighteen or nineteen years, in Messrs. Tulloh and Co.'s Auction, and we mutually recognized each other. The prisoner is taller than Pertab Chunder and younger. His teeth are dissimilar, and the Rajah was much fairer.

About 8 or 9 years ago, Kishen Chund, who is likewise called Lalla Bahoo, brought me a Bengally bond, executed by Bebee Foltah Koomary, the sister of Rajah Tej Chunder, in favor either of Rajah Tej Chunder or of Rajah Pertab Chunder. I am not sure of which; and he offered to dispose of the same to me for six hundred rupees; leaving it to my option, either to pay the money myself or to prevail on Bebee Foltah Koomary to pay it and redeem the bond. I believe it was for six hundred rupees, but of this I am not quite sure. At the time Kishen Chund brought me this bond, I had money transactions with Bebee Foltah Koomary. How Kishenchund obtained the bond I am not aware. I believe he held a confidential situation under the late Rajah Pertab Chunder; but the nature of it I do not know.

Mr. Morton observed, he could not conceive what this bond had to do with the present investigation.

Examined by Mr. Morton.—I never told to Mr. DeSouza, in his garden, in the prisoner's presence, that I believed him to be Rajah Pertab Chunder of Burdwan. Mr. Shaw showed me a letter from Mr. DeSouza, in which it was stated that I had recognised the prisoner to be Pertab Chunder, but I denied the correctness of the assertion. To the best of my recollection, I never told Mr. DeSouza that I believed the prisoner to be Pertab Chunder, neither to Mrs. DeSouza or Mr. Graham. I have invariably told Mr. Graham that prisoner is not Pertab Chunder. In fact, I never made the above assertion to any person. I am a Putnee Talookdar of the present Rajah of Burdwan, of several talooks.

Govind Biswas deposed, that he had known the prisoner since 4 years ago, when he was named Aluk Shah, and had some followers. He used to worship the God Shiva. Deponent saw Kirpanund in his company.

Deponent had no conversation with them. Deponent saw him twice at Maulaubepoor, zillah Burdwan, deponent's village. At the latter time Kirpanund was not with him. He made short stays at each time and put up in the house of Ruttenchund. His first sojourn was for 20 days. Ruttenchund died during the month of Kartick last year.

Examined by Mr. Morton.—I would recognize Kirpanund, if I were to see him. I went to the Jail with the Shristadar to day.

Questioned by the pseudo Rajah.—No person has taught me, to state what I have deposed to-day.

Ramchunder Mitter.—This witness, on being required to take his oath, before giving his deposition, began to blubber like a child, and said I know nothing, why swear me? He even refused to sign the ekrarnama, and began to roll on the ground; and although he was threatened to be taken to the prison, he still refused to be sworn, and was ultimately removed to the Hooghly Jail.

After this witness had been removed to the jail, it appearing that there were no other witnesses in attendance at the Court to day, and none expected before 3 or 4 o'clock p. m., the Court adjourned at half past 1 o'clock p. m. till 10 o'clock to morrow morning.

Moonshy Hurroochunder, who was brought up from the Civil Jail, on Thursday last, the 29th ultimo, and ordered by the Judge, after he had given his testimony in this case, to be released, as he was what the law termed a King's evidence, and there was, Mr. Bignell stated, charge against him. Yet he was after this order of the Judge, sent off by the Shristadar of the Magistrate's Court, on that night to the jail, and brought up the next morning before the Magistrate, when, it appearing that there was no charge of any nature pending against him, either in the civil or criminal Court, the Magistrate ordered his immediate release.

Previous to the examination of Ramruten Tewarry, the judge particularly enquired whether there was any charge against him of any nature connected with this case, and after he had ascertained that there were none, and that he likewise was a King's evidence, he then proceeded to take his deposition. This witness during his examination swore, that he had been ill-treated and almost starved in the zilla jail, and had got cramps in his legs from confinement, and requested permission to sit down whilst being examined. This was granted to him by the judge. He likewise stated, that he had watery effusion from his ears, and was partially deaf. The judge, after this witness had concluded his testimony, ordered his release. The Magistrate, who happened to be there in the Judge's Court, very humanely backed the order and desired his Shristadar to let him go where he pleased, without making him undergo the same formula as Moonshy Hurroochunder had undergone.

To a question of Mr. Morton, Mr. Bignell replied, that he believed that he would be enabled to close the case for the prosecution by the expiration of another week, but much depended on the speedy and punctual arrival of the witnesses subpoenaed in the case.

From what fell from the judge during the trial of this case, we believe it is not his intention in future to take up the miscellaneous civil duties of his court every Saturday, and defer the hearing of this case on those days, as he had originally proposed; but to proceed with it every day without intermission, until it is finally terminated in his Kutcherry.—Hurk., December 6.

DECEMBER 5, 1837.

Prannath Moorkerjee deposed. I think I recognise the prisoner Kiato Lal, but I cannot speak with certainly to this prisoner's identity with that person ; for I have not seen Kisto Lal for about eight years. When I last saw him it was when Mr. McFarlan was Judge and Magistrate of the Kishenaghur District. He was then very young and slighter made than this prisoner is ; but my impression that this prisoner is Kisto Lal, is very strong, from the close resemblance he bears to his late father Sham Lal, who died last year at Gwaree, and who was my priest, and I saw him often at Kishenaghur. Sham Lal never told me what had become of his son Kisto Lal. During the eight years I have mentioned, I was temporarily absent from Kishenaghur, and went to Jessore. Sham Lal had three sons, Kisto Lal was the eldest, Roop Lal the next, and is dead ; but what has become of Gouri Lal I don't know. I was not very intimate with Sham Lal, but he lived for upwards of 20 years at Kishenaghur, where he died ; but his native village was Mohre-poor, Thana Dowlupore, Zillah Nuddea. I do not know any of the other prisoners. I am Sherishtadar of the Judge's Court, Zillah Nuddea. I am not acquainted with Gungapersad Tewarry. Sham Lal died intestate and there are no heirs to his estate, although notice has been proclaimed in the Judge's Court, for the heir to come forward and claim the estate of the deceased. I knew Sham Lal for 37 years, and Kisto Lal when he was a child. Kisto Lal was a permanent resident of Kishenaghur, with the exception of two or three months, when he might have been absent from it ; but of this I am not aware. Kisto Lal was very learned for a native ; he knew Persian and Sanscrit, and composed an astrological work in the latter language. When I knew him, he was a candidate for employment. Whether he assumed the habit of a Bramacharyee, I do not know. I imagine the prisoner to be Kisto Lal, but I cannot say so to a certainty. Possibly he may not be Kisto Lal, but I cannot conceive him to be any other individual.

Questioned by Mr. Shaw.—I know Joychurn Sicar, of Kishenaghur, but whether he knew Kisto Lal intimately or not, I cannot say. Joychurn lived near Kisto Lal's house in Gwaree. Joychunder told me that he believed the prisoner to Kisto Lal. Joychunder was examined before the Magistrate of Hooghly in this case. I do not know whether Joychunder is subpoenaed to give evidence in the case before the Sessions Judge. Joychunder practices as a Mookteer of Zilla Nuddea. I have had no conversation with him within 15 days. Joychunder never told me that he could not recognize the prisoner to be Kisto Lal in the Magistrate's Court. I saw a Clergyman in Kishenaghur once, but I do not know his name. I do not remember whether Kisto Lal was marked with the small pox or not, as I never closely examined his features. Sham Lal Bose, Mr. McFarlan's shristadar, must have known Kisto Lal.

Hurrochund Hujra. I know the pseudo Partab Chunder ; his name is Kisto Lal. I likewise know the Hurdhoo Rajah. I am a vakeel of the Judge's Court in Zilla Nuddea. This witness likewise deposed, that the sai-disant Rajah was known to him at Kishenaghur, as Kisto Lal, the son of Sham Lal, for 25 years ; and that he had not seen him of late for 8 years. In fact his evidence was but a corroboration of the other witnesses regarding this prisoner's residence at Gwaree, the suburb of Kishenaghur, for many years.

Whilst the Fouzdary Shristadar was reading the deposition of this witness, as given before this Magistrate of Hooghly, there was a passage on it, in which this witness had stated before the Magistrate, that the pseudo Rajah's features were the same but there was a slight alteration. The prisoner here addressed the Court, and began to state what he conceived to be the purport of that passage ; but the Judge immediately stopped him, and said he was silent you—. Here an angry, half-suppressed expression was uttered by the Judge, which Mr. Shaw subsequently appeared, during the proceedings, under stood to be offensive to his client and injurious to his case.

The passage which caused this interruption was this. This witness before the Magistrate had deposed to the following effect :

The prisoner resembles Kisto Lal, but he is somewhat altered. Kisto Lal was fairer than this prisoner, and this prisoner is stouter and taller than Kisto Lal was.

During the examination of Pronath Mookerjee, Mr. Shaw objected to the judge's writing, that the prisoner was versed in the Persian language, &c. He said, that as this witness had not deposed positively that the prisoner was Kisto Lal, he believed, strictly, under these circumstances, it would be more appropriate to write Kisto Lal knew Persian, &c. then to write the prisoner knew Persian.

Mr. Curtis replied, that he considered that the witness had sworn to the identity of the prisoner with Kisto Lal to the best of his knowledge and belief, and this he imagined was construed by law to be fully sufficient to justify his writing the passage as he had done.

After the Shristadar had finished the reading of the witness's depositions before the Magistrate, the Judge asked Mr. Shaw, whether he had any questions to put to this witness. Mr. Shaw replied, that after the expression the judge had used to his client from the Bench, he declined to put any question to this witness.

The judge replied, that it was irregular in the prisoner to interrupt the Shristadar, whilst he was reading the deposition of this witness as given before the Magistrate, and whenever the prisoner would attempt irregularly to interrupt the Court, he would always check him.

Mr. Bignell remarked, that it is always optional with the prisoner to appear either in propria persona or through his vakeel ; but if he files a vakultnama, as this prisoner had done in his case, it was, according to the Mofussil practice, irregular in him to interrupt the proceedings, but properly he ought to leave his case entirely to the discretion of his vakeel.

Mr. Shaw replied, that it was not his intention to dictate to the Court what its practice should be, or to interfere with it ; but he certainly would continue examining this witness after what had just occurred.

The Judge then asked Mr. Graham, whether he had any questions to put to this witness. Mr. Graham replied in the negative, as likewise did the prisoners when questioned on that point.

The defendant's mookteers to-day filed, we believe, the names of nine witnesses, whom they most urgently required immediately after the case for the prosecution would be closed.

Whilst Mr. Shaw was cross-examining one of the witnesses to-day, a conversation arose from it, in which Mr. Shaw informed the Court, that he had understood from Mr. Samuells, the Magistrate of this district, whilst he was conducting the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution in this case, that all the witnesses who had been examined before the Magistrate for the prosecution, would likewise be examined before the Sessions Judge in this case.

Mr. Bignell replied, that he, as the Vakeel for the prosecution, would call only such witnesses to be examined as he imagined would tend to prove the charges stated in the indictment, which he had preferred against these prisoners, and omit the examination of those whose testimony he did not consider to be essential to his case ; although they might have been previously examined before the Magistrate of the district, preparatory to drawing up the indictment against the prisoners ; but he had no objections to the defendants subpoenaing any of these witnesses for the defence if they considered their evidence to be serviceable to their case ; but with regard to the Revd. Mr. Deere, regarding whose evidence this dispute arose, all that he could say was, that his testimony would not injure his case, for he had seen Mr. Deere since he gave his evidence before the Magistrate, and Mr. Deere had informed him, that he had since that period seen the prisoner, and he could now confidently say, that he was Kisto Lal.

Mr. Shaw remarked, that as Mr. Curtis had, in consequence of the testimony of Prawukissen's evidence, subpoenaed many witnesses whose names were not in the list of witnesses submitted in this case for the prosecution, he supposed that the Judge would have called all those who had been examined before the Magistrate in this case. Such he had understood the practice generally to be, but if he had been misinformed, he stood corrected.

Mr. Curtis replied, that those witnesses had been called in consequence of some unforeseen circumstance having arisen from the case; but generally speaking, it was not his intention to interfere, but let the parties call their own witnesses to prove their respective cases.

There being no other witnesses in waiting, the man who had been yesterday sent to the jail, because he refused to take his oath, on any of the forms prescribed by the Court, was brought up again to-day, and on his persisting in his refusal, recommitted to jail. Afterwards Mr. Biguell proposed to adjourn the further hearing of this case until Friday next, the 7th instant, which, he said, would be preferable; by that time there would arrive witnesses enough to occupy the Court for one whole day instead of sitting for one or two hours over every two or three witnesses, as they may happen to arrive. This proposition being acceded to by both the Judge and the prisoner's vakeels, the Court adjourned till 10 o'clock A. M. Friday, the 7th instant, in consequence of the present non-attendance of witnesses for the prosecution.—Hurkaru, December 7.

DECEMBER 8, 1837.

Paul Christian deposed.—I have for the last six years been a resident of Kishenagur, but formerly I resided in the district of Burdwan. I recognize Sham Lal's son Kisto Lal, and the Rajah of Hurdhoo. In the month of December 1833, I went to the residence of the Rev. Mr. Kraukenberg at Kishenagur, and we went to preach the gospel to the residents of that town, where we saw Sham Lal standing in the verandah of his house. After a short conversation with the clergyman, Sham Lal introduced us, in a small room, to his son Kisto Lal, and requested us to converse with him, and we there had an argument with Kisto Lal on various religious topics. The next day we repeated our visit accompanied by Mohes Pandit, and renewed our theological arguments. During the controversy Kisto Lal frequently interrupted it by indecent bursts of laughter. Mohes Pandit told Kisto Lal, that he believed he had seen him previously. Kisto Lal replied:—May be, when this soul inhabited another body." Hearing this reply the clergyman remarked to me in English, this man appears to be an impostor, and has no fixed notion of religion, it is needless conversing with him. After this the Clergyman ceased to visit him during the months of December 1833, and January 1834. I on various occasions have seen him seven times at Kishenagur and I saw him in company with Mohes Pandit. When he was in the Jail at Hooghly, I was directed to see and recognise him by the Clergyman. I did not then wish to expose him, and, therefore, when questioned by Mr. Walters, the Commissioners, after my interview with the prisoner, I requested ten days' time to consider and give my reply to his and Dr. Wise's queries regarding the identity of the prisoner; but I even then told them that I believed him to be Kisto Lal, but I could not then speak positively on that subject. The prisoner was lying on a cot. He was then very much emaciated, and had a beard and long hair tied up in a knot behind his head, and his dress was likewise different from what it is now. In consequence of Mr. Kraukenberg been enabled to recognize the prisoner as Kisto Lal by the tie of his hair, prisoner refused to tie it in a knot in my presence. I spoke to him and advised him to desist from persisting in this imposture. This was in 1836. After my return to Kishenagur, the Rev. Mr. Deere requested Sham Lal to send for his son Kisto Lal, and he would get him a situation in the zilla court; but the Gossian replied, that Kisto Lal had gone to the village of Maulpoor to collect some money, and said "go and search for him there." When I heard this, I replied there is no necessity of searching for Kisto Lal across the Pudda river, for he is in confinement in the jail of zilla Hooghly. After this I wrote to Dr. Wise a letter, informing him that if he wished to be satisfied of the identity of the prisoner with Kisto Lal, if he would send their travelling expenses, there were many residents at Kishenagur who had been acquainted with Kisto Lal and could proceed to Hooghly and recognize him. To this letter I received no reply. From the time I ceased my visits to Kisto Lal in January 1834, I neither saw nor heard of him, until I saw him in the zilla jail of Hooghly in 1836. I saw his father Sham Lal in 1835, at the house of an Indigo planter. His son was not then with him. Mr. Kraukenberg is not now residing within the East India Company's territories. I have no doubt that the prisoner is Kisto Lal, he is so exactly like him. If it were possible for two persons to be the exact resemblance of each other, then there may be a doubt, not otherwise.

Questioned by Mr. Graham. I did not see yesterday evening Menk Sing. I saw the Shristadar, Munsaram, on the road, and questioned him regarding the payment of my expenses in coming as an evidence in this case. He referred me to the sessions judge. The reappearance of Rajah Periah Chhoder at Bancoorah, was a common rumour amongst the vulgar people: I took no notice of it. I neither know whether the Pseudo Rajah was arrested at Bancoorah, or that Porau Baboo wrote to the Rev. Mr. Deere to come and see the prisoner, his expenses being paid to him, nor did Porau Baboo make me any similar offer.

This witness claimed 11 rupees as his travelling expenses, and the Sessions Judge allowed him 10 rupees.

Ramchunder Mittur, Mohorir, in the Collectorate department of Burdwan, deposed. I reside in the village Lomalpoor, zillah Burdwan. I recognize Kisto Lal, the son of Sham Lal, alias Shamanund Gossain. Shamanund used often to come to my house, at Tailmarree, in Burdwan, and put up there for 10 days at a time. He was my family priest. In the year 1237 B. S. Kisto Lal quarrelled with his father, and came and resided for 2 or 3 months at my house. In 1241 B. S. Kisto Lal again visited me at Tailmarree. During the first visit he was a candidate for employment under Government, but at the latter he had assumed the habits of a sacerdotal character. He on that occasion resided 15 days in my house. Subsequently in 1242, I saw him in Kishnagur. At that time, he resided in the house of Komul Raur, and many persons came to see him, and said the young Rajah is returned. I never contradicted this rumour. I advised him to desist from this imposture, otherwise he would get into trouble; but he paid no attention to this counsel. I gave no contradiction to the rumour, because if I had done so, I would have been taken before the authorities, and my depositions taken and an order passed in it. I only mentioned the circumstance to my brother. My brother likewise saw the prisoner when he visited me in 1237 B. S., and 1241 B. S. My brother still resides in Burdwan. His name is Jagget Mitter, and he has not been subpoenaed in this case. When the prisoner was at Komul Raur's, I did not see any person attending on him.

Questioned by Mr. Graham.—It was a little previous to the Doorgah Pooja, that the prisoner was at Kishnagar, in his assumed character of Pettab Chunder. He was never in circumstances to be able to engage my brother's service. Gouri Lal was younger and shorter than the prisoner, but he resembled him very much; he was rather sun-burnt. I have no recollection as to whether he was pock-marked or not. Kisto Lal had ten toes and 10 fingers.

Deoanuth Gangoly, deposed, I resided at Sreekanth in Zilla Burdwan. I know this man, (pointing to the Pseudo Rajah) but I do not know his name. I saw him during the month of Assaur, four or five years ago, dressed as an ascetic, in the house of Doorga Doss Mundel, for some days. Doorga Doss Mundel died in Kirtick last. Another ascetic accompanied the prisoner to Sreekanth, and Prawnkissen waited on him there. Prawnkissen had three names. He called himself at Bincoorah Kirpanund and Ghareeram. I am certain that this prisoner is the Gossain. I saw him at Sreekanth four years ago; but I do not know this name. I never went with Ke panund to Kishnagar. The Chota Gossain had different features from this prisoner. Prawnkissen invariably accompanied the minor ascetic to Doorga Mundel's house. I never saw either of the two Gossains drink any intoxicating liquor.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell. I never heard these Gossains' names at Sreekanth. They went under the appellation of the Burra and Chota Gossains.

Questioned by Mr. Graham. I do not know from whence the prisoner came to Sreekanth. Sooroo Naran Deo, the Chota Gossain, was handsomer than the prisoner, and was shorter.

Sham Hograh, deposed, I am a resident of Sreekanth, where I saw the Pseudo Raja resting as a Gossain four or five years ago, in the house of Doorga Mundel. I never heard his name. Seven months previous to this Gossain's arrival, another Gossain had come and resided for some days. I know Prawnkissen. I did not see him with the Gossain that came first to the house of Doorga Mundel, but he used to attend on the Chota Gossain.

Questioned by Mr. Graham. Prawn was at Sreekanth when the prisoner was there. I do not know the prisoner's name, or who he is.

Anoopchunder Dutt, resident of Sreekanth, deposed I recollect having seen the soi-disant Rajah three or four years ago, at the house of Doorga Mundel Doss, in Assaur or Shirabon. He was then in the dress of a Gossain. I do not know his name; but I have subsequently heard that he is called Pertab Chunder. I saw him once or twice at Sreekanth. I know Kirpanund, alias Prawnkissen. He has become insane and embraced Christianity. He was at Sreekanth when prisoner was there. Prisoner only came once to my village. If the other Prawnkissen waited on the Chota Gossain, who was fairer and about the same height as this prisoner. Prawnkissen did not accompany that Gossain to Sreekanth; but in consequence of his having performed a miraculous cure on Doorga Mundel, Prawn became his disciple. I do not know the name of either of the Gossains, or from whence they come, or where they intended to go. About seven days after the departure of the prisoner, the inhabitants of Sreekanth bruited about that "the burra Gossain, who had resided at Doorga Mundel's, was the young Raja of Burdwan. On my inquiring of Doorga Mundel who this Gossain was, he said I need not tell you now who he is, you will know that in a few days; and I guessed from this reply that he was some great personage.

Solochurn Buttachar, resident of Sreekanth, deposed, I am a Bramun beggar. I know the principal person, his name is Gossain. He was in Doorga Mundel's house, about four years ago in Assaur for 12 days. Kirpanund was with him, during his stay at Sreekanth. I saw him three or four times. The inhabitants of the village mobbed together and threw stones at him to turn him out of the village and pelted him with mud, because he was a magician. The magician then went to Burdwan and about 20 days after his departure, there was a rumour in the village that he was changed to Raja Pertab Chunder of Burdwan. Kirpanund did not accompany him. I never heard from whence this Gossain had come. Some months previous to this Gossain's coming, another, taller than him, came to Sreekanth, about six or seven days after the chota Gossain's arrival, called on him at Doorga Mundel's dwelling.

In consequence of the Sessions Judge's language to the prisoner on Wednesday last, during the hearing of his case, Mr. Shaw has declined any further attendance on his behalf in this Court professionally.

Mr. Shaw has, we learn, been interdicted from visiting the prisoner in jail.—Herk. Dec. 10.

DECEMBER 10, 1838.

Wookinchund Chowdry, inhabitant of Moosabgunge, Zillah Burdwan, being sworn, after some difficulty, recollected the prisoner Kisto Lal, who had in 1239 or 1240, B. S., resided about 18 months in his house. I knew, said the witness, a father Sham Lal; he used occasionally to visit me. I know the prisoner to be Kisto Lal, because his features resemble that person. When he resided with me, he led a devotional life, and came in a palkee attended by a servant named Bhola-nauth. Gouri Lal, prisoner's brother, likewise came to my house occasionally, attended by Kirpanund. Prisoner in the morning eat milk and rice, &c. and drink liquor at night. He had no disciples with him. Prisoner is darker and shorter than he than was. This knowledge was my father's accounts occasionally.

Questioned by Mr. Graham. Never expecting to be examined regarding the prisoner. I took no notice whether he was pock-marked or not. In consequence of his drinking liquor, I did not go near him. He was not deeply marked. The Shristadar, the Nazir, and the Darogah of Chinsurah, and another, took me yesterday morning to the Houghly Jail. Besides me the whole of my village of Moosabgunge could recognize the prisoner to be Kisto Lal. Here he named about 16 persons. My father supplied his meals, but never lent him any money.

Mr. Trower wished to put some questions to the prisoner previous to his swearing positively to his identity after the lapse of time. This being assented to,

C. Trower, Esq., was sworn and said.—I was formerly very intimately acquainted with Rajah Pertab Chund for 8 years, and I think from the strong recollection of his countenance on my memory, I would be able to recognize him again if I were to see him. The picture which I saw in the Cutchery of the Magistrate of this district, I considered to be a striking likeness of Pertab Chund. I have met the prisoner twice, once in Mr. Prinsep's office, and once in the Magistrate's Court here, and I do not trace the least resemblance between him and Rajah Pertab Chund, as far as my recollection will enable me to speak on that point. The witness here wished to put the questions afore alluded to, to enable him to speak with greater certainty on this point.

The prisoner on being consulted said, I will recollect striking circumstances, but trifling matters have been all forgotten by me. I will, however, endeavour to reply to them to the best of my remembrance.

1st question. Do you recollect my going to Burdwan, as the Collector of Burdwan and Hooghly. A. It was about 10 or 12 years before my quitting my Raj? I recollect the circumstance.

2d. Do you recollect who was then the Judge and Magistrate of Burdwan? A. It was before Mr. Martin was appointed Judge and Magistrate of Burdwan. I think it was in Mr. Bayley's time.

Mr. Trower declined putting any further question, and said, that from the particular circumstances that occurred regarding these questions, he could never have forgotten the man's name, and it was neither Mr. Bayley nor Mr. Martin.

Mr. Graham wished to place the prisoner beside the portrait, and have them examined.

Mr. Trower replied, from his voice, his features, his height and every circumstance that has occurred since I have seen him, coupled with his replies to my questions, I have not the least hesitation in saying, that he is not Pertab Chund. I have already examined him twice minutely, and I do not trace the least resemblance between him and Pertab Chund.

Questioned by the Prisoner. Was not Mr. Peter Emmer and Mr. Ridley in your service? A. Peter Emmer I brought up. Ridley was in my service.

2d. Was not my dewan Seeboo Colleeah? A. Yes, I made him my dewan.

Questioned 3d. Did they not visit me in the Rajbarry? A. I cannot say, I was not acquainted with their habits.

Prisoner wished to converse with Mr. Trower further to assist his memory in recognizing the prisoner to be Pertab Chund.

Mr. Trower replied, that if the prisoner were to speak to him till eternity, he would never be able to convince him that he was Pertab Chund.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell. Peter Emmer called on me and consulted me as to his giving evidence on the identity of the prisoner, and he told me during the conversation, that he was very young at the time when he had seen the Rajah, and he therefore imagined, that he could not give any satisfactory replies on this point. I declined giving him any advice on the subject. Dr. Scott was in 1816 or 17 at Burdwan.

Takoordoss Chuckerbutty, resident of Moosabgunge, deposed to having seen the prisoner Kisto Lal in his village, whom he recognized, and added, that he likewise knew his father Sham Lal, who used to visit his village and reside with Budden Chowdry and Premchund, there. They were devotees, but they used to drink intoxicating liquors and taught both Budden and Premchund to get drunk likewise. I have accounts written by me of the expenditure which Premchund and Budden Chowdry incurred on account of the prisoner Kisto Lal, his father Sham Lal, and his brother Gour Lal, whilst they resided in their houses. I was a servant of Budden and Premchund, and wrote their accounts occasionally, and can produce them from my employers house, if requested to do so, in a few days. Kisto Lal resided for 18 months in Premchund's house in 1839 B. S.

The witness was desired to produce these papers by the 3d of the ensuing Bengally month in Court, and testify to them.

Bykanthnath Chowdry, inhabitant of Moosabgunge, deposed. I do not recognize any of the prisoners distinctly. I did not yesterday, in Jail, recognize the prisoner to be Kisto Lal. I used seldom to be in my native village, but generally with my employer, Mr. David Hare, at Calcutta. I heard that Gossains named Sham Lal, Kisto Lal, and Gour Lal did occasionally reside at Premchund's house at Moosabgunge, but I never saw them there.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell. — Yesterday, when I saw the prisoner in the jail here, I told the jail Darogah, that I could not speak to his identity as Kisto Lal.

Doorgadoss Gungooly, inhabitant of Moosabgunge. I do not recognize any of the prisoners. On the Judge pointing out the pseudo Pertab Chunder to the witness, witness said, I only saw him last night at the jail here, and never before in my life. I never saw him at Moosabgunge, nor do I know either Sham Lal, Kisto Lal, nor Kissenpersud. I never visited Premchund at Moosabgunge. I never heard of any Gossain in my village in 1239, B. S.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell. I saw the prisoner in jail yesterday evening, but I never told the darogah that I had recognized him to be Kisto Lal. I am a distant relation of Premchund's, but in consequence of a law suit I had with him regarding some ancestral property, I am on indifferent terms with him.

Mr. Bignell applied to have securities taken from them, because he intended to move the court to prosecute the two last witnesses for perjury.

The Judge then intimated to this witnesses, that both he and the last witness must give security of 200 rupees each, to answer to the charge of perjury about to be brought against them by the Government prosecutor in this case.

Deponent added, that ever since his arrival the night before last, he has been kept by the Nazeeer in strict confinement, and not allowed to converse with any person whatsoever, not even his brother, who is a Mohoir in the employ of the Mahomedan Law officer of the court.

Gungapersad Tewarry was re-called and re-examined this-day on his former written assertion. There are other uncles of the prisoner besides myself, viz. Sewpersad Tewarry, a resident of Mookiandar in Zillah Jessore, and Mudden Tewarry, residing in the same place, Tukeer Tewarry and Sooroop Tewarry. There are no other relatives besides these and myself of the prisoner Kisto Lal Tewarry. They have all seen Kisto Lal.

Subpoenas were, in consequence of the evidence of this witness, ordered to be issued against these relatives of the prisoner.

Gungapersad Tewarry, questioned by Mr. Graham. I do not know whether Kisto Lal had six toes on any of his feet.

Mr. Bignell intimated, that he would forego the prosecution for perjury against Bykanth Nath Chowdry, but he had sufficient proofs to convict Doorgadoss Gungooly. In consequence of this intimation, the Judge ordered Bykanth Nath to be released, but ordered Doorgadoss to be made over to the Nazir of the Civil Court, and kept in custody until he gave bail for 200 rupees, to appear in this court and answer to the charge of perjury about to be instituted against him.

Mr. Bignell intimated, that there were only six witnesses remaining, and requested that the case may be postponed on Wednesday next, as he had urgent business to compel his attendance at the Sudder Revenue Board of Calcutta on that day.

This request was complied with by the Court.—Hurry, December 12.

Bholanath Roy, resident of Barnagore, deposed. I recognize the soi disant Rajah. About 12 or 13 years ago, I went to Kishenaghur to learn to read and write, where I saw Kisto Lal, and I subsequently heard at Calcutta, that a Burdwan Rajah had come to the Foujdarry Balakhana. I went with some others to see him. The soi disant Rajah on seeing me, recognized me, and asked me whether my name was not Bholanath. I replied "yes." It struck me at the time, that the soi disant Rajah resembled Kisto Lal. I have heard that Kisto Lal's father's name was Sham Lal, but I never saw him. I have heard that the prisoner had been to Barnagore, but I was not present when he went there. This was about three years ago, previous to my seeing him in Calcutta.

Ram Narrain, Moonshy of Barnagore. I saw the soi disant Rajah about two or three years ago at Barnagore. He resided at a garden there called Khass Bagan. He was then attired as a devotee. I do not know his name. I think this prisoner is the same person, I then saw there. How long he resided there I do not know. I saw him four or five days in that state. I remember not whether he had any followers or companions with him. Many Gossains come and go through my village under similar circumstances. There was nothing peculiar in him to attract my attention particularly. Who he is or what is his name, I am not aware. My house was surrounded by the police peons, and I was prevented ingress and egress from and to it, unless I would attend to the subpoena in this case. This compulsory process forced me to come here and give my deposition in this case.

Seelookur, of Barnagore, deposed. I recognize the soi disant Periab Chunder. I weave cloth in my house and not under a tree. I am of the same caste as Itadu Kissen Bysack. This prisoner's home I do not know. I saw him about two or three years ago at Khass Bagan in Barnagore. He was then attired as a devotee and had a beard. He resided about six months at Khass Bagan, and about eight months altogether at Barnagore. His complexion was then darker than it now is. He lodged there in the house of an aged widow. He employed his time in tying up his hair, eating sweetmeats and drinking milk. I used to see him daily during his stay at Barnagore. I am sure this prisoner is that devotee; but he is a little stouter. He had a few women in his employ. He never told me who he was and from whence he had come, or where he went. During his stay at Barnagore, many women waited on him. I heard of his being subsequently at Calcutta, but I never saw him there. I am not intimate with or on visiting terms with Rada Kissen Bysack. He is a rich man and I am a poor one. I do not know the name of the widow in whose house the prisoner resided. He had two or three bearded servants, who were his disciples and ministered to his wants.

After the close of this witnesses's testimony, Mr. Bignell remarked, that there were no more witnesses for the prosecution required by him, with the exception of Moothoor Mookerjee, who has concealed himself in his house at Chitpoor; and the witnesses subpoenaed from Mooklada, viz the relatives of Kisto Lal, as deposed to by his uncle Gunga Persad Tawarry.

The Judge replied, that these were, in his opinion, very material witnesses, for they could depose to the prisoner's identity as Kisto Lal.

Mr. Graham remarked, that if these men are the relatives of Kisto Lal, why do they not, in the absence of Sham Lal, come forward as next of kin, and claim the property of Sham Lal their brother, deceased, which the amlas of the judge's Court of Nuddea have sworn in now, for want of an heir, to the custody of that Court, and which Court has issued a proclamation for the heir to come forward and claim his property; for in the absence of Kisto Lal, they evidently appear to be next of kin, and entitled to it?

The judge replied, that as long as Kisto Lal was alive they could not claim it; and Mr. Bignell added, that Mr. Graham, he believed, had himself stated in a correspondence in one of the Calcutta papers, that he would produce the real Kisto Lal, who, Mr. Bignell has been subsequently informed, was got into a scrape and is in custody by the orders of the Magistrate of Zillah Peigunnahs.

Mr. Graham replied, that his letter stated, that if he produced a Kisto Lal, it would be the real one, and that it is yet remaining to be determined upon.

The judge here suggested, that it would be advisable to give notice to the defendants, and their mooktars, to prepare themselves to enter upon their defence.

Mr. Graham wished timely notice to be given him of the day on which he would be required to enter upon the defence, so that he may be able to secure the services of Mr. Morton for the prisoner on that day.

Mr. Bignell observed, that he believed that his case would be closed by Saturday the 15th instant, by which time, if Moothornath Mookerjee did not arrive, he would not stop the case for him.

The judge likewise remarked, that he believed that Mr. Morton had been engaged as Counsel in the case of Mr. Shaw versus Mr. Ogilvie, for a false imprisonment, and until that case was decided at the Sessions, he would not be able to attend here; but be that as it may, Mr. Morton has already filed a mooktanama in this Court, as the prisoner's mooktar, and he can come whenever he likes; the Court certainly will not postpone the case a single day for his accommodation.

After this the judge asked Mr. Bignell, whether he intended to bring a charge against the witness who had been committed yesterday into custody at his request, on a charge of perjury; for if so, he must order his writ of commitment to be drawn up, and refer him to the district magistrate to have his case tried before him.

Mr. Bignell replied, that he could distinctly prove that the prisoner had, when taken to the jail, the evening previous to his giving his depositions in this Court, stated before the Police Authorities there, that he had recognized the prisoner to be Kisto Lal, the devotee, who had resided for some time formerly in his village: whereas he has now on oath denied all knowledge of him in this Court. Mr. Bignell did not add whether the statement which he asserted this witness had made before the police amlas in the jail, was on oath or casual conversation; but he remarked, that the prisoner having sworn on oath that conversation to have passed between him and the police amlas, constituted the ground of perjury.

Mr. Graham wished to move the Court, that if this witness was committed the other witnesses, as the prosecution was a Government one, would get cowed, and the witnesses for the defence made to refrain from speaking boldly; and he added, if he did not think so, he would have moved for the commitment of one of the prosecutors witnesses, Kassinath, who had formerly stated, that he had recognized, the prisoner to be Rajah Periab Chunder, and afterwards, in this Court, denied that fact on oath.

Mr. Bignell said, that if Mr. Graham would undertake to prosecute, he was welcome to have any of the witnesses, either for the prosecution or the defence, committed for perjury, if he thinks he can produce sufficient evidence to prove the charge against him.

The judge then ordered the commitment of the witness in question to be drawn out, and the prisoner made over to the magistrate on a charge of perjury.

After this the witness, who had been confined for some days, because he had refused to take his oath, was again brought up and asked if he would now be sworn in any form; but he persisted in his refusal. The judge then, without swearing him, asked him if he recognized the soi disant Pertab Chund, and whether he recollected ever having seen him in his village as a gossain, 3 or 4 years ago. The witness replied to both the questions in the negative.

The judge then remarked, that it would be useless in examining this man any longer in custody, and that his deposition, it is evident, will be of no avail in this case.

Mr. Bignell replied, that he considered the man had been sufficiently punished, and he may be released.

The judge then ordered his release, and the Court adjourned for the trial of this case till Friday the 14th inst. — Harkaru, December 13.

DECEMBER 14, 1838.

Jugget Nurrean Mitter, resident of Tailmaree, deposed. I recognize the soi disant Pertab Chunder. His real name is Kisto Lal. He is the son of Sham Lal Bramacharee. I have seen him 2 or 3 times when he visited me at my house in Tailmaree, Zillah Burdwan. His father was with him when I first saw him. He first visited me 1235 B. S., and staid two or three months. On the second visit 1237 B. S. his brother accompanied him; and he then staid about two months. On these occasions he was a candidate for employment in the Company's Court. His third visit to me was in 1247 B. S. He then came in the habit of a Gossain, and was accompanied by a Brahmin. He staid 10 days with me, and then a palankeen came for his use, and he set off for Mookabunge. After this, when I was in the employ of Mr. Taylor, the Collector of Resumption in Zillah Hooghly and Burdwan, during the last mohorum, I heard a great rumour of the re-appearance of the late Rajah of Burdwan. In consequence of this report, went with others across the river to see him at Bhatpara, where his boats were then moored. When I saw the pseudo Pertab Chunder, I recognized him to be my old intimate acquaintance Kisto Lal. He held a Nepalese creese in his hand, and was seated in a budgeron in great state, surrounded by many attendants. He recognized me and ordered his guards to seize me, and four up-country peons seized me and brought me to him. The peon lifted up the creese and threatened to slay me with it. This greatly alarmed me, and I faintd away. Afterwards Kisto Lal ordered four men to keep watch over me, and I was taken up under their custody to Culna, where, during the confusion occasioned by his arrest by the Magistrate of Burdwan, I jumped over board and escaped by swimming across the river, and fled to my house. During the period Kisto Lal was proceeding up to Culna, he studiously avoided anchoring on the Hooghly side of the river. In the B. S. 1242, there was a report in Burdwan, that the young Rajah of Burdwan had come to Kishenaghur. I was then at Calcutta, and on my return from thence, four months subsequent to the rumour. I enquired of my brother, Ramchund, the particulars of this rumour, who informed me that it was only our old friend Kisto Lal, who had been endeavouring to pass himself off for the late Rajah of Burdwan. I know Kisto Lal. I have heard he was an inhabitant of Kishenaghur. I got acquainted with his family, because I am well known to keep open house in Burdwan for all devotees, and they, therefore, availed themselves of it and used to put up at my house whenever they went there. Prisoner is darker and stouter now than he was then. He is fairer and taller than Gour Lal was, and bears not the least resemblance to him. What has become of Gour Lal I do not know. I cannot say precisely how many days Kisto Lal kept me in confinement. I suppose it was four, five or six days; but I was during the whole period insensible, and could not distinguish night from day.

Why he confined me I do not know. When I saw him I said, why have you assumed this imposture? It was on hearing this he became enraged and ill-treated me.

Questioned by Mr. Shaw.—I heard there was a person named Therroo Chunder Moonshy, in Kisto Lal's retinue, but I never had any conversation with him, or any one in the boat. I might have called the prisoner Maharajah, but I never called him hazoor—(adds subsequently) I never called him Maharajah. There was a person named Moodoo Podar, who distributed pice to the prisoner's men. He now and then gave me a few pice for diet money. I never distributed pice to any person. I was insensible during all the period I was with the prisoner. I never presented a petition to the prisoner for employment, and if my name is enrolled amongst the prisoner's servants on that occasion, it must be a false entry. I am a mohorir, and I can read and write. I never wrote the entries of the expences of the prisoner's train during the period I proceeded with him to Culna. I do not know who is my zemindar, but my father's zemindar was the Rajah of Burdwan.

Luckynath Bose deposed. I saw, about four or five years ago, the soi disant prisoner in the village of Mailladeepoor, where I resided. He then lived as a devotee in the house of Ram Ruten Chatterjee, and said his name was Aluck Shaw. He had no attendants on him to the best of my knowledge. He lived at Mailladeepoor about one month, and I used at intervals of three and four days to call on him and pay my respects to him. Since that period I never saw him, until I saw him the day before yesterday in the jail of this district. I am not sure whether he called more than once in my village. No other devotees came to the house of Ram Ruten Chatterjee at Mailladeepoor to my knowledge. The prisoner Sagur Dhur was in a village near my habitation. From whence Aluck Shah came to Mailladeepoor, and where he went to from thence, I know not. I have no ostensible means of livelihood at present. I do not know Prawakissen nor Kirpanund.

Roopchund Ghose deposed. I am a resident of Mailladeepoor. I recognize the soi disant Rajah and the prisoner Sagur Dhur. I saw the former about five years ago in the house of Ram Ruten Chatterjee, at Mailladeepoor, where he resided as a devotee for one month, and I saw him four or five times during that period. I do not know his name, or who he is, from whence he came, or where he went. He had no attendants with him. From that period I have never seen him until to-day—(adds afterwards) I saw him the day before yesterday, in the Hooghly Jail. Three or four years previous to this prisoner visiting Mailladeepoor, another devotee came there. I do not know who he was, whence he came, where he went, or how long he staid there. He likewise put up at the house of Ram Ruten Chatterjee. I know neither Prawakissen nor Kerpanand.

Jugget Mundal, being called, Mr. Curtis asked whether, as this deponent is likewise a resident of Mailladeepoor, and had nothing more to say beyond what the three witnesses who had just preceded him had deposed already, it would not be unnecessary to have him examined. Mr. Bignell, after having consulted the Sheristadar Munsu Ram, and learnt that the witness could but confirm what the others had already deposed to, he saw no necessity for examining him, unless the defence wished it. Mr. Shaw replied, that he did not wish to have the witness examined, and the witness was consequently dismissed without being examined.

The Sheristadar then informed the Court, that there were no more witnesses in attendance to-day, but two were expected this evening; and that the houses of a few more had been surrounded, notices stuck at their doors, and egress and ingress to and from the houses denied them, until they attended to their subpoenas in this case.

Mr. Curtis proposed; that if the witnesses for the prosecution are not all in attendance before Tuesday, then to put the prisoners on their defence on that day.

The Mohamedan Law Officer said, that Tuesday and Wednesday, were Mahomedan holidays, viz. the Eed. The day was then fixed for Thursday in consequence thereof.

Mr. Bignell said, that the only witness for whose attendance he was anxious, was Ram Mohun Mookerjee, whom he expected daily. And the Sherishtadar said that Ramgol Mohun, was expected daily from Dinagepoor by dawk, to swear to the prisoner's identity. With the exception of these two, there were no very material witnesses; and Mr. Bignell said, that after Monday, if the evidence of the witnesses for the prosecution are not in readiness, they may commence their defence that day; and if any of the witness for the prosecution come, they can be taken up and examined as they come.

Mr. Shaw, who resumed to day the case for the prisoner, said, that he wished two days' clear notice previous to his, client being put on his defence.

Mr. Shaw then brought to the notice of Mr. Curtis, that he had been denied access to the prisoner in jail, which, as he was the counsel for the prisoner appeared strange to him. The Judge replied, that the jail was exclusively under the Magistrate's control, and on Mr. Bignell informing the court, that Mr. Samuells was very willing to assign his reason for the prohibitory order, if officially requested to do so, Mr. Curtis had an official letter addressed to Mr. Samuells on that subject.

Mr. Graham presented an English petition on behalf of the pseudo Rajah, praying, in the event of the Government not being disposed to assist him in enforcing the attendance of his witnesses, and as many of them had refused to come unless their expenses were paid to them, that the property now under the custody of the Zillah Court of Hooghly, which had been seized at Culna as his, may be sold for his benefit, and the proceeds appropriated towards the expenses of his case.

Mr. Curtis had refused to take this petition on the plea, that the preamble of it insinuated that the Government were exerting their influence to convict the prisoner on the indictment now pending against him, which he said was an unfounded and gratuitous slur on the Government, and sent for Mr. Bignell.

Mr. Bignell replied, that he thought the insinuation too absurd to notice it, and that the prayer of the petition might be granted. He added, that he had, however, seen the prisoner in the jail the other day, in consequence of some reports he had read in the daily papers, regarding the complaints made by the prisoner as to his comforts in the jail, and had asked him whether he required anything, and whether he had any cause of complaint. The prisoner on that occasion had informed him, that he had no cause of complaint and required nothing; and when questioned to his petition of complaint, the prisoner had told him, that the gentlemen about him had drawn up the petitions, and he had signed them without being aware of their contents; and Mr. Bignell insinuated, that, perhaps, the like may be the case in the present instance.

Mr. Shaw herein interrupted Mr. Bignell, and informed him, that his questions to the prisoner,—considering that he had all along his counsels to guide him and attend to his wants, and that Mr. Bignell was the counsel for the prosecution,—were both unbecoming and gratuitous; and his insinuation as to the prisoner not knowing the contents of the petitions presented on his behalf, was an unbecoming and unbecoming slur on his Counsel in open court, and he requested that the like may never be again repeated before him.

Mr. Bignell here explained to Mr. Shaw.

Mr. Shaw then informed the Judge, that the prisoner in presenting this petition, did not mean any thing offensive to the Government, as he on a further perusal of it would perceive; but one thing is evident, that there is a strong feeling existing abroad, that the Government feels an interest in the conviction of the prisoner, and that at one time Mr. Samuells and Mr. Smith had entertained an idea of prosecuting Rada Kissen Bysack and others in this case, for having assisted the prisoner with money.

Mr. Curtis then passed an order for the sale of the prisoner's property in custody of this court, and that public notice of five previous days be given within the district, by a public crier, of the intended sale; and Mr. Shaw said, that he would advertise the same in the papers.—Hurkaru, December 17.

DECEMBER 15, 1838.

There being no witnesses in attendance to-day, on behalf of the prosecution, the case was postponed till Monday, the 17th instant.

Mr. Shaw requested to know whether the Judge had received from the Magistrate any reply to the letter which the Judge had yesterday dispatched to that officer requesting him to assign his motives for his interdiction to Mr. Shaw being permitted to see the pseudo Rajah in the Criminal Jail of the district.

Mr. Curtis replied, that he had, and Mr. Samuells had stated, that it having been brought to his notice that Mr. Shaw had gone into the civil jail and the hospital, and held conversation with the witnesses for the prosecution who were king's evidence, he had in consequence thereof interdicted his being permitted to go into the Jail, as Mr. Shaw's proceedings on that occasion had been irregular and contradictory to the Mohussil Jail regulations.

Mr. Shaw replied, that if he had in the instance alluded to by Mr. Samuells, transgressed the Jail regulations, why did not the people on duty there, prevent him. They surely had nothing to dread from him, for he never betrayed any symptoms of resisting the public authorities; and even if he had, there could be no apprehension of violence from him, as he only had his walking stick about with him. Mr. Shaw further added, that Mr. Samuells was not justified in insinuating these remarks against him; nor was this the first unjust insinuation Mr. Samuells had cast against him. There appeared sometime ago, a letter in the Englishman newspaper, of which letter Mr. Samuells had the kindness to consider Mr. Shaw to be the author. The letter was signed INTERLOPER, and related to certain circumstances regarding the treatment the prisoners who had been apprehended with the soi disant Rajah had undergone in the Hooghly Jail and hospital. "Now," said Mr. Shaw, "if I were ascharitably inclined to wards Mr. Samuells in this instance as he has been to me, I might with equal justice suspect him to be the writer of the letter, which appeared in reply to that letter in the Bengal Hurkaru, signed JUSTITIA." Mr. Shaw added, that with regard to the alleged conversation, the sum total of it went no further than his admonishing these witnesses to testify the truth before the Court, without fear or apprehension. He concluded by informing the Judge, that having been informed by the Magistrate that the prisoner was now solely under the Session Judge's control, he begged to know whether the Judge would permit him, Mr. Shaw, the prisoner's mooktar, to see him in the Criminal Jail, and thus overrule the Magistrate's prohibition on that point; or whether he would uphold the magistrate's order regarding it?

Mr. Curtis replied, that with regard to the persons on duty in the Jail not opposing Mr. Shaw's going into the civil jail and the hospital, and there discoursing with the witnesses, which was an irregularity on his part, was that, they perhaps, were afraid of him, he being a European. Be that as it may, Mr. Shaw had no right to go either into the Civil Jail or the hospital, in neither of which places any of his clients were then confined; and his discoursing with the witnesses for the prosecution, was certainly contrary to the existing regulations. With regard to his now permitting Mr. Shaw to see the prisoner in Jail, he begged to inform him, that the Jail was solely under the control of the Magistrate, and he could not well interfere with him in his duty; but that as the prisoner could be brought to the Sessions Court, almost daily, Mr. Shaw could there both see and speak to him, and Mr. Graham could go any time that he might wish to see the prisoner into the Jail, and communicate Mr. Shaw's messages to him; added to which, if Mr. Shaw would on any occasion intimate to him that he wished to see the prisoner, he (the Judge) would direct the Magistrate to send him to the Sessions Court, where Mr. Curtis said Mr. Shaw may retire with the prisoner into Mr. Curtis's private room, and converse with the prisoner uninterruptedly even for hours, if he wished it. And as to whatever the newspapers might publish about the case, he advised Mr. Shaw to take no notice of these publications; for, added he, although I am informed that you published in the Hurkara paper that I abused your client in Court during the trial of his case the other day, which I never did, yet I never paid any regard to it, nor do I intend in future to pay any attention to whatever they may publish about me in this case.

Mr. Shaw thanked the Judge for his courteous offer in tendering him his private room in the Court whenever Mr. Shaw might wish to speak to the prisoner apart; but he begged to decline this offer, as likewise that of making Mr. Graham the medium of his communication with the prisoner whilst in Jail; remarking, that he was not applying for Mr. Graham, but for himself. He then told the Judge, that in the Supreme Court the prisoners' attorneys were permitted to see them even after their conviction, which was not the case in the present instance. With regard to the publication in the Hurkara, he denied all communication or contact with that paper, with which he believed Mr. Samuells had more to do than him; and so far from wishing to give publicity to the matter mentioned by the Judge, he had exerted all his influence to suppress it altogether. He concluded by requesting the Judge to furnish him with an official copy of Mr. Samuells's objections to Mr. Shaw being permitted to visit the prisoner whilst in the Jail, and by the Judge explicitly answering him whether he would set aside, as the presiding Judge before whom the prisoner's case is now pending, that order or not. He begged to and that he now made the application on his own behalf, as the mooktar of the prisoner in this case.

Mr. Curtis replied, that on Mr. Shaw making a written official application, he would ass an order on it for Mr. Shaw being permitted to obtain an official copy of Mr. Samuells's reply to the Judge regarding his objections to admit Mr. Shaw into the Jail; but with regard to whether he would set aside, or not, Mr. Samuells's order on that matter, he would consider of it and let Mr. Shaw know his determination within a few days.

Mr. Shaw then requested Mr. Curtis to know whether he would, on an official application being made, permit the witnesses for the defence, whilst down here, to remain under his custody. Mr. Shaw added, that his reasons for making this request were, that the Magistrate's Sheristadar, Munshahram, may not see them and converse with them previous to their being brought into the Judge's Court to give their evidence in the case; for, Mr. Shaw added, that the Sheristadar had already had some conversation, which Mr. Shaw considered objectionable, with some of these witnesses; and this application was to prevent his doing the like again.

Mr. Curtis replied, that he could not grant Mr. Shaw's request, as in so doing he would be departing from the usual practice of his Court in similar instances. The witnesses must all, on their arrival at Hooghly, be made over to the Fouzdary Nazir, who will after that be answerable for their appearance in the Court, to give their testimony in the case; but he (Mr. Curtis) would take special care that the Fouzdary Sheristadar shall not be permitted to hold any objectionable conversation with any of them, and would order the Nazir to prohibit his repeating this mode of procedure.

Mr. Curtis then informed Mr. Shaw and Mr. Graham, that if the witnesses for the prosecution were not in attendance at the Court by Thursday next, he would, without postponing the case again for their conveniences, order the case for the prosecution to be closed, and desire the prisoners to commence their defence forthwith. — Hurk. Dec. 18.

DECEMBER 17, 1836.

Gungapersad Moakerjee, resident of Santipoor, deposed, that in the B. S. 1220, when I was about 20 years of age, I studied Persian in the school of Moonshy Ekram Ullee, at Kishenagur, and resided there with my brother in that city, who was then in the employ of Kassnath Baboo. I then used to see a person named Kisto Lal, the son of a devotee, resident of Kishenagur, who had an idol there. The pseudo Rajah strongly resembles that person, in so much so, that I would be very apt to take him for that individual; but whether he really is Kisto Lal or not, I cannot speak positively, as this occurred upwards of 25 years ago.

Questioned by Mr. Shaw. I now reside at Talmärrée. I came with others to see the pseudo Rajah in the Kutcherry here, and on remarking the strong resemblance the prisoner bore to Kisto Lal, it was overheard and some person reported it to the Magistrate, who, about 20 days ago, served me with a subpoena in this case. Kisto Lal, when I saw him, was fairer and much thinner than this prisoner is, had not any mustacheos, and was about 16 years of age. Here Mr. Shaw named several witnesses' names, who had been examined in this case as witnesses for the prosecution, and who had deposed, that they had seen Kisto Lal at Kishenagur, about the time this deponent had seen him there, and who had testified that they were inhabitants of Kishenagur; but this witness denied his acquaintanceship with all but two of them, who, it seems, are amlahs in the Judge's Court of zillah Nuddea. Deponent added, that for many years he has not been to Kishenagur, and it is 25 years since he last saw Kisto Lal.

Mr. Shaw remarked, that he had understood from Mr. Samuells, that he would not direct any more witnesses to be subpoenaed in this case after it had been closed in his Court; whereas by this witness's testimony, it appears, that he had been subpoenaed after this promise had been given.

Mr. Curtis replied, that he had nothing to do with that.

Seebnarrain Gangoly deposed, that he is resident of Dowlat Gunge, Zillah Nuddea; that about 15 or 16 years ago, he saw a person named Kisto Lal, the son of Sham Lal Bramacharee, residing at Kishenagur, whom the Pseudo Rajah strongly resembles; but whether he is that Kisto Lal or not, he could not positively declare. "I was then", continued the witness, "a candidate for a situation in the Magistrate's Court of that district, and was studying Persian. I resided at Kishenagur from 1220 B.S. until 1230 B.S. Kisto Lal had a brother, named Gour Lal. I do not know whether Sham Lal had another brother besides Gour Lal. I only heard of two brothers, Sham Lal and Gour Lal, Kisto Lal had a brother, but whether his name was Gour Lal or Sham Lal, I do not know. Kisto Lal, when I saw him, was fairer than the prisoner, and had no mustache. I have not seen him for the last 17 years. From whence Sham Lal came, I know not. Moesabgung is 10 coss from my village. This witness, it appears, was likewise one of those who had come to see the Pseudo Rajah in this case, and having expressed his opinion as to his resembling Kisto Lal, was reported to the Magistrate and served with a subpoena, at the same time as the last witness, with whom he had come to see the Pseudo Rajah.

Questioned by Mr. Shaw. Sham Lal had an idol at Gwaree; but he was not rich. Sham Lal was lame, but I never saw any horse in his possession, nor did I ever see Kisto Lal ride on horseback. I was acquainted with the officers of the district of Nuddea, and some of the inhabitants there. Here Mr. Shaw named some inhabitants of Kishenaghur, who had deposed in this case, but witness knew none of them. I only knew Kisto Lal, Sham Lal, his father, and his younger brother; whether he had any other relatives or not I do not know.

Mr. Curtis informed Mr. Shaw, that if the other witnesses for the prosecution were in the attendance, would he examine them, and then put the prisoners on their defence; if not, he would put the prisoners on their defence at once, and examine the witnesses whenever they may come.

Mr. Curtis informed Mr. Shaw, that he had issued orders to Mr. Samuells to admit Mr. Shaw into the jail, to see his clients whenever he may wish to see them there. He further allowed Mr. Shaw to take his witnesses as they arrived here into the jail, for the purpose of seeing whether they could recognize the pseudo Rajah. He very properly remarked, that as the prosecution had been allowed this indulgence, it is but fair that the defendants should be allowed the same privilege.

Mr. Shaw intimated to the Judge, that as there were now upwards of 20 witnesses for the defence already in attendance, and the number subpoenaed amounted to upwards of 270 altogether, if he were permitted to receive them on their arrival here, he would give a receipt for the witnesses and release the nazar from all responsibility for their re-appearing in this case as witness; but he would take the responsibility of it altogether on himself; and if let them escape, it would be his own loss. By this means he would save the Government from great expense, by doing away with the testimony of many whose evidence he may consider superfluous, as these witnesses get two annas a day diet money whilst here.

Mr. Curtis replied, that there can be no impediment to Mr. Shaw having free communication with the witnesses whenever he might wish to do so.

Mr. Bignell re-marked, that whatever might be the practice, the Zillah Courts, as to who is to have charge of the witnesses, should be adhered to.

Mr. Curtis said, that he cannot make the witnesses over to him altogether; but he ordered the nazar to permit Mr. Shaw to converse with them whenever he felt inclined to do so; and on the nazar remarking, that it is requisite for him to be present to prevent Mr. Shaw from instructing the witnesses; to which Mr. Curtis replied, that there is no necessity for his surveillance, for he does not think Mr. Shaw capable of such conduct; and even if he were, they must have been tutored long before this. The nazar replied, perhaps he might refresh their memory; to which Mr. Curtis replied, no, no.

A petition from one of the defendant's witness was put in, stating his inability to attend, in consequence of indisposition. He was ordered to furnish a medical certificate.

The Foudarry Sheristadar stated, in the case of the man whom Mr. Bignell had moved to be committed for perjury in this case, that the prisoner's brother, who is a Mohorir in the Court of the Mahomedan law officer here, had written privately to some persons who were subpoenaed by the Magistrate to substantiate the commitment, informing of them these subpoenas, and they had in consequence absconded, and there would be a difficulty in getting them to attend. The Mohorir has been suspended.

Mr. Curtis replied, that he had nothing to do with that.

Tuesday and Wednesday being native holidays, the case has been postponed until Thursday, the 20th inst., at 11 o'clock a.m., to enable Mr. Morton to come up and conduct the defence.—Hurkaru, December 20.

DECEMBER 20.

Sooroochunder Tewary, resident of Mooktada, deposed, I know Kisto Lal. I am his maternal uncle. His mother's name was Muunah, a Brahmunee, and his father was Sham Lal Brahmacharee. It is 8 years since I saw Kisto Lal at Kishenaghur. His parents are both dead. He had two brothers, the elder named Roop Lal and the younger Gour Lal. His father was originally an inhabitant of Moheespoor. Gungaprasad Tewary is my cousin. It is about 22 years since Sham Lal removed from Moheespoor to Kishenaghur. Kisto Lal was born at Moheespoor, and his brothers at Mooktada. Kisto Lal was about 12 years old when Sham Lal removed to Kishenaghur. Kisto Lal has studied the Bengallee, Persian and the English languages—the latter slightly. Sham Lal never resided at Mooktada, but his family used frequently to visit us, and I used to see him occasionally in Kishenaghur. Mudden Tewary and Shupersad Tewary are my brothers. They, about 5 years ago, removed their homesteads from Mooktada, to Mouleg. I never saw Kisto either in any service or in the habit of a devotee.

Fakeerchund Tewary, of Mooktada, deposed. I am the maternal uncle of the prisoner Kisto Lal and the brother of the last witness. I was very young when my sister married the prisoner's father Sham Lal. Roop Lal died at Kishenaghur 5 years ago, and Gour Lal quitted his village much about that time. Gour Lal quitted his village, and I have not seen him since. Sham Lal died about 12 months ago. I have not seen Kisto Lal for the last 7 or 8 years. None of the uncles of Kisto Lal were concerned in any gang robbery.

Ischurhunder Tewary, resident of Chandpoor, deposed. I know the prisoner Kisto Lal, he is my aunt's son. I have never been to Kishenaghur, but Kisto Lal came 2 or 3 times to my village. Kisto Lal was then 6 or 7 years old and pursuing his studies. I have never been to Moheespoor. When he was 15 or 16 years old, he came again to Mooktada, when I saw him for the last time. How long it is since that period I do not remember. Fakeerchund Tewary resides in my village—he is a bachelor. Besides Mannah, who married Sham Lal, Fakeerchund Tewary had another daughter named Praun, who married Paunchoo Shookool, a resident of Burdwan.

Mr. Bignell informed the Court, that there were two or three more witnesses, one or two of whom, if he could have got them he would have been most happy; but as he has hitherto failed, in spite of all his efforts to get them, he will not keep the prosecution open for them any longer.

The pseudo Pertab Chunder in his defence, stated, rather wafingly, that he was not Kisto Lal, and that the evidence for the prosecution had abused him, by making him the son of Sham Lal, for that if he were so, 10,000 persons at Kishnagur would have known it. The Judge ordered the indictment to be read to him, and then told the prisoner, that if he would reply calmly to them; he would hear all his objections fully, and write them down; but if he forgot himself and misbehaved, he would order him down amongst all the other prisoners.

The charges were then read, and the prisoner replied, I am neither Kisto Lal nor Aluck Shah. I am Rajah Pertab Chunder of Burdwan, and the son of Rajah Tej Chunder Bahadoor, late Rajah of Burdwan. I never went with a tumultuous assembly to seize either Culna or the guddies of the Burdwan Raj; nor did I disobey the orders of the Magistrate of Burdwan, conveyed to me by the Daroga of Culna, whilst I was there; nor did I nor any of my followers cause any disturbance during my stay there; nor have I in any instances, under false pretences, taken money from either Radhakissen Bysack or any other person whatsoever, as alleged in the indictment against me. I have, besides what I have now stated, a written defence, in which I have more fully stated the nature of my defence, and which I will file to-morrow in English, with a Bengally translation. Prisoner added, that his witnesses were named in the schedule, and if he should require more, he would inform the Court.

Mr. Leith, who appeared to day for the defence, but who will return to Calcutta to-morrow, detailed slightly the nature of this written defence, which he said was much the same as what the prisoner has now stated and contains a commentary on the evidence against him as given on behalf of the prosecution, regarding his identity as Kisto Lal, and the particulars of his alleged death and burial, denying the correctness of these assertions, and naming the witnesses who will prove his case generally, some of them his relatives.

Mr. Curtis said, that he did not think the old Raja Tej Chunder's sister, Ranny Tootah Komarree, would ever come to this Court and give evidence in the case, and he did not think the evidence of his wives will be legally available in the case, as wife and husband are legally one and the same person.

Mr. Bignell said, that he would not start this objection, for if he did so and allowed the Rannees subpoenaed for the defence as the wives of the late Raja Pertab Chunder to be the prisoner's wives, and objected on that ground, he would thereby, by implication, be admitting the identity of this prisoner with the deceased Rajah Pertab Chunder, who he pretends to personate.

Mr. Leith replied, that he believed that Ranny Tootah Komarree, the prisoner's aunt, who had brought up Raja Pertab Chunder from his infancy, and was very fond of him, and is very anxious to see him, could recognise him by some particular marks on his body.

The Hurdhon Rajah, Hurrykur Narrain Raj, pleaded not guilty to the charges against him, and said, that he was not a follower of Raja Pertab Chunder, but had merely proceeded to Culna to see the Rajah, after having heard of his arrival there, and was unjustly seized as one of his accomplices.

Radakissen Ghosal, the prisoner's mooktar, pleaded that he was not at Culna, when the affray is alleged to have occurred.

Tulluk Allah Shah, the darogah of the prisoner, pleaded that he merely read the papers to the Raja, and wrote some for him, and carried a few letters and messages as a part of his duty. He neither saw any riot whilst at Culna nor did he commit any.

Sugaur Dhur, pleaded, that he likewise was a servant of the pseudo Rajah, and had as such followed him to Culna, where he was arrested. Whilst at Culna he neither saw nor heard of any riot there, committed either by the Rajah or his partisans.

Kally Jemadar, pleaded, that he had been the Jemadar of the pseudo Raja, previous to his arrest at Bancoorah, for a disturbance said to have been committed by the Raja there. He was there sentenced to six months' imprisonment as an accomplice in that affair. After his release, he never entered the Raja's service, but he has gone to Culna, to get the wages of his former services from the Raja, and was there arrested as one of his followers. Whilst at Culna, he neither saw nor heard of any disturbance committed by the Raja or his partisans.

Joomoon Khan, Kidmutgar, in the soi distant Rajah's employ. His plea was, that he wished the Rajah to get his guddies—that is what he wished. Mr. Curtis said, no doubt, in that case the Rajah will promote you to be his Dewan for your fidelity towards him, especially, as you have already suffered ten months' incarceration, for being his accomplice in his affair at Bancoorah. The prisoner said, that there was no breach of the peace committed at Culna, neither by the Rajah or his retainers, and therefore he could not possibly be an accomplice in an affray, which never occurred. He would, he continued, in spite of every obstacle, continue to serve the Raja till he was restored to his rights, or he would die.

Besides the pseudo Raja, who had 273 witnesses, the Hurdan Raja had 5 and Radakissen Ghosal 6 to prove their alibis. The other prisoners had none.

The following is the charge against the prisoner, to which he put in the succeeding written reply.

Alak Shah, alias Rajah Pertab Chunder, alias Kisto Lal Pauree Brahammacharee, charged with gross fraud and imposture, in falsely and fraudulently, assuming the name of the deceased Maharajah Dieraj Pertab Chunder, Bahadoor, formerly zemindar of Burdwan, and pretending, in various places, during the last two years, to the great disturbance of the general peace and quiet of this country, that he is in verity the aforesaid zemindar of Burdwan, and that the zemindary of Burdwan belongs of right to him; and in obtaining money from various individuals, and more particularly from one Radhakissen Bysack, dewan of the Government Treasury in Calcutta, by means of these and such like false pretences. 2nd count. And charged further with having, in furtherance of the fraudulent pretences abovementioned, instigated and prevailed on divers subjects of the British Government, and others, to the number of 300, and more, unlawfully and tumultuously to assemble, at or near the Town of Culna, in the district of Burdwan, such proceeding being intended or eminently calculated to produce a most serious breach of the peace, and with having there remained, at the head of this unlawful assembly, from the 13th of April, 1838, corresponding with the 2d of Bysack 1245, up to the 2d of May 1838, corresponding with the 21st Bysack 1245; and with having, during that period, on various occasions, by the display of superior force, resisted, and set at defiance, the constituted authorities of the district, he the said Alak Shah, alias Rajah Pertab Chunder, alias Kisto Lal Pauree Brahammacharee, having previously, on the 4th August 1836, been convicted of a similar offence, before the Sessions Court of this District of Hooghly.

Government, the prosecutor in this case, having closed the evidence against me, I shall respectfully submit a few remarks on the case attempted to be made out against me. I feel that I have been harshly treated, and I may add, unjustly, in a manner unauthorized by either precedent or regulation, and, most certainly, opposed to all the principles and rules of practice of English Courts of Justice. Since the year 1836, I have been hunted like a felon, and treated like a convict; I have been made a mark to shoot at, and I have been plundered of my property on two different occasions.

by the Police authorities, acting under the immediate orders of Government officers; and the only time during that period in which I have enjoyed safety of person, and protection for my property, has been, whilst imprisoned in a Mofussil jail, or residing within the Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in Calcutta. The only charge that the malice of my enemies, and the ingenuity of the Government officer, The Magistrate of Hooghly, have been able to bring against me, amounts to nothing more if made out, than a misdemeanour; while it is not attempted to be concealed, that this charge, brought and supported by the official influence, and extra official labours of a Government functionary, the magistrate of Hooghly, was merely intended to be subsidiary to that which has all along been admitted to be the chief object of this prosecution, namely, to try, in this criminal proceeding, a mere civil right. In fact, to prove that I had no right to the Gaddie of Burdwan. I mention this, not for the purpose of impeaching the motives, or exposing the conduct of a Government servant, the Magistrate of Hooghly; but to convince you, Sir, as others have been convinced, that I have been most harshly treated, and to point out to you the difficulties which have been thrown in the way of my defence. At all times and in all places where Government influence is exerted, it has its weight in the scale of justice; but in this country, where the people are proverbially timid and fearful of offending Government, the Government influence, when exerted, as it has been in this case, has a most grievous and prejudicial effect on the case of the party against whom it has been exerted. The mere fact that I was charged by Government, and prosecuted by Government as a criminal, would, of itself, deter many from coming forward to declare their knowledge of me, being fearful, that by so doing, they might identify themselves with me, and render themselves obnoxious to Government, and involve themselves in difficulties. I have already experienced this. Was it fair, then, to mix up the trial of my civil claims,—my right to the zemindary of Burdwan, in a case in which I was charged to be a criminal? But this is not the only hardship I have to complain of. Not satisfied with the silent effect which the knowledge of the part which the Government took in the prosecution and the publication of the evidence of the herd of witnesses driven down to Hooghly by the various native officials in the neighbouring zillahs, to prove that I was not the Rajah Pertaub Chund, but one Kisto Lal Burmacharee, the magistrate of Hooghly, Mr. Samuells, in his official capacity, issued, as I am credibly informed, written circulars, publishing officially, (and observe, sir, issued during the pendency of these very proceedings, and before my case had been either opened or gone into, and knowing, as he himself had several times asserted publicly in his own Court, that his were but ex parte and preliminary proceedings,) that he had proved, that I, the prisoner, was that Kisto Lal, and not the Rajah Pertaub Chund! I make no comment on this conduct of the magistrate. It is sufficient for me to state it respectfully to you, Sir, to shew what I have suffered, and to ask you, Sir, as a Christian judge, to give the statement, if correct, the weight it deserves, in considering the defence which I may be able, notwithstanding, to make, and to refer to it as a sufficient reason for the absence of many of those natives who might, under more favorable circumstances, have come forward to speak on my behalf. My defence has also been very much impeded by my long imprisonment. I was arrested on the 2d day of May last, and I remained from that date until the middle day of the month of June last, without having been tried or examined, and without having been able to obtain any statement of the charge upon which I was arrested and detained in custody. On that latter date I was examined by the magistrate before a single witness, was prosecuted against me, without knowing the charge against me, and without being informed who was my prosecutor; and I have been ever since confined in a close prisoner in jail, notwithstanding my repeated applications through the regular channels to be bailed. Bail has been refused, by the magistrate, yourself and the Nizamut Adawlut, contrary, as I am informed, to the express rules laid down in the regulations of Government; although bail was offered to be given to any amount, and I am still a prisoner in the Hooghly jail. Thus have I been detained nearly eight months in a common jail, on a charge of misdemeanour only. I trust, Sir, that you will keep these facts in view in dealing with this case, and in considering the nature of the defence which I, opposed by such fearful and preponderating influences as are exerted against me, shall endeavour to make.

First, Sir, let me call your attention to the previous conviction, (the record of which has not been attempted to be put in evidence in this case,) and the manner in which that conviction was obtained. In that previous case, I was denied the assistance of a professional adviser, to defend me against the unfounded and malicious charges brought against me; although Mr. Turton, the Barrister, had generously offered to defend me. What chance of justice had I then when I was refused the aid of a legal adviser, prosecuted at the instance of the Government, and tried by an officer of Government, who had refused me that aid?

If the conviction was properly obtained, it appears to be a complete answer to the present allegation that I am Kisto Lal Pautree Burmacharee. If I was convicted as Aluck Shah, as is alleged, in the charge, but is not proved, and if I was Aluck Shah, as must have been sworn on oath in Court in that former case, and as it is now sworn that I am Kisto Lal, there must be perjury in one or other of the cases; and in one or other, if not in both, I am grievously wronged. I can scarcely be both Aluck Shah and Kisto Lal Burmacharee. This is not pretended. But, can it be believed, that if I was Kisto Lal, who appears to have been a well-known person, that between the period of my arrest at Bancoorah in 1835, and my former trial here, Mr. Elliot, Magistrate of Bancoorah, and Mr. Samuells, Magistrate of Hooghly, with all their power and influence, and with indefatigable endeavours to procure evidence on which to convict me, would not have ascertained that I was, as now alleged, the son of a Burmacharee? I say, that Mr. Elliot did endeavour to ascertain who I was, and if evidence of that fact could have been received here in this trial, I could have given it. But I am debarred doing so by the prosecution not proving the conviction. But I pray you, look at the terms of that conviction. I do not deny that, I was convicted; I was debarred the assistance of Mr. Turton. Does it not on the face of it shew that the Judge who tried me, considered me a person of some consequence, and of much higher rank in the world than Kisto Lal Pautree, the son of Shaum Lal Burmacharee? If he did not, why did he impose on me the terms of giving security for 40,000 rupees? He must, by imposing such terms, have considered me either a man of rank and consequence, or he must have passed that sentence with the view of making me a prisoner for life. With these remarks I dismiss the previous conviction, and I feel satisfied, that you will give it no weight in forming your judgement on the case before you.

I now proceed to a consideration of the charges at present preferred against me, and I pray you to peruse them carefully. They are as follow (Copy of charges put in). You will there see, that I am charged with having disturbed the general peace of the country for the last two years, and I submit, with every confidence, that no attempt even has been made to advance a single particle of evidence in support of this part of the charge. The prosecutor knew that he could not substantiate it. He must have known this before the charges were framed, and they have only been so framed to create a prejudice against me. I am satisfied that with you it will have no such effect, and that, on the contrary, it will open your eyes to the ridiculous nature of the charge. A short statement of my conduct for the last two years, will shew you how far it was an honest and a fair charge for a Government to put on the records of its Court.

In the end of 1835, I was arrested by Mr. Elliot, the Magistrate of Bancoorah. Applications were made to that gentleman for a copy of the charge and the warrant on which I was arrested. He stated in reply, that he could give no such charge; that no warrant existed; and that I had been arrested by his orders. To this day I do not know the charge on which I was tried and convicted; but as I was convicted, I must attribute this to my ignorance. I was detained in custody until August 1836, when I was tried in this district for a crime alleged to have been committed in the Bancoorah district. I pray you, Sir, with reference to the present trial, to bear this in mind. On that trial, I was sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and required to give security to keep the peace for one year. On the expiration of my period of imprisonment, I gave the security, and I was released. I then proceeded to Calcutta, and remained there for upwards of a year, when I was visited by all classes of people. No attempt has been made to shew that I was, during that period, guilty of any improper conduct. Whilst residing there, I did not conceal myself. I openly represented myself to be the Rajah Pertaub Chund. I courted the society or acquaintance of those who had an opportunity of knowing me. I was acknowledged by many, and supported by others. I had the means afforded to me of commencing a suit in the Supreme Court of Calcutta, the whole object of which was to prove my identity as Rajah Pertaub Chund. I did commence that suit, and it is now pending there. Was there in that proceeding, gross fraud and imposture? Being advised that it was proper that I should proceed to Burdwan, the place of my birth, for the purpose of being identified, and of obtaining evidence in support of my claims, and fearing the power and influence of Prawn Chunder Baboo, who has been from my youth my implacable enemy, as I shall prove to you, and who with his family and retainers, are now in possession of my property, I applied to Government to afford me protection. Whether my application was proper, or whether the refusal of Government was just, is now a matter of no moment. The application was made, and that of itself shews, that in proceeding towards Burdwan, I had no illegal object in view. Government did refuse my application, however, and I proceeded towards Burdwan, as it has been sworn by one of the witnesses for the prosecution, and whose testimony must have full weight with you, with only the same servants who had attended on me in Calcutta. I was delayed in my progress by various circumstances, which it is here unnecessary to relate. I passed through the districts of the twenty four Pargunnahs, Barraset, Hooghly and Kishenaghur on my way to Culna. The prosecutor has not ventured to call a single witness to prove that I created any disturbance in passing through these districts. If he had been able to obtain the slightest evidence of misconduct on my part during my progress, extending from the beginning of March, to the middle of April, he would not have failed to have produced it against me. In not having done so, he has admitted that I did not misconduct myself up to the date of my arrival at Culna on the thirteenth of April last. It is rather out of place to allude to it here, but, as regards the allegation that I am Kisto Lal, I beg to draw your attention to the fact, that I was for several days at Santipore, a place only twelve miles distant from the birth place of Kisto Lal. There was no necessity for me going there, for I could have anchored on the other side of the river, and was it likely that, if I were Kisto Lal, I would have gone to and remained at the place where it was, most likely I would be identified as an impostor? Whilst at Santipore, did I conceal myself, or my claim to be the Rajah Pertaub Chund? No, on the contrary it was well known, and numbers of persons, including the local authorities, had an opportunity of seeing, and did see me. If it were true that I am Kisto Lal, was it not likely that some person at Santipore would have recognized me, and published my imposture? But, was that done? No, it was not, nor was it to my knowledge ever whispered that I was Kisto Lal, until long after I was under the charge of the Magistrate, who has committed me for trial before you. If I were, as is alleged, Kisto Lal would I have selected the zillah where I was born to play off imposture? If you believe this, I have no doubt you will believe evidence of the Rajbarry people that I do not resemble Rajah Pertaub Chund in one feature and you will feel satisfied that I am not only an impostor, but moreover a very stupid impostor in representing myself to be a man to whom I have not the slightest resemblance and from whom I in fact differ as much in appearance, as black does from white. I feel unwilling to detain you with remarks about my alleged identity with Kisto Lal, for I feel satisfied, that to that part of the charge and the evidence in support of it, you give no evidence. Indeed, I believe, the vakel for Government, whose liberality and courtesy during this trial I take this opportunity of acknowledging, thought so little of that part of the charge, that until the appearance of Prawkissen Christian, he had no intention of going into it.

I now return to the period of my arrival at Culna, and I beg you to bear in mind the evidence in support of the charge made against me, of resisting the constituted authorities by a superior force. I shall not take up your time with detailing the evidence I mean to adduce on that part of the charge, but I shall shortly draw your attention to the evidence for the prosecution. Before doing so, however, let me ask why the Government has not produced one respectable inhabitant of Culna, to prove my misconduct? Is it fair, just or honorable in a Government prosecution, to put forward as witnesses to support a Government prosecution in a Government Court, only Government servants? If during my residence on the river, opposite Culna, I had done any act to endanger the public peace, can it be believed that witnesses could have been wanting to give evidence against me? Is Peary Lal Baboo a man of character at Culna? He is the only man produced to give evidence against me, who is not a servant of Government. He says he is not in the employ of Government, but by his own account he was in constant attendance on the Magistrate whilst at Culna. Was he not the party who arrested Mr. Shaw? If he were not in the employ of Government, he must have been seeking for Government employ; and as Government has shewn so great a desire to convict me, he may think his strong swearing against me, may entitle him to claim employment.

I have to apologize for troubling you with remarks on so insignificant a character as Peary Lal Baboo. In the Magistrate's Court he was treated as a man worthy of belief. In this Court it appeared to me, that the extravagance of his evidence, only afforded amusement, and that you were surprised at the fertility of his imagination. I now proceed to the evidence of the Police authorities against me, and out of the whole body which was produced against me, I select only two on whose evidence I shall remark, viz. the Dargah of Culna; and the Nazir of Burdwan; merely reminding you that they, and all the rest of the witnesses for the prosecution, agree in one point, viz. that neither by myself nor by any of my followers was any disturbance or outrage whatever committed upon a single occasion.

And first as to Mahaboolah, darogah of Culna. Can any thing be more confused, and unintelligible than the whole evidence of this exemplary official? And yet, if I am convicted of riot and resistance to the constituted authorities, it must be on his evidence or on that of the crafty Assaut Ally, Nazir of Burdwan. But let us see to what the evidence, of the darogah, if true, amounts. He says that during the period of eighteen days that I resided at Culna, I only went on shore once. That he requested me not to come on shore, but that I went. That I was accompanied by a large body of armed men, which dwindled down on cross examination to four or five. That I was desirous of doing certain acts, and going certain roads, but at his request I neither did such acts, nor went such ways. That, in truth, with the exception of coming once on shore, I was a most obedient person. I admit I went on shore, but I deny that I took with me an armed force, or any person capable of creating, or at the charge has it "eminently calculated" to create a disturbance. But is there any rule or regulation of the Company to prevent me, or any man from going on shore? Was it a great and heinous crime against the Honorable Company, that I went on shore once during a period of 18 days? I am certain that even the Magistrate of Burdwan, did not think so; for I went on shore on the 9th of Byasack or 20th April, and no steps were taken to punish me for any crime, as has been sworn by the Government witnesses, until the thirtieth of April, or nineteenth of Byasack, when the Nazir arrived at Culna. But has there been the slightest reason given why the Nazir was sent? The darogah has spoken to no subsequent act of mine which could be construed or magnified into a crime, as having occurred between the ninth and nineteenth Byasack. It does not appear that any orders were sent, or any reports made, for not a single purwanah or report has been proved. I shall not trouble you with further remarks on the evidence giving up to the time of the arrival of the nazir by this individual; who was proved unable to read or write, and to be dependant on others for the reports he made to the Magistrate, who could not identify his reports, and who swore, that during the whole period of my residence at Culna, there was no disturbance or actual disturbance.

I now come to the evidence of Assaut Ally, from the date of his arrival at Culna. He says he arrived at Culna in the forenoon, and it is proved he came to me, whilst I was engaged in bathing and dressing. It is also proved that he came on board my boat, and he says he reads purwanah to me, but he has not identified that purwanah; and, therefore, so far his evidence goes for nothing. But I admit that he stated he had come with an order from the magistrate, to go for to discharge my attendants. He was extremely civil in his manner, and treated me with respect. He informed me, as he and Mahaboolah have informed you, that my attorney, Mr. Shaw, had arrived, and I would like to consult him first, before giving an answer to the order of the magistrate. I was surprised at the order, for I had sent my mookteers to Burdwan, to apply to the magistrate for protection. I was then ignorant of the harsh and illegal proceedings of that magistrate to my mookteers. I did not then know that, at that very time, the magistrate and a joint magistrate of Burdwan, and the Doctor of the station, were employed in assaulting my mookteers and plundering him of his papers, and consigning him and another mookteer to jail. The Nazir has sworn, that his order was resisted by an armed body of men; can you believe I had such a force on my bathing boat? But, Sir, I go no further with this witness than his report, forwarded that day to the magistrate regarding his interview with me. In that report he says: "that he had received my answer, and that report was forwarded on the next day. In this evidence, could it be Mahaboolah? It is clearly shown that the answer was not obtained until late at night. Will you, Sir, then, direct a statement, give credence to one fact deposed to by this witness? This report is false, and he has proved it to be so. But to continue his evidence. He has sworn that I requested him to come for an answer after I had seen Mr. Shaw. Did he do so? No. He swore that I wrote to him that I was willing to discharge any servants if he would point them out. Did he answer this application either in writing or personally, or by a substitute? No. He put my letter into his box—he never saw me again, until the morning of my arrest. He has sworn that during the time he was at Culna there was riot. I shall now shortly allude to the evidence of Mahaboolah, as to what occurred between him and Mr. Shaw.

This man's evidence is in all material parts contradicted by another witness for the prosecution, and will be more fully contradicted by my witnesses, should you require witnesses to disprove the statements of this part of the evidence for the prosecution. But even supposing the evidence of Mahaboolah, as to what occurred on the evening of the thirtieth of April, to be true, to what does it amount? It amounts to this—that he, insisted on coming on board my boat, where there was no disturbance, with a large body of armed men. That orders were issued by Mr. Shaw not to permit him to enter with such a force; and that, after all, he was permitted to enter, accompanied by several armed burkundazes. That, with the exception of some jokes passed on his unwieldy size by Mr. Shaw, he was treated with all the respect due to his exalted official character. That he was desired to call the nazir to receive a communication, which was of too great consequence to be intrusted to a man at his station. That the nazir did not come, and he shortly afterwards took his leave, without attempting to arrest me, or without having been assaulted. I am well aware that many reports were made by this man to the Magistrate of Burdwan, but the prosecutor's vakool has done well for his case, in not endeavouring to prove them. He knew they could not be supported, and he wisely refrained from attempting to do so. If there was any resistance to the constituted authorities on that evening, there is not a particle of evidence that I was the party resisting. The whole of this man's evidence goes to shew, that Mr. Shaw was the active party. Am I to be charged with crime, if or he it be to protect one from being insulted, where the evidence is, that another party committed the alleged crime? If my servant had committed murder or robbery, and there was no evidence to shew that I was a party to the crime, would you, because he was my servant, convict me of felony?

I conclude my remarks on that part of the evidence, which goes to charge me with disturbing the general peace of the country for the two last years, and with resisting by means of a superior force, the constituted authorities, by reminding you, that you have only heard one side. That there is no case made out against me, even by that evidence. That the witnesses for the prosecution have contradicted themselves. That all swore there was no riot. No one swore that an attempt was made to arrest me. That not an individual except the nazir, said that I was even asked to go to Hooghly jail. He said I was, but he also said he offered to accompany me to Burdwan, if I would discharge part of my retinue. He was told I would consult my attorney and give him an answer to his proposal in the evening. He did not object to this arrangement, but concurred in it, and from thence he went straight to the thannah, and made a false report to the magistrate. Can you believe the evidence of such a man? I am sure you cannot. What was the consequence of this report? It is not in evidence, but it is notorious that this report frightened the magistrate of Burdwan so much, that he immediately called in military aid, and that with the advice of the judge of Burdwan, and the assistant magistrate, he, in company with the civil surgeon, proceeded straight to Culna, on the day of his arrival. He says he arrived at Culna in the forenoon, and it is proved he came to me, whilst I was engaged in bathing and dressing. It is also proved that he came on board my boat, and he says he reads purwanah to me, but he has not identified that purwanah; and, therefore, so far his evidence goes for nothing. But I admit that he stated he had come with an order from the magistrate, to go for to discharge my attendants. He was extremely civil in his manner, and treated me with respect. He informed me, as he and Mahaboolah have informed you, that my attorney, Mr. Shaw, had arrived, and I would like to consult him first, before giving an answer to the order of the magistrate. I was surprised at the order, for I had sent my mookteers to Burdwan, to apply to the magistrate for protection. I was then ignorant of the harsh and illegal proceedings of that magistrate to my mookteers. I did not then know that, at that very time, the magistrate and a joint magistrate of Burdwan, and the Doctor of the station, were employed in assaulting my mookteers and plundering him of his papers, and consigning him and another mookteer to jail. The Nazir has sworn, that his order was resisted by an armed body of men; can you believe I had such a force on my bathing boat? But, Sir, I go no further with this witness than his report, forwarded that day to the magistrate regarding his interview with me. In that report he says: "that he had received my answer, and that report was forwarded on the next day. In this evidence, could it be Mahaboolah? It is clearly shown that the answer was not obtained until late at night. Will you, Sir, then, direct a statement, give credence to one fact deposed to by this witness? This report is false, and he has proved it to be so. But to continue his evidence. He has sworn that I requested him to come for an answer after I had seen Mr. Shaw. Did he do so? No. He swore that I wrote to him that I was willing to discharge any servants if he would point them out. Did he answer this application either in writing or personally, or by a substitute? No. He put my letter into his box—he never saw me again, until the morning of my arrest. He has sworn that during the time he was at Culna there was riot. I shall now shortly allude to the evidence of Mahaboolah, as to what occurred between him and Mr. Shaw.

arrival, after communicating with the Reverend Mr. Alexander, his nazir and darogah, he proceeded with his surgeon and his spiritual adviser, his nazir and darogah, and supported by a military force, to the banks of the river. It is now matter of history (I know not upon whose head the responsibility rests, but so it is) that this military body fired upon unarmed and sleeping men, lying in their boats on the river, that many were killed, several were wounded, and that I escaped partly by a miracle, and partly by my expertness in swimming.

I have little to say about the evidence of the arms seized on board the different boats; there is evidence before you that one sword, a pair of pocket-pistols, a fowling piece, and two or three spears, were seized on my boat, but there is no further proof before you. A large body of arms has been brought into Court with the view, no doubt, of producing an effect. You, Sir, will not be led away by any such attempt; you will alone be guided by the evidence produced before you. It is said there is a list in the nuthce. Has any evidence been produced to shew, that that is a true and correct list? No, none. If the report of the 30th of April to the magistrate, made by the nazir, is false, may not that list also be false? If I shew you in that nuthce, a roobitary, dated Ambekah 2nd May, signed by the magistrate of Burdwan, which recites the death of an individual, Tarrachund Chuckerbarty, who died at Burdwan on the 21st of May, will you believe any one document in that nuthce to be a true proceeding. If I shew to you, that the magistrate of Burdwan made a solemn declaration under his hand to the Supreme Court of Calcutta, in a return to a writ of habeas corpus, directed to him for the release of Mr. Shaw, that a warrant for the arrest of Mr. Shaw was in existence on the 2nd of May, and if I have proved to you that that warrant was not then in existence, will you be able to put any trust in any one proceeding in this cause, which has not been fully and satisfactorily provided? I feel confident that you will not.

It now becomes necessary that I should draw your attention to the circumstances connected with, and subsequent to my arrest; and this I shall endeavour to do shortly. You have seen the amount of crime alleged to have been committed by me at Culna. I do not allude to the charge of fraud and imposture, and to obtaining money under false pretences. At the time of my arrest there was no intention of charging me with these crimes; these were charges subsequently got up against me, as I am credibly informed at the suggestion of the Superintendent of Police, and the Magistrate of this district.

I was arrested within the jurisdiction of the magistrate of Nuddea, by the magistrate of Burdwan, under false reports. I was shot at, plundered of my little property, seized, ill-treated, marched through the streets of Culna under a large military guard, with scarcely sufficient clothing to cover my body at any hour, morning, noon or evening. I was taken through the streets, my papers were read, my boxes were broken open and I was dependent on others for my food. I was confined in a hut, I was not examined, nor was I told my crime, neither were my accusers confronted with me. The only party near at hand who could have assisted me, my legal adviser, was arrested, and committed to close custody. I was forwarded to this district, under a large military guard, and confined in jail. My servants, boatmen, visitors, and others totally unconnected with me, were arrested, and they, with my attorney, were forwarded to Burdwan jail. Why was I not sent there. Why was I placed under a large military guard, and sent to a district where it was not alleged I had committed crime? For no other reason, than that it was supposed these proceedings would satisfy the public, that I was a great and notorious criminal, and that they would produce all manner of good. I will not take up your time in stating the mode in which I was treated in this jail, and I will only say, that I was confined a close prisoner, without knowing my crime and without being examined, as I have before mentioned, from the 6th of May until the middle of June, when the examination before the magistrate began. The circumstances under which that examination took place, I will not now detail. I now drop that subject, and I wish I could efface from my memory all the injustice I have suffered since my first incarceration in Hooghly jail. I shall not detain you with detailing the mode in which the examination of the witnesses produced in the Magistrate's Court, to prove that I had been guilty of riot and resistance to the constituted authorities, was conducted. I thank the Government for sanctioning my commitment for trial before you, for here I expect fair and impartial justice.

Though I was arrested on something like a charge of riot, I, after being confined in a common jail for nearly four months, and after suffering every indignity which could be heaped on me; after being deprived of my liberty, and plundered of my little personal property; after being refused a copy of the charge on which I was committed to custody, after being refused to be held to bail; and after being told by the magistrate, that there was no intention of trying me on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences, I was arraigned on the following charge, viz, that I, having another name, deceitfully and wickedly caused myself to be called by the name of the former zemindar of Burdwan, Maha Rajah, Dhee Raj Pertaub Chunder Bahadoor.

On the illegality, the informality, and the nonsense of such a charge, I will not now comment. That the charge embraces no crime,—that it is childish; and the production of one ignorant of what constitutes crime, must be apparent to all. Still, on this allegation, a charge, or by whatever name it may please the framers of it to call it, I was, on the 1st of September, arraigned by the magistrate. With such a vague charge, how could I meet the evidence produced against me? I shall only say on this subject, that so satisfied were my legal advisers of the small chance which I had of obtaining justice in the Magistrate's Court, that they advised me to reserve my defence for this Court. Here I mean to set it up. Here I mean to shew, by clear and undoubted testimony, that I am no impostor, but, in truth and verity, the zemindar of Burdwan. I shall adduce to you satisfactory testimony, that I am not Kisto Lal; and I shall have no difficulty in removing from your mind the impression, which I am afraid has taken hold of it, that I am an impostor. That such an impression should have been made on you, I do not wonder, nor am I surprised that persons should be biased against me, after all that power and influence have laboured to do against me; and, considering the positive testimony which has been thereby procured, of my being Kisto Lal. But you, Sir, are Judge, and as such, ought to be, and as I am anxious to believe you, are, above receiving a bias from any quarter, however influential. It is your duty to weigh the evidence given; and which is to be given, as you have as yet only heard the evidence for the prosecution.

And here permit me to observe, Sir, with all deference, that it is under protest that I am about to submit witnesses, and enter upon my defence to the present charge; and the ground of my protest is, that I am advised, that upon the face of these proceedings, and even assuming the truth of the whole evidence which has been adduced for the prosecution, there is not a scintilla of criminality made out against me. The case which has been attempted to be established, involves, in existence, two distinct and heterogeneous charges. First, that I have been guilty of disturbing the peace of the country; and, secondly, that I have fraudulently obtained money by false pretences and representations. Neither one nor the other has been supported even by the slightest evidence which has been heard with respect to the charge of disturbance, or breach of the peace. I have already shewn, that the witnesses for the prosecution, have themselves distinctly and expressly declared, that there was no disturbance or breach of the peace, and have thus negated and disproved what they were specially summoned to support. With respect to the insolent and unfounded charge of swindling, and procuring money by false pretences, I utterly scorn and repudiate the imputation with all the indignation which it merits. Even if I were proved to be an impostor, in claiming the Raj of Burdwan, there would not be a single point of resemblance in common between my case and that of a procurer of money by false pretences. In the first place, my claims are not clandestinely urged. All that I assume, I have assumed openly and publicly. Nay, I have commenced legal proceedings in her Majesty's Supreme Court of Calcutta, in order to assert and prove my claims, and to recover my paternal property; which proceedings are at this time pending, and would, ere this, have been brought to a legal issue, and brought to a close, by a judgment in my favor, if I had not been prevented carrying on the suit by the unjust and oppressive proceedings of the mossul functionaries. I have asked no one to believe my bare statements; but to go and enquire, and form their own opinions; and if they form an opinion favourable to me, is this to be wrested as my undoing? Again, Sir, in the second place, the money which I have received, has been offered to me voluntarily and at no solicitation of mine. The only witness upon the point, is Baboo Radakissen Hysack, and to his deposition we must confine ourselves in discussing this part of the case. Radakissen distinctly declared, that he did not advance the money upon my representations, and that his firm belief in the truth of my story, was not founded upon statements of mine, but upon the representations of disinterested third parties, with whom I had no connection, and over whom I had no control. In the third place, Sir, all the money that I have received from Baboo Radakissen, is proved to have been advanced by way of loan, and to have been properly secured by formal instruments of security. His right to recover back that money from me is not made contingent upon my succeeding in the claims which I put forth. His title to recover back his loans is absolute and unconditional; he may put his bonds in suit tomorrow, if he pleases, and there is no evidence whatsoever before the Court, to shew that I am unable to discharge the debt to the uttermost rupee. And whether it be alleged or proved that I am Kisto Lal Burmacharee, Alluck Shaw, or Rajah Pertaub Chunder, I individually am responsible for, and may be, by legal suit, made to pay the amount so borrowed, whenever it may please the lender to enforce his securities. Is this any thing more than a common and fair pecuniary transaction of every day's occurrence? Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore admits, that he himself has been engaged in many similar transactions. He has over and over again advanced money in support of civil claims, both in the mossul and the Supreme Courts, and, notwithstanding the Baboo's known sagacity, some of these speculative claims have doubtless turned out unsuccessful. Lastly, Sir, I will merely remind you, that there is no Complainant; that there is not one person to come forward and say that I have injured him. Can there be a greater anomaly than to make a matter of public prosecution, an alleged private wrong, of which the pretended sufferer himself, does not complain, and which, in fact he has publicly, in this Court, declared he considered to be no wrong? Can there be a greater hardship and absurdity, than to seek to convict a man of a crime by no other testimony than that of an individual who has acted, and would, if he were not afraid of making himself obnoxious to Government, still continue to act as the friend and supporter of the accused? Upon these grounds it is, that I submit with confidence that the case against me has utterly failed, and that no charge, whatever, involving criminality, has been proved against me.

therefore, at once, urge my immediate acquittal, and decline to enter upon a defence where no tangible charge subsists. But I don't wish, in the last degree, to appear to shrink from meeting the question which has been raised, affecting my identity as the veritable Rajah Pertaub Chunder, and although I feel the disadvantages imposed upon me in contesting a civil claim, in the position of an accused party in a criminal prosecution, brought and supported by the Government, and now standing at the bar of a criminal Court, I shall (under protest, as I have already said) enter into a formal defence, and adduce full evidence in support of my identity, and in contradiction of the evidence which you have heard.

I deny being Kisto Lal, and I beg of you to bear in mind in what a difficult position this charge places me. I do not pretend to prove where Kisto Lal is, nor where he died, nor where he sojourned, but I mean to prove that I am Rajah Pertaub Chunder. I shall give you general evidence that I am not Kisto Lal. The evidence which I will produce will be respectable—it will not be liable to a charge of being interested. I am prosecuted by Government, and prosecuted by those of whom better things might have been expected as Englishmen and Christians. My friends, who support me, are threatened with the loss of situation, and prosecution, if they continue to assist me. I have not the means nor the inclination to adopt the degrading and dishonest practice of purchasing evidence, or bringing forward hired witnesses. All my witnesses will be impartial men, swayed by no feelings of interest, and guided by no prospect of gain. Many will be deterred by the fear of the consequence of opposing the Magistrate and the Government. Still with all those obstacles in my way, and having justice on my side, I do not despair of obtaining a judgment in my favor.

Before proceeding to remark on the evidence which has been produced, that I am Kisto Lal, I beg to draw your attention to the fact, that the Magistrate stated, that every witness called for the prosecution in his Court, would, as a matter of course, be produced before you for examination. I ask, has that been done? I say, and you must now know, that it has not been done. The Magistrate has carefully excluded from the list, those witnesses who spoke favorably of my case, in his clemency. Does such conduct in a Government servant reflect credit on the Government which prosecutes me? Let me instance specially the case of the Reverend Mr. Deere. This Gentleman is the only European witness who was called to prove my identity as Kisto Lal, and I believe that his expected testimony against me, was very much relied on, in the Magistrate's court. Mr. Deere distinctly swore, to his belief, that I was not Kisto Lal, and the consequence has been, that he has not been re-examined before you.

In regard to the evidence produced against me, that I am Kisto Lal, I confess I feel a difficulty in knowing which part of the evidence to select as most worthy of belief. In a case where the Government servants have shewn such a decided anxiety to convict me, it is natural that those who depend on Government for their means of livelihood, and who look forward for promotion in Government service, should feel inclined to support a Government prosecution. Premchand Bonnerjee, Nazir of the Magistrate's court at Nuddea, says he cannot swear positively that I am Kisto Lal. Bijomohun Moukerjee, the Preskar of the same court, says he could not swear positively that I am Kisto Lal. Neelcomul Bose, the Sheristadar of the same court, says that I am like Kisto Lal; but he has said before you that he does not distinctly recognize me. Buddinath Buxse, the moonshree of the same court, could not recognize me as Kisto Lal. Ramnauth Mookerjee said, he would not swear positively that I was Kisto Lal. Now all these witnesses, with the exception of Buddinath Buxse, swore they knew Kisto Lal well, and, if any saw him, they could recognize him. True it is they swore I was, like to, and they believed me to be, like Kisto Lal. But is that evidence of identity? Certainly not; and I ask what other testimony could they be expected to give? Would they have ventured to come forward to disprove that which the Magistrate of Hooghly, had asserted as before mentioned officially, that I was not Kisto Lal.

I think it unnecessary to enter into an examination of the evidence of the witnesses Pal Christian and Prawnkisen Christian; for I am confident you place no reliance on their testimony. The latter comes into Court, and confesses, without a blush, that his whole life has been a lie; that he is a thorough adept in the art of deceit and fraud; and that he dates the period of his amendment, only from the time when he composed an extorted statement, which he calls a confession, only to escape from the horrors of perpetual imprisonment. If it shall become necessary in the course of my defence, I shall, without much difficulty, tear from them the cloak of sanctity with which they have covered themselves, and expose them to you in their true light. I admit, that these apostates to their religion have sworn point blank enough that I am Kisto Lal. I shall, in all probability, show what they are; but I put it to you, Sir, to state what respectable witness has been produced to prove that I am actually Kisto Lal? Is it Gungapersand Tewarree, who swore, that when I was a prisoner in Baucourah jail he was some-where in the Magistrate's Court there? I knew, as he says, that I was Kisto Lal, but did not mention it. Was it this man who says he was an outlaw from that time, until he gave evidence in the Magistrate's Court here against me? Was it Ramhunder Byswas, who swore that I was Kisto Lal and that I got the mark which I have on my back from a fall from a small horse on a piece of kinkun on a juel? Look at my back, examine my wound, and see if that could have been so. Was it Ramhunder Bhadurjee, who swore he could not say if I was Kisto Lal? Was it my alleged uncle, Ischerchunder Chatterjee, who swore to his recollection and belief that Kisto Lal had six toes on his feet, and having only, thank God, the same number of toes as common men, namely five? Was it Gungagowin Bonnetjee, who swore in his examination in Court, that he had not seen Kisto Lal for about six years, and on his cross-examination, that it was about sixteen years since Kisto Lal went away? Was it Muddien Chuckerbutty, who contradicted the last witness? Was it Ramchunder Roy, the fusseeldar of the kumhals, who swore he knew Kisto Lal well, but could not swear I was him?

I shall not detain you farther with reminding you all the inconsistencies of these witnesses, who have been produced to prove that I am Kisto Lal, still I submit; that all those witnesses who have sworn that they knew Kisto Lal well, and cannot swear positively that I am him, must be considered as favorable witnesses for me. And what do the majority of the witnesses for the prosecution swear, even if they are to be believed, which they cannot lie? Why, nothing more than that there is a likeness between me and Kisto Lal.

But what is the course which has been pursued against me? On one occasion I am tried as Uluk Shah; on another as Kisto Lal; and when this farce is over, the Government will perhaps provide me with another name. What is the general description of evidence produced by the prosecutor that I am Kisto Lal? Why, men, who for a sufficient consideration, or, if it were their interest, would swear that I am any other person who might be named to them. I feel so confident that you give little or no weight to their testimony, that I shall say nothing more, but I shall suspend your judgment until you witness what comes forward. I have not the means of the influence of Prawnchunder Baboo, who is the most interested party in this proceeding; who as manager of the regulars of Burdwan; and as a revenue, has a mighty personal interest in opposing the rightful claimant of the guddies, and of being, as he has been doing, the immense wealth in his possession, and the influence arising therefrom, against me. I do not possess the influence of Government to collect together servants of Government, and others to support my case. I am placed in this position, that until it came out in the Magistrate's Court, that I was charged with being Kisto Lal, I had not the slightest idea by what name I was to be called. I have some witnesses who will be able to give testimony whether I am Kisto Lal. They are, and you will I am sure admit them to be, impartial witnesses.

The evidence produced against me, to show that I am not Rajah Pertaub Chund, is of two classes. One class consists of the retainers of Prawnchunder Baboo, the other of gentlemen in the employ of Government.

I shall first remark on the evidence of the gentlemen who have been produced against me; but before doing so, I ask, why the general rule of practice has been broken through in my case, and why, in accordance with the assurance given by the Magistrate, all the witnesses who were examined in the Magistrate's court here, not been given in the calendar. Has there not been a selection made? Have not, contrary to practice and to the express assurance of the Magistrate to the contrary, many new witnesses been added? Has not there been every appearance of making up a case against me? Is it honorable in a Government prosecution to do so? Does it not look more like a proceeding for ensuring a conviction at all events, than an impartial investigation for the discovery of the truth? Thus ought to be the only object of a Government-like that of the East India Company. What crime have I committed against the Government that it has adopted such harsh proceedings against me? Is the Burdwan property the property of Government? No; but Government has extended to the present possessors of it, that parental protection and assistance which it has done to Rairakisen Bysack. Has not the present possessor sufficient means to protect himself? Has he not come forward and taken defence to my suit in the Supreme Court at Calcutta by this legal adviser? Did the Government entertain a fear, that, even with the immense wealth at his disposal, and the influence which wealth generates, Prawnchunder Baboo would be unable to resist my just claims; that it thought it necessary to intervene and commence, in its own name, a criminal prosecution against me, on charges as beneath the dignity of a Government to support, as they are beneath the dignity of a court of justice to entertain? But how are these charges supported? Did not the Magistrate himself, the immediate prosecutor under Government, voluntarily say in open Court, after examining Mavers, Trower, Prinsap, Pattle, Hutchinson, Overbeck, Marklots, Becher, and that paragon of integrity, the Rajah Buddinath Roy, all Government witnesses, that all the evidence given by these gentlemen, was of a very inconclusive nature. Let me here remark, on the evidence of Rajah Buddinath Roy who spoke in favor of the prosecution. Was not that witness proved to have committed gross perjury? As much was stated by the Magistrate after his examination. I ask, did the Government officer and his committee that witness for perjury, as they have committed one of the witnesses in this court? I do not advocate such a proceeding, as it would have prevented, most likely, the witnesses which were produced coming to give evidence against me; but no such consideration weighed in charging with perjury one of the witnesses who spoke favorably towards me, and of committing him at once to jail. The effect of this proceeding is, not much calculated to induce respectable natives to come forward and give evidence in my favor. The Magistrate thought proper to produce a picture in evidence against me. Mr. Trower said it reminded him very much of Rajah Pertaub Chund. Mr. Rad-eston, he would not say, upon seeing it, that he should at once have said it was the picture of the Rajah. On his cross examination he says, that the picture at a certain time, was like Pertaub. Mr. Pattle said, that if the picture was like Pertaub, he did not recollect Pertaub—he thought Pertaub had a Grecian nose. And Mr. Hutchinson, who does not recollect the picture, says he had an aquiline one. Mr. Overbeck said the picture was like Pertaub Mr. Becher said that it did not recall the appearance of Pertaub to his memory. Now, I beg to remind you, that this picture was produced from the Rajbarry as being the picture of Rajah Pertaub Chund. What do these witnesses say as to the likeness between me and the picture? Mr. Trower says nothing. Mr. Prinsep, Mr. Pattle, and Mr. Hutchinson say, that they see no resemblance between me and the picture: Mr. Overbeck said there was an evident likeness between me and the picture. Mr. Herklotz said nothing on the subject. Mr. Becher said he saw a very strong likeness; and if we believe him, Rajah Buddinauth Roy said, he saw a likeness between me and the picture. Mr. Prinsep said it was taller than Pertaub. One of the native witnesses, Pearymohun Baboo, swore that Rajah Pertaub was taller than I am, Mr. Pattle did not recollect whether I was tall or short. Mr. Hutchinson said I appeared considerably taller than Pertaub. The picture being measured and compared with my height, Mr. Becher swore they corresponded exactly. Mr. Trower said there was nothing in my countenance which reminded him of Pertaub. Mr. Prinsep said I did not answer to his recollection of Pertaub. Mr. Pattle said he knew nothing about it. Mr. Hutchinson said I appeared to be altogether a different person from Pertaub Chund. Mr. Trower said his memory was treacherous. I know it to be so. He only swore that he did not think I was Pertaub; but he could not swear positively that I was not. He has seen me only once at an interview. Whether his account of that interview is correct, you will hereafter be able to judge. He swore that frequent applications were made by me to see him, but he refused, and why? Because he thought in such a case his character might suffer. On this reason I make no remark, and dismiss Mr. Trower's evidence as inconclusive. Mr. Prinsep also saw me once, and he swears that because I did not recollect the particulars of an interview I had with him at Burdwan in 1819, I could not be Pertaub. The account given by Mr. Prinsep of the interview which I had with him in his office, is, in many respects, incorrect. You will hear my version of it, and you will be enabled to judge of the weight to be given to it. Mr. Prinsep said that he could not swear positively that I was or was not Pertaub, and therefore his evidence is inconclusive.

Mr. Pattle's evidence was that of an impartial witness. The length of time which had elapsed had weakened his memory, and he would not swear whether I was or was not Pertaub.

I admit that Mr. Hutchinson's evidence has more in it against me than that of any of the witnesses who preceded him. He could not swear positively that I was not Pertaub, but he believed I was not; and, as he was well acquainted with Rajah Pertaub, and did not swear that I was not Pertaub, his evidence is inconclusive. I had more to remark on this gentleman's evidence, but he is dead and I refrain from doing so, and I leave the prosecutor to all the benefit he expects from his testimony. I need scarcely say that the evidence of Mr. Herklotz amounts to absolutely nothing; for, by his own statement, that gentleman never saw the Rajah Pertaub Chund more than three times altogether, and the aggregate duration of these three interviews, (some twenty years ago, too), was about a couple of hours.

But what opportunities have these gentlemen had of ascertaining whether I was or was not Rajah Pertaub Chund? Have I avoided them? Have I not begged for private interviews? Have I not courted inquiry, and have they not refused my applications? Why did they do so? Because before they saw me they believed me to be an impostor; Mr. Trower refused my application because he thought his character would suffer. In the name of reason how could it suffer by granting me an interview? I admit that these gentlemen gave me one interview. You shall hear the circumstances under which that interview was granted, and what occurred at it, and you will judge how far it bears against me. A great stress has been laid on my not being able to recollect certain circumstances which occurred to the Rajah Pertaub Chund, and it has been concluded, that because I have not been able to recollect every circumstance which occurred between me and every individual with whom I had, in former days, any intimacy, that therefore I am an impostor. Was there ever a more groundless conclusion? I ask you, Sir do you recollect every circumstance which occurred between you and every individual you have met with in this world? If you forget any one or many circumstances which did occur, would it be reasonable to conclude that you were not yourself—that you were guilty of gross fraud and imposture? But is not the mind of one man stronger than that of another? Is not memory more retentive in one individual than in another? Has not one man a capacity for recollecting matters of little moment or import whilst another can only retain in his mind great and important events? Is not memory improved by exertion and relaxed by inactivity? Is it not weakened by dissipation, and strengthened by abstinence or moderate living? I am accused of forgetfulness in not recollecting the names of European gentlemen. Are natives famous for retaining in their memory the names of English gentlemen? I believe not; but by whom am I accused of forgetfulness? Is it by Mr. Trower; or is it by the witnesses from the Rajbarry? If I show you that Mr. Trower did not recognize an English gentleman who attended on his own family in the capacity of Doctor, and who has a peculiarity in his appearance arising from lameness, will you consider it very extraordinary that I do not recollect the names of various individuals when asked in an off hand manner? If Mr. Trower did not recollect the individual who administered medicine to his children, and if he did not recollect the serious illness of a child at Burdwan, which terminated in its death, am I to be convicted of being an impostor because my memory is weak or defective? Because I am alleged to have forgotten who was the Judge of Burdwan during a particular year, or who preceded this man in office, or succeeded to that man? Because I did not, after an interval of twenty years, retain a sufficiently vivid recollection of the features of Mr. Prinsep, or Mr. Pattle, or Mr. Hutchinson, in an interview such as I had with these gentlemen? Because I did not recollect the particulars of an interview with Mr. Prinsep? Mr. Prinsep appears to forget altogether that circumstances and events, which have appeared important to one person, may have had little interest for another; and, that the details of that interview, upon which he dwells so much, and the minutest particulars of which seem to have been fixed indelibly upon his remembrance, might have been forgotten by Rajah Pertaub Chund within twelve months afterwards.

Mr. Pattle did not recollect Pertaub Chund's appearance after seeing his acknowledged picture. He said his recollection of Pertaub was incorrect. If the recollection of so acute a gentleman was incorrect, might not that of Pertaub also be incorrect? When Mr. Pattle said he did not recollect Pertaub, he was not treated as an impostor; but because I did not recognize at him once, I am treated as one.

Though all these gentlemen declared they believed the Rajah to be dead, and burnt, they would not take upon themselves to swear that I was not the Rajah Pertaub Chund. I shall produce most unexceptionable and highly respectable witnesses, who will swear that I am Rajah Pertaub Chund. Their evidence will not be founded on mere recollection. It will be founded on something more satisfactory.

I now proceed to the evidence of Dwarkanauth Tagore. I will do him the credit of saying, that his evidence before you was given in a very different manner from his deposition before the magistrate; but I will shew to you, that his evidence is not correct. He was not on an equality with me. He had very little opportunity of knowing me. He was employed by the Magistrate to get up witnesses against me. He was prepared by the Magistrate as to the evidence which was required. He says he gave Mr. Tinton several questions to put to me and that I did not answer them. He did not venture to say what these questions were, and they might have related to matters impossible to be answered. But did Mr. Tinton desert me? No; the refusal of Mr. Harrington, the Judge who tried and convicted me to allow me, to avail myself of his services, did not make him desert me. Ill health deprived me of his assistance. I am aware that the position of Dwarkanauth Tagore, gives to his evidence considerable weight with many. I may be able to weaken the effect, if any, that it may have had on you.

The only other person bearing an appearance of respectability, who was produced against me, independent of the retainers and dependants of Prawn Baboo, was Gossinath Bose. He said he did not recollect whether he had said to Mr. DeSouza and to others, within a few short months past, that I was Rajah Pertaub Chund. He did say so, and Mr. DeSouza will prove this to be true.

I now come to the evidence of the Rajbary witnesses, and regarding their testimony I have little to say. They have detailed the circumstances connected with my alleged death and burning with an almost painful particularity; but they were unable to mention any particulars connected with the death of my father, or any member of my family. My death is alleged to have taken place upwards of twenty years ago, whereas that of my father occurred within a few years. I am accused of not remembering the names of the English Gentlemen who were at the station at Burdwan. Did they remember them? No; they did not. And yet they continued all along at Burdwan whilst I was absent from it. I pray you remember who these parties are. Are they not all the relations and retainers of, Prawnchunder Baboo, who has managed to get his son placed in possession of my property? Have they not all the greatest possible interest in keeping me out from my rights? If I shall succeed in establishing my identity, what will become of them? Were there no other witnesses to produce against me except these relatives and creatures of Prawn Baboo? Where are my own and my father's old servants, and why were they not produced? Where are those persons who were in the habit of visiting me, and were on terms of intimacy with me? What has become of the five thousand persons who were present at my alleged death and burning and the respectable zemindars of the country, who knew me and the affairs of the Rajbary? Was Bissonauth sircar, the tax mohurer, the only person who could be produced to speak to the death and burning, out of the five thousand who are alleged to have been present? He was immediately recognized by the Molowrie as having given evidence in the case against Jadub Ghose, for perjury, and he did not venture to swear that I was burnt.

I put it to you, Sir, Is there any thing more easy for a witness to do, than to swear to the death and burning of an individual? From the mode in which these witnesses gave their evidence, it is manifest that they came into Court, resolved to swear at all hazards, to every fact which could militate against me; and this is not very surprising or unaccountable, when the deep interest which they have at stake, is taken into consideration, and that they were all and each immediately connected by the ties of blood, marriage, or pecuniary interest with Prawnchunder Baboo, whom they have not ventured to call. No relative of the deceased Rajah 1st Chunder or of myself has been produced.

A curious proof of their readiness to swear so strongly against me, is furnished by the earnestness with which they replied to the question relating to the similarity, or dissimilarity between Rajah Pertaub and myself. They would not allow a single point of resemblance. Each particular feature was totally unlike eyes, nose, lips, hands, feet, expression, gait, every thing. One man swore my feet were two long, though he could not see them. Another that the Rajah Pertaub Chund had very different teeth from these I have, although, during all his examination, my mouth was never open. A blind witness swore he knew I was not Rajah Pertaubchund from feeling my body. It is needless to adduce more instances of the strong swearing of these persons. Any impartial observer of the mode in which their testimony was given, must have been surely satisfied that these witnesses were quite overdoing their case, and that they were defeating their own object by a too obvious anxiety to obtain it.

Let us now consider whether the direct evidence given by these witnesses of my alleged death and burning, is more entitled to consideration and belief. It may appear at the first view, that when several persons depose to the details and particulars of the same event, their depositions compared, one with the other, are calculated to afford abundant room for searching cross-examination but the reverse will be found to have been the case here. The commonest Native ordinarily acquainted with the usages and customs of his countrymen, might have sworn safely and almost without any previous preparation, to all the minute circumstances connected with my alleged death and burning stated by the Rajbary witnesses, although at the date of that alleged event, he might have been a thousand miles distant from Culna. All that the Rajbary witnesses required, was a little schooling with respect to dates, and places and persons, and then the rest was a simple matter; for they had only to tax their memories to recollect the ordinary routine of rites and ceremonies which are performed upon the occasion of the death and cremation of every Hindoo who is of the same caste with that of the Rajah Pertaub Chund, and which had been actually performed on numerous other occasions when these very persons were present. Let me remind you, Sir, that the majority of these witnesses were of the Khetree caste, the same caste as that of the Rajah Pertaub Chund, and that it was their constant duty and practice, to attend at the performance of such ceremonies. Some of them had probably been present at such ceremonies at least fifty times; now, how was it possible to entrap them into discrepancies, even in the minutest particulars? Nay, I put it to you, Sir, whether minor variances and discrepancies in their evidence would not, infinitely, rather have strengthened, than weakened the probability of their story? Too great exactitude, with reference specially to trivial events, that have happened very many years ago, is far more fatal to the credibility of narrators, than even a considerable degree of contradiction and discrepancy, but these witnesses agree as to the circumstances of death and cremation, to a laughable nicety; and particularly while they differ widely, when they do not urge forgetfulness) in answering questions respecting important circumstances of a much more recent date, and of an equally impressive character. When a variety of witnesses, in denoting a succession of by-gone events, differ here and there in the subordinate circumstances, preserving consistency of course in the main outline, such little variances furnish rather a corroboration of the truth of their tale, and lead to the conviction that each has come untutored to tell his own story, honestly and fearlessly. But, when some twenty individuals lay claim to such marvellous minuteness of recollection, as to detail trivial events which happened a score of years ago, without making a single slip, and when the testimony of each one accords with that of all the rest, with such suspicious exactitude and particularity, the most probable inference is, that they have concerted to effect to support a false and fabricated story. Before concluding these comments upon the evidence for the prosecution, I beg to remind you that I am placed before you, who are sitting as a Judge in a Government Criminal Court; that you are a servant of that Government, and that I am to have my civil rights tried, though not decided, under a criminal charge and proceedings framed, instituted and supported by Government influence. That if I shall satisfy you that I am Raja Pertab, you cannot put me, under these proceedings, into possession of the property to which I lay claim. That if in this trial, notwithstanding all the disadvantages to which I am subjected, by the unjust, illegal and harsh proceedings of a Government functionary, the Magistrate of Hooghly, I shall obtain an acquittal, my rights will not be thereby decided; whereas if I am convicted on any one of the extraordinary charges preferred against me, a prejudice will thereby be created against me in any civil Court in which I may require to sue for my rights. That Government has not, at least it ought not, to have any interest in supporting the claim of the present possessors of the Burdwan Raj. That the Burdwan Zemindary is private and not Government property, and that my claim to be the Raja Pertab, does not, at least ought not, to affect the Government. That Government says Government officers have complained against me. That in claiming to be the Raja Pertab, I have committed no crime against the Government, and that the principal charge against me is, that I do claim to be Raja Pertab. That the Government has accused me of swindling; a person who says he has no complaint to make against me, and that he is not a party to this prosecution. That though I am charged with instigating and prevailing on many people, unlawfully and tumultuously to assemble at Calna, there is no evidence adduced; that I did instigate and prevail on any person to assemble at Calna, and the only witnesses which have been produced; being Government agents, have proved the falsity of the charge of my doing any thing "eminently calculated" to produce a breach of the peace. That there is no evidence that I instigated and prevailed on any parties tumultuously to assemble at Calna; and it is in evidence, that I went to Calna for a legal purpose. That there is no evidence that I during my stay at Calna, on various occasions, by the display of superior force, set at defiance the constituted authorities of the district and it is in evidence, that I expressed my willingness to obey all orders of the constituted authorities of the district. That the usual practice of the Court, has in this case, on the part of the Magistrate who committed me, been broken through. That the Magistrate has stated that certain things would be done which have not been done. That the Magistrate has produced new witnesses before your office, saying he would not do so. That the Magistrate has sworn back from your the names of witnesses explained to be

Court contrary to practice, and to his own word. That the Magistrate and his sheristadar, have, contrary to practice, taken an unusual interest in the proceedings in this Court. That a European gentleman of great talent, has been selected by Government to conduct the prosecution against me. That I have been prevented having free communication with my legal advisers and witnesses, and that several of my witnesses who have arrived, have been detained in charge of a Government officer. That my principal witnesses have not yet arrived; and, lastly, that after being arrested by a Magistrate who has falsified his proceedings, a nazir who has made a false report, a darogah who can neither read nor write. After being shot at by a military force and plundered by Government functionaries. After being detained in Ho hly jail (though arrested in the Burdwan district,) for months without knowing my crime, or being subjected to any prosecution. After being tried for riot, I have been committed on a charge which is unintelligible detained a close prisoner for nearly eight months and refused to be held to bail to any amount.

The first witness for the defence, Robert Scott, Esq. Surgeon, 37th Madras Native Infantry, was called up and deposed I am acquainted with the prisoner sitting, (meaning the alleged Pertab Chunder.) I was officiating as Civil Surgeon at Burdwan from 1815 to the end of 1817. I knew him as the young Raja of Burdwan. He was usually known as such by Europeans, but in his notes to me he subscribed himself Maharajah Rajah Pertab Chunder Bahadoor. He wrote English in those days, and spoke it, but not fluently.

Questioned by Mr. Lenth. During my stay at Burdwan, I had many opportunities of seeing and conversing with Rajah Pertab Chunder, both in private and in public. I was very intimate with him, and visited him personally, and when he was there, I was his regular medical attendant. I generally saw him two or three times during the week. Since my arrival here, I have had three interviews with him in the jail, and conversed with him, and put some question to him to satisfy myself as to his identity; and his replies convinced me that he was Rajah Pertab Chunder. I examined his person in the jail, and the result of it confirmed my former opinion. I attended him in 1817, when he had an ulcer in the inside of his right cheek; the mark of that ulcer is still seen in the prisoner's cheek, and the tooth opposite to it is gone. When I attended on him, I gave him a guggle, which he said had such an effect on him that he could not close his mouth for two days. The ulcer was caused by a decayed tooth, and had the appearance of a sinus. The Raja had lost a tooth which I attended him. The prisoner has likewise the mark of a buboo on the right groin, corresponding to what Pertab Chunder had. The prisoner's face is darker than Pertab Chunder's was, but the body is similar. Exposure of the face to the atmosphere will darken it. A person might surely make a sore on his cheek, but I do not think that he could have made it so accurately on the spot as in the Raja's mouth. It could only have been made by one who had known the young Raja had one there. I saw no one at Burdwan that resembled Pertab Chunder, and if I had seen any person bearing that strong resemblance to Pertab Chunder as the prisoner does, I should not have forgotten it. I knew many Moaibs. The Raja used to perspire even in the cold weather; the prisoner is troubled with the like complaint. The prisoner's gait while sitting, and his habit of laughing and clearing his throat previous to speaking, is the same as the Raja's was. The prisoner's nose is exactly like the Raja's, but the Raja's lips were protuberant and his face broader than the regular habits. The Raja's eyes were very prominent, but age will flatten them. I have a very retentive memory, and on my first arrival here, the natives I saw, particularly in the Raja's family, made a strong impression on me. My situation as a Regimental Surgeon, enabled to speak decisively to the ages of natives, in consequence of all recruits for my regiment having to pass examination before me, before they are enlisted in it. From my examination of the prisoner in jail, I should suppose him to be between 45 or 46 years old. I asked the prisoner why he did not converse in English, as he formerly did. He replied that from having discontinued it he had forgotten it; he, however, made one or two attempts, but failed to speak intelligibly. When I returned from England to India in 1832, after an absence of two years, I had greatly forgotten the Hindoostanee, which I formerly spoke fluently. Pertab Chund was a hard drinker and his memory might have been affected by it. The prisoner drew for me in the jail, a plan of the Rajbarry at Burdwan, and as far as he sketched it, the plan was perfectly correct. The prisoner appears somewhat taller than the Rajah was, but the rotundity of the muscles being diminished by age, the leanness of the body makes the person appear taller than when he is stout. The prisoner is thinner than the young Rajah was. I, after my arrival here, saw Mr. Trower in his office. He did not recognize me, and from my conversation with him then, he did not appear to have a good memory. From all that I have seen of the prisoner since my arrival here, I have no doubt that he is Pertab Chund.—Hurkaru, Dec. 22.

Dr. Robert Scott's examination continued.—Questioned by Mr. Bignell. My eye-sight is not so good as it was, but still I can see clearly without glasses, I occasionally use them in examining minute objects, I have a pair now of extra magnifying power, and this precludes my using two pair of spectacles. When I saw the prisoner in jail, I had my usual spectacles on, and only one pair. I first arrived in Bengal in 1815. I came out a Doctor's mate in the Ship Lady Castlereagh. I became so intimate with the young Rajah during my stay at Burdwan, as he spoke the English, and I did not then know the native languages, and I associated more with him than the other natives. I visited him at all hours with the exception after midnight. The Rajah was very sociable.

During the examination, Mr. Bignell put questions as to whether he saw scenes of drunkenness and obscenity, and went even so far as to ask whether the witness's character was notorious up to the present day for owing venereal complaints at Burdwan. Witness answered no.

Mr. Leith objected to these questions. He said, that they were irrelevant to the case in question, and tended to disparage the witness's character. He was in the Company's service, and that was a sufficient guarantee of his character.

Mr. Bignell replied, that he had his instructions from Government, and to them only he was responsible for his conduct in the case.

Mr. Leith then submitted the objection to the judge, and he coinciding in opinion with Mr. Leith, Mr. Bignell therefore discontinued this line of procedure.

Examination of Dr. Scott continued.—I was at a match given by Pertab Chund. I saw Mr. J. Martin, the Judge, and his family and Captain Webber, the commandant of the Provincial Battalion, at the Rajbarry. I am not aware that amongst the papers seized by the Burdwan Magistrate at Culna when the prisoner was arrested, a sketch of the Rajbarry at Burdwan, was found. The questions which I put to the prisoner when I saw him in the jail, and his replies to them are these. I asked him whether he recollected me and if he recollected any of my particular pursuits in those days. His answer was, that he perfectly recollected me, and that I was very fond of shooting pariah dogs with a pistol. The next question was whether he had lost of his habit of drinking Madeira wine. His reply was that he had discontinued drinking wine, as he liked braggly much better. I then asked him about his coachman, who drove his four-in-hand carriage. He replied, the man is dead. I asked him what had become of the Rajbarry at Chinsurah. The reply to which was not very satisfactory. I then asked him about the ore in his mouth, the particulars of which I have already deposed to. I then questioned him regarding the Judges and Magistrates in those days at Burdwan. He could not name any of them with the exception of Mr. Martin. I then inquired of him whether he recollected any circumstances that took place in the civil jail at Burdwan. He replied, that Ruggo Bahoo, who had been committed to that Jail by Mr. Butler, had poisoned himself, and that I had opened and examined his body to ascertain the cause of his death, which reply was perfectly correct. These were all the material circumstances on which I questioned him. I am not a volunteer witness. I come in consequence of a subpoena from this Court, and if I had disobeyed that subpoena, I was afraid of being fined for a contempt of Court. Before I received the subpoena I did write to the prisoner's agent, that I had been formerly a Surgeon at Burdwan, and that if I wrote to the prisoner, I thought I would be able to identify whether the prisoner was the Burdwan Rajah or not, as I was on very intimate terms with him whilst at Burdwan, but it did not sign my name to the letter, but sent it under an anonymous signature. I most distinctly deny that I have any prepossessions in the prisoner's favor, and I have no interest or bias for any party in this case. As people grow older they seem generally to grow shorter. Habitual intemperance, if carried to a great extent, would affect the constitution and alter the delineations of the face, but some strong constitutions stand it out longer than others. The memory required to retain the remembrance of a language, learnt ungrammatically, by mere colloquial conversation with the natives, is more liable to fade during two years of its discontinuance than the remembrance of any striking event that has made a strong impression on the mind at the time it had occurred. I did attend Mr. Trower's family. I sent three doses of calomel to Mrs. Trower to give to her three children. She mixed them all up and gave them to the youngest, an infant, and returned the next day to Burdwan, and, I believe, the child died. Whether Mr. Trower recollects my having attended his family or has forgotten it, I cannot say. Mr. Trower came from Hooghly to Burdwan for three or four days, and she it was who wrote to me to attend on the children, and, perhaps, Mr. Trower might not have been aware of this fact, and this may account for his denying that I attended his family. Otherwise I cannot account how Mr. Trower's memory has faded on this point, and he has denied the fact.

Re-examined by Mr. Leith. I use the spectacles of the larger magnifying power, when I read or perform any surgical operation. The spectacles which I wore when I examined the prisoner in the jail, are perfectly sufficient for any ordinary purpose. When I knew the Rajah at Burdwan, I was a bachelor and about 24 years of age.

Mr. Bignell objected to Mr. Leith's re-examining the witness. He said, that the practice was unusual and contrary to the Mofussil practice, and he did not see the propriety of any Barrister coming forward to upset those rules; and if so, he may claim another re-examination after Mr. Leith has finished, and then there would be no end to this examination.

Mr. Leith replied, that it would be very unusual, and this, Mr. Leith's questions bear only on the replies elicited by Mr. Bignell on the cross-examination of the witness, and he certainly did not suppose, that Mr. Bignell, or the Government pleader, would make this objection when the object of Government ought to be to elicit the truth and not to make itself a party to the case.

Mr. Bignell replied, that he is the best judge of his conduct, and what are his instructions from Government on the subject.

Mr. Curtis remarked, that he could not well give a reply to the objection of Mr. Bignell. Vakeels are only admitted in the Mofussil Court in civil cases, as the admitting a mooktar on the prisoner's behalf is a departure from the general practice. He cannot comply with Mr. Bignell's objections.

Re-examination of Dr. Scott continued. The mark in the prisoner's cheek was of old standing. When I examined the prisoner in jail, it was in the cold weather. I have not received my expenses for coming here, and intend to petition Government on the matter.

John Ridley, writer in the Secret and Political Department, deposed. I was formerly a writer in the Collectorate of Burdwan, during the years 1815, 16 and 17 and had opportunities of becoming acquainted with Rajah Pertab Chund. The prisoner resembles him. I saw the prisoner at Calcutta and questioned him and his replies were satisfactory. I have been 23 years in Government employ. Fraser Be Bordesux, Jack Clermont, and Latout were in Pertab Chund's service. Peter Emmer went to Burdwan after I resigned my situation there, in consequence of obtaining a situation in the Marine Board at Calcutta, and I saw him at his residence in Park-street. From these visits I had sufficient opportunities to recollect his countenance. In May 1837 Mr. Graham requested me to visit the prisoner for the purpose of identification. My questions during that interview were of a nature to enable me to satisfy myself as to the prisoner's identity and from his replies and appearance. I am quite positive that he is the real Rajah Pertab Chund. I sold the Rajah in 1819, a gold alarm watch. I asked the prisoner when I saw him in May 1837, whether I had sold him any articles, and he said that I had, and he detailed to me the particulars of the sale.

Cross-examined. During the year, I went as an assistant to Mr. Pilman, Secretary to the Revenue Board to the Upper Provinces. I am now a section-writer and earn from 100 to 300 rupees a month. I was not on intimate terms with the Raja, but I went to visit his Christian assistants and used to see him occasionally then. The questions which I put to the prisoner were these. I asked whether he recollected the dispute between his sepoy and the Provincial Battalion sepoy at Burdwan. He said he did. I asked him how it ended, he replied that an order was passed by the Revenue Board to allow his sepoy to wear uniforms of a green collar. This reply was correct. The next question was regarding the watch, and then I put to him several minor questions and his replies were correct. The sale of the watch was a ready money transaction and the Raja paid me 650 rupees for it.

Re-examined by Mr. Leith. I have besides my daily earnings, two houses in Calcutta.

A petition was put in by the prisoner's mooktar, stating that if the case was postponed until Wednesday next, the 26th instant, to enable Mr. Shaw to examine the witnesses that are subpoenaed on behalf of the defence, and see if he could not dispense with many of them, whose testimony would be of no avail to the prisoner, and whose detention here would only incur an expense and inconvenience to the Government; and he contended that if this request were complied with, that this short postponement would eventually tend to shorten the case considerably, by getting rid of the testimony of several unnecessary witnesses.

Mr. Bignell remarked, that if the granting of the proposition would eventually tend to shorten the proceedings, he had no objection to the request being complied with.

Mr. Curtis remarked, that the only objection he could have to the petition, was a fear that the Nizamut Adawlut might suppose that he had postponed the case for his own convenience. He, however, in consideration that he could have yesterday taken up the examination of the witnesses of Hurry Narrain Roy, the Hurdhun Rajah, five of whom are in attendance, and which examination will perhaps take up the greater part of to-morrow, and that as Tuesday is a holiday, there would, in granting the petition, be already one day's postponement of the trial strictly speaking. He, therefore, on the petition being presented, complied with its prayer.

Mr. Leith stated, that Mr. Samuells's has prohibited Mr. Shaw from taking any witness to the prisoner in the jail, previous to their deposition being giving in Court, unless some person connected with the jail was present. This, Mr. Leith stated, was a hardship; for when the witnesses for the prosecution were brought to see the prisoner in the jail, no notice was given to the defendant's attorney of their being taken there. Now it so happens, that in the case of the evidence of one of one of the witnesses for the prosecution, one of them had been handed over by the Government pleader to the Magistrate, on a charge of perjury, because the public officers who had accompanied him when he was taken to the jail to recognize the prisoner, could depose in the case against that witness, as to his having perjured himself, whereas in cases where other witnesses had testified from the truth, the defence could not prosecute them, because if they were to do so, they could have no evidence to produce but that of the amlahs who were Government servants; and of the prisoner, who could not legally be an evidence in his own case. Further as to the supposition of Mr. Samuells, that if one of the Government amlahs were not present during the prisoner's interviews with the witnesses, they might be tampered with, which he hoped that the character for respectability which Mr. Shaw and Mr. Graham have borne, will keep them from abetting any transaction of that nature, which would ultimately be a stigma on their character, if they were to do so; and, besides, if that was all that Mr. Samuells apprehended, these witnesses could be equally well tampered with and tutored without seeing the prisoner and out of the jail as in the jail, and in a private interview with the prisoner; and that confining the witnesses on charges of perjury and the surveillance which they undergo before being examined before the Court, tends to deter many from coming forward and testifying to the truth, and thereby retards what he considers ought to be the sole object of the prosecution, viz. the elucidation of the truth; he therefore moved the Court to set aside Mr. Samuells's order and permit Mr. Shaw to take the witnesses to his client in jail, and let them communicate with them without the check of a Government functionary; for otherwise he was apprehensive that they might dread meeting the same fate as the witnesses already confined on a charge of perjury has met.

The Judge replied, that he believed that the man alluded to by Mr. Leith, must be speedily liberated, as it did not appear to him that there was sufficient evidence to convict him. With regard to Mr. Shaw or Mr. Graham, he had not the least intention to throw a slur on their character, when he said that his setting aside Mr. Samuells's order, as requested by Mr. Leith, might possibly give ground to a report of tampering with and tutoring the witnesses for the defence; he therefore declined reverting to it; but in the empty verandah of his Court, the prisoner was welcome, during the Court's Sittings, to see and speak with any of his witnesses in private for an hour or so, and whenever he would intimate his wish on that subject to Mr. Curtis, he would grant him permission to do so.—Hurkaru, Dec. 24.

HOOGHLY MAGISTERIAL COURT.—DECEMBER 20, 1838.

(Before E. A. Samuells, Esq., Magistrate.)

CONTEMPT OF COURT.

Mr. W. D. Shaw attended the Magistrate's Court this evening, accompanied by his legal adviser J. F. Leith, Esq., to answer to a summons issued against him for a contempt of Court, alleged by the Magistrate to have been committed by Mr. Shaw in addressing him a letter, which contained certain highly improper expressions, that formed the basis of the charge against Mr. Shaw.

With a view to elucidate this matter more fully and to avoid disputations regarding the accuracy of my report, we here give copies of the correspondence which caused this investigation.

To the Magistrate of Hooghly.

SIR.—I have arrived from Calcutta with the intention of visiting my client, the Rajah Periaiah Chund, to-morrow morning, before the Court sits, and I find, that notwithstanding the orders of the Sessions' Judge (and which were concurred in by Mr. Bignell) I am only to be allowed admission into the jail between the hours of 10 A. M. and 4 P. M., the very hours in which my client is in Court. I also understand, that you have issued orders to prevent the Rajah's legal advisers and the witnesses for the defence, having any communication with the Rajah except in the presence of one of your people. I object to these orders, and I have to request that you will issue an order for my admission into the jail between 6 A. M. and 4 P. M., or one hour after sunrise to sunset or an hour after the Court rises, and for my being permitted to visit my client with not more than two witnesses during those hours, and without any of your people attending without hearing. To your people keeping a proper guard, I can of course make no objection. Your answer by bearer will oblige.

Yours obediently,

(Signed) W. D. SHAW.

December 19, 1838.

P. S. I beg to give you notice, that it has been reported to me, that my client is unwell and has been suffering all the day from dysentery.

On receipt of this letter, Mr. Samuells, the Magistrate, addressed the following reply.

To W. D. Shaw, Esq., Attorney at Law.

SIR.—I have received your letter of yesterday's date, and have to inform you in reply, that from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. are the ordinary and the regular hours of admission into the jail: that you were frequently admitted at all hours, was an indulgence, the continuance of which you had no right to expect after the discovery of the manner in which that indulgence had been abused. As these hours, however, would in all probability be inconvenient to the prisoner and his witnesses, and as I do not conceive that any misconduct of yours ought to be allowed to affect their interests, I will issue orders for the alteration of the hours of admission; you will henceforth accordingly be admitted from 6 A. M. to 10 A. M. and from 4 P. M. to 6 P. M. Mr. Graham must also be content to restrict himself to these hours.

2ndly. The jail-darogah has no orders to prevent you or Mr. Graham, when alone from communicating with your client in private, as much as you think proper; he has orders, however, to prevent any witness from holding an interview with the prisoner in the absence of himself or one of his subordinates. When the witnesses for the prosecution visited the prisoner, you had the advantage of hearing from your client any circumstance which occurred at these interviews; and I am quite determined, that as far as I am concerned, both parties shall have equal advantages. You are, therefore, distinctly to understand, that you are prohibited from introducing any witness to your client in private. I must desire also, that you will leave the names of the witness who may take with you, and their places of abode, with the jailer at the door, previous to entering the building. This is the only condition upon which I can dispense with the customary application to myself. Your visits to the jail are to be confined to the ward of the criminal jail in which your client is confined. Having now distinctly explained to you all the orders affecting yourself, which have been issued to the jail-darogah, I have only further to warn you, that any infraction of these rules upon your part, will subject you to such punishment as the nature of your offence may appear to demand.

I am, Sir, &c., &c.

(Sd) E. A. SAMUELLE, Magistrate.

Zillah Hooghly, Dec. 20, 1838.

[To this letter Mr. Shaw returned the undermentioned reply]

To the Magistrate of Hooghly.

SIR.—I have been honored with your communication of this date, in reply to my letter sent to you last night; and in answer to the first paragraph, I beg to say, that I consider it no indulgence, being permitted to communicate with my client. I consider that I have a right to a free communication with him whilst in prison. Since, however, you have granted to me what I have required, I shall say no more on the subject. With regard to your assertion, that I have misconducted myself and abused my right of admission to the jail, I beg distinctly to deny the truth of that assertion, and to say, that the insinuation contained in your letter to the Judge, viz. that I had been tampering with the witnesses selected by you from my client's attendants, to give evidence for the Company, is without foundation. Mr. Bignell's voluntary admission in Court, that the evidence of one of the only two of these witnesses who were examined, viz. Horroclunder Moonshy, was fair and impartial, is of itself a contradiction of your insinuation. Having heard that improper means had been adopted to induce these witnesses to give evidence contrary to the truth, I did visit the civil jail, and told the four attendants of the Rajah to tell the truth and not to allow themselves to be frightened into saying other than the truth. I said no more on the subject and only asked them how they were treated. I visited the hospital in consequence of having heard that many of the persons who were arrested at Culna, were suffering much from sickness, want of clothing and proper nourishment; and I found that the report I had heard was a correct one. I had on other occasions visited the civil jail and the hospital. On none of my visits was any objection made to my going into these places, and my visits, therefore, cannot be considered improper. Knowing as I now do, there is an objection, I shall not visit these places without permission. In reply to that part of the second paragraph of your letter, in which you say that I had the advantage of learning from my client what occurred at the interviews between him and your witnesses, and that you are quite determined so far as you are concerned, that both parties shall have equal advantages, I do admit that I had the advantage, of hearing from my client what did occur, and I beg to say, that if I had the means of giving that statement in evidence to the Judge (which I have not, as you must be well aware, my client being a defendant) it would shew that gross perjury had been committed by many of the witnesses for the prosecution. I shall leave this matter, however, to be decided by the Judge. In reply to that part of the second paragraph of the letter under reply which requires the names and residences of the witnesses to be given to the jailor, I beg to say that as it appears reasonable it shall be complied with.

4th. In reply to the last part of that paragraph in which you threaten me with such punishment as the nature of the offence which I may commit may appear to demand, I have only to say that I have no doubt that when you succeed in proving that I have committed an offence, you will not fail to inflict a sufficient punishment.

I remain, &c.

(Sd) W. D. Shaw.

This letter was delivered to the Magistrate's penon who took it to him, and he on receipt of it issued a summons for Mr. Shaw's appearance in his Court to answer to the charge of having been guilty of a contempt of Court by sending him this letter; and Mr. Shaw, as aforesaid, appeared accompanied by his Counsel Mr. Leith.

Mr. Leith prima facie objected to the jurisdiction in this case, which objection being overruled, he then proceeded to argue that there was no contempt of Court, as stated in the Magistrate's summons. The matter to which the alleged contempt of Court relates, was not a matter relating to a Court of Justice; but it was merely in reply to a written communication made by the Magistrate to Mr. Shaw; and the alleged contempt of Court is asserted to be contained in that reply, which was in fact only a letter, addressed to the Magistrate by Mr. Shaw, and simply a visitation of his conduct against certain charges made against him in the Magistrate's letter, and which charges were made in an extra official proceeding. Further, with regard to all contempts of Courts, all Courts of Justice which are vested with a power of punishing for a contempt of Court, exercise that power only in extreme cases, for it is a power granted by law, whether in conformity with some regulation or custom, not in the individual, but solely for the protection of the Court, in which he is at the time sitting in exercise of judicial functions. And even in Her Majesty's Courts of Records, which are the highest Courts here the Majesty of the Crown is even supposed to be present even there, this is the law. In this particular case Mr. Leith informed the Magistrate, that he was not sitting either as a Judge or a Magistrate nor was Mr. Shaw present in any Court when he committed the alleged contempt.

Mr. Leith then contended, that there was nothing in any of the passages which the Magistrate had read to him from Mr. Shaw's letter to the Magistrate of the 20th instant, which could possibly be construed into a contempt of Court.

Mr. Samuel's replied, that the word insinuation was the objectionable word, and he likewise added, that in the latter part of Mr. Shaw's letter, where he had stated that the Magistrate would, he doubted not, summarily punish him if he committed an offence, went to charge the Magistrate with personal malice against Mr. Shaw.

Mr. Leith argued, that the word insinuation, as applied in the letter alluded to by the Magistrate, could not in his opinion be construed into an offensive meaning. Moreover, it was the very expression which had been adopted by the Magistrate's senior functionary, viz. the Sessions Judge, in describing the Magistrate's communication, and if it had in that instance been made use of by the Judge sitting in a public Court of Justice, and whose words are supposed to be well weighed before they are expressed, surely if he could apply it in open Court, without an offensive meaning being put to it, then Mr. Shaw's adopting the expression in his letter, could not possibly be construed into a contempt of Court, if that was the term by which the Sessions Judge described his subordinate officer's communication to Mr. Shaw. After he had read it, as usually Mr. Shaw, who had never seen this communication, could form his ideas of it only from what Mr. Curtis had mentioned to him of it; and in so doing, he could not be blamed if he described it in the very words in which Sessions Judge had described it; and if there is any thing wrong in that expression, then the blame, if any, ought to be attached to the person who first used it, and not to the individual who simply adopted it. Mr. Leith added, that if he had received the letter in question, he could not have supposed the word insinuation, as contained in it, to be objectionable. There is nothing objectionable to the term itself, and he is at a loss to discover in the context ought to make that objectionable; for it will be observed, that the word insinuation has direct reference to the Magistrate's letter to the Judge, and whether the Magistrate had a right to make that insinuation to the Judge, appeared to Mr. Leith to be the question which ought to be previously answered. Mr. Leith then drew the Magistrate's attention to the fact, that he was sitting as an arbitrator in his own case and deciding a matter between him and Mr. Shaw, and it could not be imagined that he could be divested of all personal feeling on the occasion. Now the tenor and the practice of the law regarding contempts, were not to put a contemptuous meaning on any expression used by a party in any Court, if there could possibly be put any other meaning to those expressions. Could the Magistrate take upon himself to say, that the expression in question, as used in Mr. Shaw's letter to him, could not bear any other construction than the one he had put upon it? If it could, then the magistrate was in duty bound to suppress all individual feelings in the case and put the mildest construction he possibly could on the term in question.

The magistrate confessed, that when he received Mr. Shaw's letter to him, his feelings had been roused, and at the time that he issued the summons against Mr. Shaw, he had an intention of punishing him more severely than he would now probably do.

Mr. Leith went on to contend, that there could not possibly be any harm in Mr. Shaw's stating that he doubted not that the magistrate would punish him sufficiently if he committed an offence. It puts it more than to say, that the magistrate would do his duty strictly, and what more can be required of a conscientious magistrate, than to punish offenders on conviction adequately to their crimes.

The magistrate said, that Mr. Shaw, in his letter, had stated that the witnesses for the prosecution had been tampered with; now as those witnesses are under the magistrate's charge he considered that expression of Mr. Shaw, as an insinuation against himself.

Mr. Leith replied, that he was quite astonished to hear the magistrate talk so. It was supposing the dignity of the magisterial office to be degraded to that of an attorney's clerk, in tutoring and keeping witnesses. Surely Mr. Samuel's character for respectability, is too well known to encourage the idea of such an insinuation being ever cast on it. It would be madness in Mr. Shaw if he were to attempt to do so, and it was certainly not very wise, in Mr. Leith's opinion, for Mr. Samuel's to suppose the charge to be against himself.

The question, said the magistrate, is, what had Mr. Shaw insinuated? It was clear to him that much was intended in the letter which was highly of a disrespectful nature.

Mr. Leith replied, that Mr. Samuel's letter to Mr. Shaw was very bad. Mr. Shaw was in it accused of misconduct, and he had but defended himself.

Mr. Samuel said, that the expression used in his letter to Mr. Shaw, was quite incidental, and it needed no reply.

Mr. Leith remarked, that he differed from the magistrate on that point.

The magistrate then summed up. He said that he had his doubts as to whether the Sessions Judge had received his letter to him in the light stated by Mr. Leith, but he certainly did concur with the magistrate in his orders he had passed regarding Mr. Shaw's visits to this jail. With regard to the offence of Mr. Shaw, he in spite of the very ingenious argument of Mr. Leith, still considered his reading him that letter to be a very serious contempt of Court, and were it not for the observation of Mr. Leith that the magistrate is now sitting as a Judge in his own case, he would have fined Mr. Shaw more severely than he now was disposed to do. With regard to Mr. Leith's assertion that the conviction was not used in a Court of Justice, he begged to inform him, that his Court is not confined to time and place, but extends all over the Hooghly district, and at any time that he chooses to transact his official duties at any place within his Zillah, then and there his Court is constituted; and that the letter was an official one is apparent from its direction, it being addressed to the magistrate of Hooghly. He, therefore, under all the circumstances of the case, in order to uphold the dignity of his office, which he considered had been contemptuously treated by Mr. Shaw in the present instance, could not fine him less than 50 rupees. He then ordered his Sadraddar to record this conviction and fine.

Mr. Leith begged the Magistrate to inform him by what law or regulation the conviction had been made in this case.

The Magistrate replied, by the common law of all civilized countries.

Mr. Leith asked whether it had been made by the common law of England.

The Magistrate replied, no.

Mr. Leith asked then, by what common law is the conviction made, if not by the common law of England; for there was no common law of India to the best of his knowledge and belief, and the law of any other country, could not be acted upon in this country, it not being under their dominion.

Mr. Samuel's replied, that the conviction had been made by the regulations of India, and it is by the power vested in every Court of Justice to convict and punish for contempt of Court. It is an inherent power of the Court.

Mr. Leith wished to know, under what particular regulation the conviction was made; for, if Mr. Shaw paid the fine, which he must, in order to avoid incarceration, it will be under a protest against the proceedings, and he will appeal to a higher Court against this decision.

Mr. Samuel's attempted for a short time to recollect and point out the regulation under which this conviction had been made; but failing to do so, he replied, it is not made under any particular regulation, but partly under regulation and partly by the inherent power and practice of this Court; and he added, that if Mr. Shaw wished he could to-morrow have an official copy of his proceedings in this case, together with the order he had passed on it, and that would specify under what regulation and authority he had made this conviction and imposed the fine he had done.

After this the Magistrate took Mr. Leith's security for the payment of the fine next morning, and the parties retired.

It is Mr. Shaw's intention to appeal from this decision.

HOOGHLY SESSIONS' COURT.—DECEMBER 22.

(Before J. Curtis, Esq, Sessions Judge.)

DEFENCE OF HURRY HUR NARRAIN ROY, RAJA OF HURDHUN, ONE OF THE PARTIES IN THE CASE OF GOVERNMENT VERSUS THE FEROZ RAJAH PERTAB CHUNDER, &c.

Ram Chunder Chatterjee, Gomastah resident of Moosunda, Zillah Nuddea, deposes, I know Rajah Hurry Hur Narrain Roy, Rajah of Hurdhun. In Byssack last, about the 19th instant, I went to Culna, to search for a man who had run away with some of my money, and after searching vainly for him all day, as I was returning home, on my way to my village, I saw from the ghant at Culna, the Hurdhun Rajah, seated on the top of a howdah. I went to him and paid my respects to him, and asked what had brought him to Culna. He replied, that he was proceeding to Kishnagar, and had stopped for a day or two in the way to witness the miracle of a dead man having come to life again. I asked him when he intended proceeding on his voyage. He replied to day or to-morrow. I then took my leave and proceeded on my journey, and know nothing of the subsequent transaction which occurred there. The Rajah had about 20 or 25 attendants with him, besides the boatmen. He generally travels with about a similar retinue. I am now out of employ.

Chunder Seekur Roy, resident of Annundapoor, Zilla Nuddea, deposes, I know Rajah Hurry Hur Narrain Roy of Hurdhun. I am his tenant. I saw him, on the 17th Byssack last, leave his residence with a palkee and about 30 followers to proceed to Kishnagar in a budge-row. On the 19th of that month I went to Culna, to ascertain the price of some mustard seed. I then learned that the Hurdhun Rajah was there. I went on the 20th to see him in his boat and asked him what detained him there, and he said that he had stopped to see the miracle of a dead man having come to life, and said, "I will return to-morrow." I then took my leave and went home, and know nothing of the subsequent transactions that occurred there. The Hurdhun Rajah always travels with a retinue of 30 or 40 persons.

Govind Ghose, Milkman, resident of Moosunda, Zilla Nuddea, deposes, in confirmation of the evidence of the two former witnesses. There were two other witnesses in attendance to follow in the wake of the three witnesses, but neither the Sessions Judge nor the Mahomedan Law Officer considered it necessary to take further evidence on this point.

After this had been intimated to these witnesses, the Hurdhun Rajah expressed a wish to cross-examine the last witness, who then further deposed, that the Hurdhun Rajah had never assembled any riotous mob, nor been guilty of a breach of the peace, nor did he enlist any followers to forward them to the pseudo Pertab Chunder. In fact he never took any interest in his affairs and was a complete stranger to him, and in passing Culna on his way to Kishnagar, hearing that the man who had caused such a sensation in the country for the last two years, by asserting himself to be Pertab Chunder, the late Rajah and Zemindar of Burdwan, was at Culna, he had merely gone from motives of curiosity to see him.

Ranee Footah Komar, the sister of the late Rajah Tej Chunder of Burdwan, Ranee Peary Comarree, the widow of Rajah Pertab Chunder and Beebee Badamee, his maternal aunt, have, in reply to their subpoenas on behalf of the defence, written that the death of Rajah

Pertab Chunder at Culna in 1227 B. S. is a well known fact, and clear as the sun at mid day, and that as they are women of the respectability and puidah nusbees, they decline attending on their subpoenas, as their testimony would be no benefit to the impostor (as they state the prisoner is); and that the subpoenas are only vexatious processes against them, and their being carried into execution, would only tend to degrade their respectability and that of the family of the Rajah of Burdwan, therefore they declined to attend on their subpoenas and submitted objections to the Sessions Judge's consideration.

Mr. Curtis wrote a letter to Mr. Shaw, informing him that the witnesses for the defence had refused to go to Chinsurah and be tested by him; but that they were within the Court compound, and if Mr. Shaw wished to see them previous to their being examined, he could come to the Court and do so.—Hurkur Dec. 25.

DECEMBER 27.

William James Doere, Clergyman, resident of Kishenaghur, deposed. I have seen the prisoner on a former occasion here, in the Magistrate's Court. I went to Kishenaghur in 1832 from Burdwan. I knew Kisto Lal Brumachatee. My acquaintance with him commenced in 1832 at Kishenaghur. If not altered much within these six years, I think I could recognize him. I saw him last in 1832. I cannot say decidedly whether the prisoner is that Kisto Lal or not. In my former deposition, I stated that my impression was that he was not, but I could not swear that he was not. The prisoner is of the same stature, and his nose of the same formation, only Kisto Lal's pointed upwards and the prisoner's downwards. His eyes are of the same color. Kisto Lal had a fine, broad, open chest and shoulders. In 1832 and 1833 I was in Europe and returned to India in 1835. When the prisoner in 1836 was forwarded from Bancoorah to Hooghly, two men, who represented themselves to be Purran Baboo's servants, requested me to go to Hooghly and recognize the prisoner as Kisto Lal. They promised to pay my expenses. I declined to interfere personally, but offered to give them all the information in my power. These men never returned, but two men who pretended to be Purran Baboo's people came, but they appeared to be spies. Purran Baboo is the present Burdwan Rajah's father. I heard in 1821 bazat reports that Pertab Chund left his country to go to Runjet Singh to form a conspiracy against the British Government. Ramdhon Catechist lived with me when Kisto Lal visited me. I have a good opinion of Ramdhon. I know Mohes Pandit.

Mr. Leith asked witness's opinion of Mohes Pandit. Mr. Bignell objected to the question, and Mr. Leith waived it.

Witness deposed. I once had Mohes Pandit in the Court of Burdwan for a defamation of character. I would believe him on his oath on a matter which I knew to be true, otherwise I would take his deposition into consideration before I credited it. He would never be employed as a Catechist. Mohes Pandit is not now with me. He left me in 1833.

Examined by Mr. Bignell.—I received a letter from Mr. Shaw. I sought no damages from Mohes Pandit in my suit against him. I subsequently forgave him and re-employed him in the school. My impression as to the prisoner's identity is the same as it was, when I deposed before the Magistrate. I cannot speak positively on that point.

Re-examined by Mr. Leith. The letter from Mr. Shaw I received within these eight weeks, and I have destroyed it because I dreaded being entangled with attorneys. The letter advised me to ascertain the marks on Kisto Lal's body and the time of his disappearance, and it disapproved of certain proceedings in the prisoner's case, and added, that he would report it to Lord Brougham. The letter did not offer me any remuneration for my expenses, nor did it call on me to attend as a witness in the case. Here is the bill for my expenses.

Daniel Antonio Overbeck deposed. I have already deposed that I could not recognize the prisoner to be Raja Pertab Chund. I never met Pertab Chund in the plight and apparel as I did the prisoner two years ago in the Hooghly Jail. I never saw Pertab in Jail, and I always met him apparelled as a native prince. I was formerly Governor of Chinsurah, and in 1826 I was one of the commissioners appointed by the Netherlands Government to deliver Chinsurah over to the English. About 18 months previous to my being examined before the magistrate, I, at Doctor Wise's request, saw the prisoner in the Hooghly Jail. I at first considered him to be an impostor; but when I took him a little aside from the other gentlemen, I told him by way of threatening him, that he could not very easily deceive me, as I was acquainted with all the marks which Pertab Chund had on his body, and though he at first was very much abashed, he brightened up directly, and answered, all these marks are mine. There was a slight mark behind Pertab Chund's right ear, occasioned by the little glazed stone of a kite. He had a mark on his back between the shoulder occasioned by the bite of a vicious horse. His coachman Peter Emmer, Neemoo and Sydon, will be better able to particularize it. He also had a mark on his knee, of which Dr. Halliday could give the history, a mark on the upper part of his left hand, occasioned by a scald received in some foolish love affair, and some other trifling marks, which in the course of my examination I may recollect. I have not seen these marks on the prisoner, as I had no occasion to examine him in the Jail. I requested permission to examine him in the Magistrate's court, but both Mr. Samuels and Mr. Leith disagreed with me on this point and objected to it. Mr. Leith said that when I would be examined before the Sessions Judge on this point, then I could inspect his body. I have not as yet examined the prisoner's body. I had many opportunities of seeing Pertab Chund. He visited me frequently. The mark which I saw on Pertab Chund's hand, I would be able to recognize. It was of the size of an eight annas piece. The other I know by the accurate descriptions I have heard of them many years ago from several persons.

Here the witness and Mr. Leith, requested to examine the prisoner, and the permission to examine, was granted to him in an adjoining room, accompanied by Mr. Bignell, Mr. Leith, and Mr. Graham. They retired for about half an hour, and then returned and the witness deposed.

I have traced the contour of the prisoner's face in the picture which was shown me as the picture of Raja Pertab Chund. I have traced all the marks, which Pertab Chund had on his body, and by examining the prisoner closely in the presence of the Counselors for the prosecution and the defence, he has answered every question which I put to him of days past satisfactorily, without any hesitation; consequently, to the best of my belief, the prisoner is Raja Pertab Chund. He gave a description of the interior of the Rajbarry at Chinsurah, and he answered as well as could be expected after 20 years. He likewise answered, with like correctness respecting the interior of my house and the manner of his reception there, and described the persons of Mr. Van Braden, and my son. The house in which I lived when Pertab Chund visited me, and respecting which I questioned him, was broken down in 1827, and the barracks were subsequently erected on the spot. The questions were calculated to satisfy me as to his identity—he could not otherwise have described it. The floor, the furniture and one of the pictures, described by him, were sold in 1845. The floor was boarded and painted all over with wreaths, and flowers. It was a very large room. I heard of Rajah Pertab Chund's sickness, and death. Shortly afterwards I heard that he was alive and had absconded. I made particular inquiries and learnt that at sunset he took a bowl of broth; he was in the evening taken out in a palkee into a tent near the river, surrounded by kumhents, and attended by his servants. At night he was suddenly missed, and Prawn Bahoo searched for his body, and he had the Ganges dragged for the body ineffectually; and then the persons reported to Raja Tej Chunder that his son was glorified. He ordered his funeral ceremonies. A trunk was subsequently brought filled with shells, and burnt on the pyre, and the ashes were collected and carried to Ambleeka. The report was, I believe, very general. His servants were, I think, Musselmans. I do not know their names. Major Marshall was an ensign in the 20th N. I. in 1814. He was often here and was a visitor of mine, and he might have seen Raja Pertab Chund. Pertab was generally called the Young Raja of Burdwan. Wallise Mohamed, the Nazee of the Foulhain Court at Houghly, was then in my service. Ram Nuran, Sirdar, a writer in the Sudder Dwyany at Calcutta, was my writer, and John Anthony Postoo and Chochohal, now in my service, were then in my employ. One of Pertab's upper front teeth projected slightly. In the left angle of the right eye of Pertab Chund, there was a slight mark of a mahogany color, only observable when Pertab Chund elevated his eye. This mark exists in the prisoner's eye, but it is a little faded.

Cross examined by Mr. Bignell. I hear that now they will not admit any person into the Registry at Chinsurah. There was no similar name, nor room in Chinsurah like the house in which I lived when I saw Pertab Chund. Some times large parties used to be given there, and many people used to go there. It is not impossible that a person, by making enquiries, might have ascertained the furniture of the old Dutch Government house; but who is there living here that could give any information regarding it except Mr. Horkelot and his family, with the exception of some of the old native servants. I saw the mark behind the prisoner's ear, but it is very faint. I have never seen a similar mark in any person's eye. The report of the escape of Pertab Chund was merely a rumour, if it was not an idle one, before 1832, the year that Raja Tej Chunder died. One of the Government Agents reported to Government, that a person who had reported himself to be Raja Pertab Chund, was living at the place of his residence. The Government, through one of their Secretaries, intimated this communication to Rajah Tej Chunder, and Rajah Tej replied, that he had never seen the corpse of his son, but that Prawn Bahoo and Bussunt Bahoo had reported the death of his son to him. The truth of this statement can be ascertained by a reference to the Government archives of those days. I have been 52 years in India, and I have not seen or heard of the body of a Khectree being burnt in a chest. If it were done it must be done for the purpose of deceit. I would never mistake a cheat for a corpse.

Harriett Keating deposed.—I am a married lady, residing at Calcutta. I am a daughter of the late Mr. John Athanasa. My father was the proprietor of a great many houses in Calcutta. I recollect Rajah Pertab Chund of Burdwan. I frequently saw him in Calcutta. I saw him in 1816. He was then residing in my father's house, No. 19, Park Street. I was then residing in No. 1, Gooreahmah's Lane, my father's residence. I was then verging on my 16th year. I used to see him from an adjoining house of my father. We used to be in that house every evening, accompanied by my sister and my father. My sister's name is Sophia Crane. I have a distinct recollection of the features and appearance of Rajah Pertab Chund. I have seen the prisoner at his house, near the Foundary Batakhua, during last year, accompanied by Mr. A. DeSouza, of the firm of DeSouza and Co., and Dr. Charles Pearce. I used him to put questions to him with the view of identifying him with Rajah Pertab Chund. I did question him and all his replies were satisfactory with the exception of two unimportant ones. There were no persons present who could have suggested the answer to the prisoner nor did I mention the questions to any person but Mr. Crane, who joined me in questioning the prisoner. I saw him three months previous to this interview at my house. He came to be identified. I saw him through the venetians of an adjoining room, and in consequence, I returned his visit. From what I had seen of the prisoner and from the result of the replies to my questions, I believe him to be Rajah Pertab Chund. Pertab Chund wore his hair a little above his shoulder and much frizzed out. I recollect the Rajah's features. I do not recollect each individual feature so particularly as to speak of them separately. My father died on the 31st September 1835, his sister may be able to identify the Rajah. Mr. Antony DeSouza did know Pertab Chund, but Dr. Pearce did not.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell. I was never in the same house with Rajah Pertab Chund. I do not understand what a bird's eye view means. I some times saw him for a whole day together. He used to give parties, and the attention paid by him to his guests induced me to look at him. I was never his guest. The guests used to assemble in the hall of that house. That was not the only opportunity I had of seeing him. I have several times seen him sitting in his veranda smoking. The questions I put to the prisoner were regarding what my sister had observed to transpire in my presence. Neither my sister nor I mentioned these circumstances to any other person. My sister and I had agreed not to divulge these matters to any person. The questions and the answers were written by Mr. A. DeSouza, who is a witness in this case, and they are here in my books. They heard of his being in distress, and termed an impostor. I wished to see and identify him.

Re-examined by Mr. Leith. I used to see Pertab Chund and live out in his carriage. There were many particular circumstances in Raja Pertab's manner to attract my notice. Prisoner described me and other persons very correctly. My father died, leaving considerable property, and a great part of it will descend to me.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell. The estate is in the Registrar's hands. Mr. Dickens married my niece and is administrator to the estate.

Sophia Crane, sister to the last deponent, deposed in corroboration of the evidence of her sister almost verbatim. In consequence of this fact, Mr. Bignell declined to cross-examine her, with the exception of one or two unimportant and he took no notice of these witnesses' questions evidence.—HURKARI, December 29.

DECEMBER 28, 1836.

Ramdhon Christian deposed.—I recognize the Hurdhoo Rajah. I have never seen the other prisoners. I knew Shaum Lal and Kisto Lal his son. I saw him at Mr. Deer's for about one year. For the last six years I have not seen him. Kisto Lal was somewhat taller and much fairer than the Pseudo Pertab Chund is. His nose and features were different. When I knew Kisto Lal seven years ago, he appeared to be 32 years of age. I frequently saw him during the year. The prisoner does not appear to me to be Kisto Lal. I have been residing for the last nine years at Kishenagar. I was on intimate terms with Kisto Lal and his eyes were smaller than the prisoner's. I accompanied by three other natives of Kishenagar, was taken by the Magistrate of Hooghly to the jail to see whether the prisoner was Kisto Lal or not; we replied in the negative. One of us four was examined in the magistrate's court. Paul Christian was once excommunicated for one year by the Reverend Mr Wybrog, who discharged him from his situation as a catechist at Burdwan. I never saw a Bengally so fair as Kisto Lal was.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell.—The prisoner does not resemble Kisto Lal at all; there is a difference in their appearance.

Kissen Mohon Banerjee deposed.—I only recognize the Hurdhon Rajah: I never saw the other prisoners. I was in 1820, toll darogah for two years and six months, under the contractor, and was subsequently re-appointed in 1835, and held the situation 18 months. I was acquainted with Sham Lal and his three sons. They resided near my catechery. The elder sons were named Kisto Lal and Gour Lal, but the name of the youngest I have forgotten. Kisto, the eldest, was to attend in my court, in hopes of getting an appointment. Kisto Lal was somewhat taller and much fairer than the Pseudo Pertab Chund is. His face also was longer, and he had some marks resembling pork marks on his face. The prisoner does not resemble him. When I was darogah in 1835, I stopped a boat at Kishenagar. There was a devotee in the boat, resembling Kisto Lal, and Sham Lal said, my son has become a Bramin, charge, release him and his boat, and he paid me four annas, the tax for which the boat had been stopped. This was the last time I saw Kisto Lal.

Mr. Bignell declined cross-examining this witness.

Kissen Mohon Sutar, Vakeel of the Judge's Court at Zilla Kishenagar, and a resident of that place, deposed.—I recognize the Hurdhon Rajah and none of the other prisoners. I knew Sham Lal and his son Kisto Lal. Sham Lal is dead and I have not seen Kisto Lal, since seven years. I was not on intimate terms with Kisto Lal, but I used to meet him occasionally at the catechery and in the road. The Pseudo Pertab Chund is a stranger to me, and he does not resemble Kisto Lal. Kisto Lal was taller, leaner, and much fairer than the prisoner is. I have no recollection of Kisto Lal's features. I was summoned in the magistrate's court, in this case. I was taken with three other residents of Kishenagar, by the Nazir of Hooghly, to the jail, to see the prisoner. None of us were examined in the magistrate's court. Eight of us were sent back to Kishenagar, without being examined in the magistrate's court, viz. Ram Mohon Christian, Isurechander Bonnerjee, Harro chunder Bonnerjee, Chunder Kaunt Mitre, Bogman Chuprasse, Annondou Kybut Ram Mohon Dutt and myself. When I saw the prisoner in the jail, the Nazir asked me do you recognize the prisoner to be Kisto Lal? I replied that whether I do or not I will state when examined in court and not to you.

Mr. Bignell declined questioning this witness.

Gour Mohon Biswascharjee, Mooktear in the Mofussil Courts at Kishenagar, and a resident of that place, deposed.—I recognize the Hurdhon Rajah and none of the other prisoners. I knew Sham Lal Bramacharjee, he is dead. I knew his three sons. The eldest was Kisto Lal, the second Gour Lal, but I do not remember the name of the youngest. When I was a candidate for an appointment at Kishenagar, he was a fellow candidate with me and he lent me, a palkee to carry me to Ranna Ghant in 1829, when I was appointed darogah to that place. I recollect sufficiently Kisto Lal's figure and features to be able to recognize him if I were to see him. It is eight years since I last saw Kisto Lal. The prisoner does not resemble him. Kisto Lal was thinner, taller and much fairer than the prisoner is. The prisoner does not resemble him anywise.

Mr. Bignell put no questions to this witness.

William Fraser, resident of Serampore, deposed. I am a Carver, Gilder, Musician, and repairer of Musical instruments. I was for twelve years in the service of Rajah Partab Chund of Burdwan. I used to repair his toys and furniture. I recognize the prisoner to be Rajah Partab Chunder. On Thursday the 20th, I was taken to the jail to identify the prisoner, and I knew him to be the Rajah. When my sister was married I quitted the Rajah's service and left my brother Thomas Fraser as my substitute. He was in the Rajah's service till the period of his alleged death; and I heard from him, that under pretence of indisposition, Rajah Partab Chunder was taken to the river side at Culna, and brought in a palkee into a tent from whence he ran away and escaped. My brother is dead. This occurred about three years after. I had resigned my situation, and it is about 17 years since my brother Thomas told me of it. It is 27 years since I last saw Pertab Chunder, with the exception of my visit to him in the Hooghly jail. He is a little darker and thinner than he was formerly. I came in compliance with Mr. Shaw's letter, directing my attendance in this case (this letter, at Mr. Shaw's request, was filed). During the 12 years I was in Rajah Partab Chund's service, I saw him daily. I am quite certain the prisoner is Pertab Chund. Aga Abbas was in the Rajah's employ for nine years. I saw Abbas nine days ago, at Hooghly, after a lapse of 18 years, and I immediately recognized him. If the prisoner is not Rajah Partab Chund, I will willingly be hanged. It is the gentlemen who make this mischief and keep him out of his right.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell.—I received Mr. Shaw's letter nine days ago, and as I can neither read nor write, I took it to Hurry Paul Christian, who read it and said it requires your attendance as a witness in the Rajah's case, and I obeyed it. I do not know that any letter was published in the Samukher Durpan regarding my knowledge of the Rajah's case. I was paid by contract for the jobs I did for the Rajah. The sums varied from 4 to 6000 rupees. I can only write my name. I cannot read nor write in any language. I never see the Samukher Durpan. I do not know who wrote any letter in it.

Peter Emmer, resident of Entally and Section writer in the Judicial and Revenue Department, deposed. I was in 1818 employed by the young Rajah of Burdwan, whom I now see at the bar. I was his amanuensis. I was about 10 or 12 months in his service. From his present appearance and his resemblance to the portrait, I am convinced that he is Rajah Partab Chund. I was in 1818, 18 years old. The prisoner appears rather darker and more aged than Pertab Chund was. He used to dress his hair similar to what the prisoner's is dressed. I observed no peculiarity in his teeth. I generally waited on him from 10 o'clock a.m. till 2 o'clock p.m. I was turned off, and have been in Government employ ever since 1817.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell. I was formerly employed in the Revenue Board. I do not know whether I resigned that situation or was dismissed from it. I never mentioned to Mr. Trower that my recollection of the Raja was so imperfect that I could not speak positively as to his identity. I had no conversation with Mr. Trower regarding the Raja. Mr. Graham was present all the time during my interview with Mr. Trower. When employed under Mr. Baile, I got 50 rupees a month. Mr. Beatty, whose daughter I married, died rich. He did not leave his property to me, but settled it on my wife and her issue.

Haji Ulee Mahomed native of Schiraz, and resident of Chinsurah, deposed. I have been 25 years in this country, and was married here. I deal in shipping goods to Bishree. That is my old and intimate friend Raja Pertab Chund. I do not know any of the other prisoners. I do not speak Bengally well. I have bought some lands across the river, and the villagers neither understand me nor I them. One year after my marriage, Aga Abbas came to my house, and said that the Raja Pertab Chund wished to purchase some jewellery and kinkobs from me, I went to the Rajbary, which is close to my house, and he purchased two pieces of cloth from me. Learning that I understood Persian, he desired me to visit him. This was the beginning of my acquaintance with him, and for five years, whenever Raja Pertab Chund came to Chinsurah, he always sent for me, and I visited him and played chess with him. Afterwards I went to Benares. The prisoner is darker and thinner than he then was.

Questioned by Mr. Bignell. I am distinctly related by marriage to Aga Suffer Ulee; but as he is a bad character, I shun his acquaintance. I do not know whether Mr. D. C. Smyth, the former Judge of this Zillah, made any robbery regarding the evidence of the Moguls of Chinsurah in his Court. If he did, my name could not be in it, for I never gave evidence in any case before to-day.

Gulam Hossain, resident of Allipore, late Fouzlayry Nazim of the suburbs of Calcutta, deposed. I recognize Raja Pertab Chund Bahadur and Hapoz Tulleh Allah, but none of the other prisoners. I know Pertab when he resided in Moorcheekhalah. I visited him during a month and a half about 10 or 20 times. This was 25 years ago. I was then the Fouzlayry Nazim of the suburbs of Calcutta. It is my conviction that the prisoner is Raja Pertab Chund. He is darker and thinner than he then was, but his features are the same. I saw him after his return from his exile. I visited him in Rada Kissen Bysack's house, and at his house in the Fouzlayry Balakhana, about two months previous to my departure for Calcutta.

Aga Mohammed Isphany, merchant, resident of Chinsurah, deposed. — That is Maha Raja Pertab Chund. Is he one of the prisoners? I am grieved to find it so. He is Raja Pertab. Meer Aboul Hossain's house is about 200 yards distant from the Rajbary in Chinsurah, and my house adjoins Aboul Hossain's. I used almost daily to go and see Aboul Hossain in the evenings to play chess with him, and from there I used to see Raja Pertab Chund on the terrace of his house flying kites, and sometimes I saw him playing chess and smoking and going in his carriage to a take drive. This I saw for many years afterwards he went to Burdwan and from thence to Moorcheelabad. I afterwards heard of his sickness and death at Calcutta, and then I soon after heard the rumour of his death contradicted. I after this saw the prisoner when he was sent in custody here from Bancoolah. Directly I saw him, he recognized me and I him. Since then I have seen him both at his house in the Fouzlayry Balakhana at Calcutta and here at Hooghly. I never spoke to him, but I used to bow to him, and he used to return the bow. I saw him, however, secretly and often, whenever he used to come to Chinsurah, that I retain a perfect recollection of his features and figure, and I am quite certain that the prisoner is Raja Pertab Chund. I have no doubt on that point. The man is neither of the same religion as myself nor is he a friend or acquaintance of mine, nor have I received any money from him, nor has he held out any promise to me to give me any thing. I am totally unshaken in my evidence.

After this witness, whom Mr. Bignell and Mr. Shaw both asked in cross-question, the court adjourned at 5 P. M. till 10 A. M. to-morrow.

The Sheristadar informed the court at its rising, that the Magistrate of Beaneahal caught and forwarded two more maternal uncles of the Pando Rajah Pertab Chund, and they are here in attendance to give their evidence. They were ordered by the Judge to be kept back till another day. — Hark. Dec. 31.

ZILLAH TWENTY-FOUR-PERGUNAHS—DEWANNY.

ALLIPORE, TUESDAY AND THURSDAY, 4TH AND 5TH
DECEMBER, 1858.

(Before A. Grant, Esq., Additional Judge.)

PETITION FOR REVIEW OF JUDGMENT ON REHEARING.

Wm. Storm Appellant, George Jessop, Jeremiah Homfray and others Respondents.

This case originated in an encroachment made by the respondent, Mr. Jessop, on some ground which Mr. Storm had purchased from the Pontine society, by whom it was possessed by a foreclosure of a mortgage, which Mr. Homfray made with them previous to his insolvency. For the recovery of the encroached land Mr. Storm ultimately filed a plaint in the Court of the Sudder Ameen of the 24-Pergunnahs. The case was at first thrown out for the want of parties, and after its revival was dismissed, against which dismissal Mr. Storm appealed to the Judge some time in last year, when it was admitted, and on the 7th of September last Mr. Storm obtained a decree, on which he moved for an execution about a fortnight ago. On the 4th instant, a petition attested by a native mooktear empowered by Messrs. Edward, White and Parker, was taken up by the additional judge, when Mr. Dias raised an objection in the first instance to the mooktear coming into Court previous to proving that Messrs. White and Parker had the power to constitute an agent for Jessop, and unless the power of those gentlemen was proved, Mr. Dias submitted, that the subject of the petition could not be entered upon. Mr. Homfray intimated the judge, that he would produce the power, and would immediately apply to Messrs. White and Parker for it. The hearing was then put off to this day, when Messrs. Storm and Homfray appeared, the former with Mr. Dias, his mooktear, and the latter with Mr. Jessop's mooktear and two native pleaders.

The judge, previous to hearing the petition, asked Mr. Homfray if he had brought the power of attorney, which was immediately produced. The judge remarked it was a general power and was proceeding to file it, when Mr. Dias said he had read it, and submitted it was not a sufficient power in the present case, as all the premises contained in it did not empower Messrs. White and Parker to defend this suit, or any other; and as the case had pending in this Court for a period anterior to

Mr. Jessop's departure, that if he intended the power to operate in this case, he would have empowered his attorneys accordingly. The power was then read, but not filed, and Mr. Dias not pressing his objection, the hearing was proceeded upon.

The first ground of the petition set forth, that the notices for the trial of the appeal were not served upon Mr. Jessop's attorneys; the second, that under a circular order of 1814 of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, Europeans resident within four miles of the suburbs of Calcutta, were not amenable to Mofussil Courts; and the third, after entering into the merits of the investigation upon which the judge had recorded a decree in favor of the appellant, prayed for a rehearing under Clause II. Section IV. Regulation XXVI of 1814.

Mr. Dias replied as follows, to the first ground; that it appeared on the Sheriff's return, that his officer went to serve the notice upon the respondent, Mr. Jessop, but was informed by the appellant that Mr. Jessop had gone to Europe; and not knowing that he had left attorneys, the Sheriff served the notice upon another respondent, Homfray, who was and continues a tenant of Mr. Jessop's on the land in dispute, which Mr. Dias submitted was good service on the proprietor of the land. To the second ground Mr. Dias cited Section II Art. XI. of 1816, under which all British subjects were made amenable to the jurisdiction of the Mofussil Courts; and in reply to the third ground, Mr. Dias urged that the recapitulation of the grounds of the judgment were at present superfluous to the application; but as regarded the Regulation under which application was made, Mr. Dias contended, that it went much against the admission of the prayer, as after a careful perusal of Mr. Jessop's petition, he did not find that it contained any new point of evidence, or even adverted to any new documentary proof, and therefore under the clause cited, it was necessary some new ground should be shown for a rehearing.

Mr. Homfray replied, that he, as a tenant, was not bound to give notice to his landlord, and that as the court had in the first instance, he alluded to the institution of the suit, served notice at Mr. Jessop's house of business, if the same had been done in the present case, Mr. Jessop's attorneys would have come in with a defence. In reply to Mr. Dias's third objection, Mr. Homfray said, he could produce the original deed of sale, which had not been produced before in court, as the sudden absence would not have been able to understand; which Mr. Homfray said would be a sufficient new ground for the admission of the rehearing.

The Judge said, he felt inclined to make a reference to the Sudder, on the ground of non service on Mr. Jessop, the original respondent, and as Mr. Homfray said he could produce a deed which had not before been filed, the Judge thought it would not put Mr. Dias's client to greater inconvenience than it would Mr. Homfray, were the rehearing not admitted; as under the decree, Mr. Homfray would have to pull down a wall which had encroached on Mr. Storm's land.

Mr. Dias replied, that if the Court was of opinion, that the grounds for the rehearing were made out, he would say no more; but if on consideration of all the circumstances before adverted to by Mr. Dias, and the fact that this litigation had been going on for a period of about 10 years, the Court thought Mr. Storm would be put to no inconvenience, Mr. Dias would feel surprised, as in the first place a reference to the Sudder would throw the case back for at least a year, and Mr. Storm would have to come in with fresh fees for the rehearing. If Mr. Homfray would agree to pay up all costs, and the Court would allow the execution to be put in force, Mr. Dias would waive all objection to the rehearing; but with all, Mr. Dias submitted, that Mr. Homfray had not made out good grounds for his case, as the Court should consider that at the admission of Mr. Storm's appeal before Mr. Cracroft, Mr. Homfray attended, and strenuously opposed it; if he had no interest in the case, why did he himself appear; and his saying it was not his business to give notice to his landlord, was inadmissible, for he had just given proof of the interest he had in the case; and under the provisions of regulation VII. of 1799, it was an ordinary practice to recover Government dues by attachment of the property of the tenant, and it became compulsory on the tenant for his own safety, to give notice to his landlord. Mr. Dias concluded by observing, that the Court could not pass judgment on what was not before it on record, as Mr. Homfray's ipse dixit, that he had a deed to produce, was no ground; as if he had one, it would have been filed when he opposed the admission of Mr. Storm's appeal. Mr. Dias thought that under the provisions of clause II., section IV. regulation XXVI. of 1814, which are very unlimited, that the whole of the respondents could from time to time shew grounds for rehearings, which would, without doubt, subject his client to another ten years litigation at least. Mr. Dias, therefore, begged the Judge to consider the objections previous to admitting Mr. Jessop's petition.

The Judge said he had attentively and patiently heard all that was urged on both sides; and though he at first felt inclined to admit the petition, he was now of opinion that he could not pass judgment on any matter not included in the petition; besides which concerned, it was evident that Mr. Homfray was cognizant of the appeal and of its trial, and though Mr. Jessop was a principal respondent, Mr. Homfray was just as much concerned, as he was in occupation of the land, and was seriously interested in the dispute. Furthermore, that Mr. Homfray opposed the admission of the appeal, and if he did not do so for himself, he must have done it for Mr. Jessop. The Judge considered the service of notice on Mr. Homfray, a tenant in occupancy of the land in dispute, and a joint defendant, as good service on Mr. Jessop, and he could not help taking into consideration the inconvenience as to costs, which would be heavy upon Mr. Storm. He could not, therefore, admit the petition. Petition rejected. This order ends a litigation which has been carried on for the last ten years.—Hurkaru, December 10.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

THE sai-disant PERTAUB CHUNDER.—The case for the prosecution against the sai-disant Rajah Pertah Chund, has now closed, and the defence was entered upon on the 21st instant. The number of witnesses to be examined on behalf of the accused, even after striking out the names of several who were at first subpoenaed, but whose testimony is dispensed with, is stated at two hundred and seventy. Dr. Robert Scott, of the 37th M. N. I. one of the witnesses for the defence, speaks very confidently of the identity of the prisoner with the real Rajah Pertaub Chund; and has pointed out several scars on the body of the man, which correspond exactly with those he knew to be on the person of the Rajah.

Mr. Curtis, the Sessions Judge of Hooghly, has submitted to the Nizamut Adawlat his motives for refusing to accept bail from the sai-disant Rajah Pertaub Chunder and his accomplices. They are, that the excitement which the appearance of this prisoner in the Hooghly jail, had created amongst the inhabitants of Hooghly and Chinsurah, having considerably subsided, he does not consider that it would be beneficial to the public to have it renewed; and it is his opinion, that if the prisoner were permitted to be released on bail and to reside at Hooghly or its immediate vicinity, which he must needs do to enable him to attend the district Sessions Court daily pending his trial, this measure would, Mr. Curtis opines, be the means of re-exciting the suppressed feeling amongst the populace of Hooghly and its vicinity.

The evidence in behalf of the prisoner, has greatly shaken the almost universal opinion previously entertained, of the man's being an impostor. A. Mrs. Keating Mrs. Crane, and Mr. Overbeck, all individuals of respectability, have declared their firm belief that he is the real Pertaub Chund and no impostor, and Mr. Overbeck mentions, that there was a rumour, shortly after the period when Pertaub Chund is stated to have died, that he had made his escape from the tent he occupied at Culna, and that a trunk, filled with shells, had been burnt instead of him, to deceive the people. The mystery, however, must now soon be unravelled, and if the man proves to be a cheat, he certainly is a most daring and clever one.

MR. SHAW.—Mr. Shaw has been fined fifty rupees, by the Magistrate of Hooghly, for a contempt of Court.

THE INSTALLATION OF THE BISHOP OF COCHIN CHINA.—The above ceremony took place early on the morning of the 2d inst., at the Principal Catholic Church, in the presence of a small congregation, although it had been anticipated otherwise. The Bishop, attended by the Rev. Mr. Moore, made his appearance at half past seven o'clock, and walked up, through the nave, to the middle altar, where the usual ceremonies of installation were performed by the Rev. Fr. Antonio de Santa Maria, the choir singing "Gloria, &c." In the midst of the ceremony, an East Indian Catholic Priest, mounted the moveable pulpit, and read aloud the Pope's Bulls, on the authority of which the Bishop was appointed Vicar Apostolic for the time being, in the room of Dr. St. Leger.

REV. DOCTOR R. ST. LEGER.—On the 14th instant, the members of the Catholic Community met at the Principal Roman Catholic Church, and voted an address to their Vicar Apostolic, the Rev. Dr. R. St. Leger. On the 19th instant, on his retirement from office, shortly before the embarkation of the Reverend Gentleman, the address was presented to him, and he returned a very pathetic and characteristic reply. A silver chalice was also presented by the Catholics to the Vicar Apostolic on the occasion, and a silver crucifix to his brother, the Rev. John St. Leger.

SHIPWRECK.—The following extract from the gol of the Scotis, gives an account of a wreck.

"Tuesday, November 26th, 1838, at 7-30 p. m., light breezes and clear, heard a voice in the water to windward. Shortened sail, hove too lowered the quarter boats, and sent them to look round. Succeeded in rescuing a lascar named Setupar from a raft, who stated that he belonged to the sloop Augerua Manna, from Chittagong, in ballas, and going to Cape Roos for salt, and was upset in a gale six days ago; that he and three others got upon the raft; that his three companions had perished, and the rest of the crew and passengers 40 in number, were all supposed to be lost. Found a bag containing 57 rupees attached to the raft and 16 rupees 12 pice on his person. At 8, up boats, filled and made sail.—“Arracan River N. E. 130 miles.”

MR. MADDOCK.—Mr. Maddock has gone to join the Governor-General in the Upper Provinces, to take upon himself the duties hitherto performed by Mr. Macnaghten, and Mr. J. P. Grant will officiate for Mr. Maddock at the Presidency.

DOST MAHOMED.—Private letters from the Commander-in-Chief speak confidently of Dost Mahomed having proposed to the Governor-General to vacate his throne and to accept a jaghere; but having already expressed our doubts of the correctness of a report so much at variance with the known chivalrous character of the Chief of Cabul, we shall content ourselves with a bare allusion to the fact of the report being still in circulation.

PRISONERS TO BE TRIED AT THE SESSIONS.—The number of prisoners committed to be tried at the sessions, which commenced on the 8th instant, is very great. There were, on the evening of the 6th instant, 121 persons confined in the Great Goal for that purpose. For the last 45 years there has not been so large a number of persons committed for trial at the Supreme Court, on such very trifling charges as those now imprisoned. Petty theft is the crime for which most of them have been confined, and, in some cases, the value of the property stolen, is as small as six annas. To engage the Supreme Court, Judges and Juries, in the investigation of such frivolous trials as these, is an unnecessary and vexatious taxation of their time, against which, we expect, our fellow citizens will energetically appeal. The remedy is the revival of the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, with short juries and local judges.

ORPHAN MANAGEMENT PROCEEDINGS—PROTEST.—We, the undersigned managers of the Orphan Fund, representing the undesignated divisions and station of the Bengal Army, hereby protest against any proceedings of the General Management, in reference to the case of Mr. Grierson, which may be voted by the members present subsequent to our quitting the meeting that took place this day, the 10th of December, 1838, for the following reasons:—

First.—The meeting having been convened by the Deputy-Governor for the special purpose of taking into consideration drafts of letters to be sent to Major Turner and Mr. Grierson, the votes of the army restoring the latter gentleman to his office of Home Agent, was openly questioned, and after dividing on the proposed drafts in which there were five votes for and five against, it was avowed that no letter should be sent to Major Turner, and that the resolutions of the management of the 20th ultimo, should not be carried into effect. On this, we the undersigned, declared that we should quit the meeting unless the votes of the Army were carried into effect, and the resolutions of the last meeting enforced.

Secondly.—Perceiving that there was a determination to annul the votes and resolutions referred to, we protested individually against the acts of the members then present, and quitted the room.

Thirdly.—The meeting that assembled, was not attended by the Deputy-Governor, though convened by him, and his recorded opinion was read, that had he been present at the last meeting, he would have voted for carrying into effect the majority of the votes of the Army without delay.

Fourthly.—The Deputy Governor's vote together with Major Penny's (absent on duty) confirmatory of his last vote, restoring Mr. Grierson, was tendered by Capt. Butler in Major Penny's hand-writing, and rejected. Thus a minority of the managers virtually annulled the deliberate decision of the army officers and thereby precluded us from taking any part in their proceedings.

To conclude. We hereby disclaim all responsibility for the acts of the members present on this day, though resolved to retain our seats so long as our constituents confide in us.

(Signed) S. SNAW, Lieut. Colonel, Manager, Saugor Division.—G. N. C. CAMPELL, Major, Manager, presidency Division.—JOHN FULKE, Captain, Manager, presidency Station.

THE BLACK ACT MEETING.—MR. MACAULAY.—The Black Act Meeting, has drawn forth the defenders and impugnors of the Supreme and Molucca Courts, and the daily papers have been teeming with their communications. A Mr. George Taylor, indigo-planter of Turbunt in a letter on the Black Act, states, that Mr. Macaulay has been indulging on his imagination for the statement he made in his minute, that the indigo planters were indifferent whether the Black Act passed or not.

THE COOLY TRADE.—We are happy to state, that Government have determined to grant no more licences for the shipment of Coolies, and have given directions to the Superintendent of Police, to make the same public.

UNION BANK.—The following resolutions were passed, at a meeting of the proprietors of the Union Bank, held on the 15th instant.

1. Resolved. That it is expedient to adopt a plan, for facilitating the purchase and sale in London of Union Bank Shares, thereby enabling the Proprietors resident in England to convert, without delay, their shares into money, and attracting British capital to the Calcutta money market.

2. That the shares in the Union Bank be henceforth divided into two classes to be denominated Indian shares and English shares, and that Indian shares be transferable to new proprietors in Calcutta only, and English shares be transferable in London only; but that the Proprietors may at any time exchange an Indian for a corresponding English share, or an English for a corresponding Indian share.

3. That a mercantile or Banking house in London be appointed Agents for the purpose of effecting the transfer of Union Bank shares in England, who shall be entitled to charge a fee to be paid by the purchaser for each transfer, the amount of the fee to be fixed by the Directors.

4. That a counterpart of the deed of copartnership be deposited with London Agents, and that after the intending purchaser shall have been accepted by the London Agents, he shall sign the counterpart deed, and that no transfer of a share be complete, nor the old Proprietor released, until the deed be signed by the purchaser.

That at the time of executing the counterpart of the deed in London, the new Proprietors shall also sign in triplicate, a power of Attorney, directed to the eight junior Directors of the Union Bank, empowering them jointly, or severally, to execute for him in the counterpart of the copartnership deed in Calcutta, and that duplicates of these powers be forwarded every three months by the London Agents to the Secretary in Calculta, and that one of the Directors named in the power, do accordingly execute the counterpart deed.

6. That a new form of certificate be prepared to be entitled Indian and English certificate, and that no share held under an Indian certificate, be transferred to a new Proprietor in London, nor any share held under a London certificate be transferred to a new Proprietor in Calcutta; and that on all the Indian certificates the following notice be conspicuously printed in red ink "N. B. This share can only be transferred at the Union Bank in Calcutta," and on the English certificates the following notice be printed. "This share can only be transferred at Messrs. A. B. and Co's. street, London, the Agents of the Bank."

7. That Indian certificates shall be exchangeable for English certificates in Calcutta only and not in London, and that English certificates be exchangeable for Indian certificates in London only and not in Calcutta.

8. That when a Proprietor shall be desirous of converting his Indian, into an English share, he shall deliver his certificate, to the Secretary of the Bank by whom it shall be cancelled, and an English certificate shall be prepared corresponding in number, date and every other respect with the cancelled certificate, excepting, that it need not be signed by the same Directors, and that a similar course be observed by the Agents in London, on converting an English into an Indian share.

9. That the dividends in Indian shares be payable in Calcutta only and that the dividends on English shares be payable at the London Agents only, and that the Remittances be made in Bank post Bills at three days' sight, at four per cent. per annum from date to time of payment, which bills may be negotiated in Europe.

10. That the London Agents be authorized to sign the Certificates which may be granted on the transfer of shares in England or on converting English into Indian shares,

11. That the London Agents transmit every two months a list of the transfer of shares, which may have been made during that period.

12. That printed copies of the copartnership deed be sent to the London Agents, and that every half year a complete list of the names of the Proprietors and of the number of the shares held by each, be transferred to the London Agents, and likewise copies of all resolutions passed at general meetings of the Proprietors, and that the above be always open to the inspection of any Proprietors in England.

13. That the Secretary's Report, and the Accounts published every half year in the Calcutta papers, be likewise published in the Times and Morning Chronicle, and that a book containing copies of all the Reports, since the commencement of the Bank, be likewise forwarded to the London Agents, for the inspection of Proprietors in England, and that all future Reports be entered in the same book.

14. That Mr. Thomas Holroyd be requested and empowered to make arrangements with the London and Westminster Bank, to act as our agent; or in case of that not being practicable, then with Messrs. Coutts, or some other established Bank.—Carried unanimously.

THE CALCUTTA SCHOOLS.—The pupils attached to the several schools in Calcutta, have been undergoing their annual examination. We have been informed, that those attached to the Peshwa Academy and the High School, have distinguished themselves more than the rest.

ERECTING OF MONUMENT.—At a recent meeting, presided by the Lord Bishop, held to decide the locality to be assigned to the statue of Bishop Heber, the question of greatly enlarging the Cathedral came under consideration. His Lordship expressed his confidence in being able to procure, by private donations and subscriptions, the very considerable sum of 50,000 rupees, and with the co-operation of the community at large, and the Government, it is intended to lengthen the present aisle of the Cathedral and to construct at the Eastern extremity, a cross aisle which will be occupied by statues, monuments, tabular inscriptions, &c. There is no doubt but that this undertaking, for the beautifying of the Cathedral, will be grateful to the feelings of the Community, and will receive extended support.

SUICIDE.—Thomas Fielding Browne, late second officer of the Seringapatam, committed suicide, while in a state of inebriation, on the night of the 9th instant.

MASONIC PROCESSION, &c.—Thursday being St. John's Day, was celebrated by the brethren of the mystic tie in Calcutta, with unusual spirit. In the morning there was a procession to the Church in the Fort; in the evening a Meeting of Lodge Industry and Perseverance was held at the Town Hall. The W. M. and brethren of that Lodge, with their usual hospitality, had invited many brethren to join them, and the number assembled was greater than has met together in Lodge, we believe, for many years. After the Lodge was closed, the whole of the brethren assembled sat down to an elegant banquet, which was worthy of the hospitality of Lodge Industry and Perseverance, and creditable to Mr. Spence, who supplied and arranged the material. The viands and wines were all admirable. Among the honoured guests of the evening were the R. W. brother Blaquiere (Deputy P. G. M. of Bengal) and the worshipful brother Ryan (Sir Edward) who is a distinguished Member of a Cape Lodge. There were present also, among the visiting brethren, the Masters, Past Masters, and wardens of all the Lodges in Calcutta. The number assembled on this "happy occasion," was about fifty, and the evening passed off with great conviviality; but not without a due regard to the important objects of the Masonic Institution, which were duly stated in some very good speeches made in the course of the evening, and specially in one which commemorated that distinguished member of the fraternity, the Late M. W. G. M. of India, the Marquess of Hastings. The evening was hailed by many of the brethren as the revival of Masonry in Calcutta, whereof late, owing to various untoward causes, it has been rather in abeyance; and we understand, that it is chiefly, if not entirely, owing to the moral influence and to the great exertions of the worthy W. M. Birch, of Lodge Industry and Perseverance, that the enthusiasm now displayed among the brethren to restore the palmy days of Masonry, is to be ascribed.

THE RACER ABSENTEE.—The fine horse Absentee, dropped down dead while exercising on the Race course on the morning of the 17th instant. His death has spoiled much of the sport expected at the ensuing races.

A SUITEE.—It is stated, that the rumour of a suitor having lately been performed within the Hoogli district, has been communicated to Mr. Samuelli, who has deputed an Ameer to proceed to the spot where this horrid rite is stated to have occurred, and after holding a minute enquiry into the particulars of it, forward him the result of his investigations.

JAMES YOUNG, Esq.—James Young, Esq., has been re-appointed to be Sheriff of Calcutta for the ensuing year.

CURIOUS APPROPRIATION.—A few days ago, the bell belonging to the little Episcopal place of worship at Myzapore, which was only a short time ago cast by Major Hutchinson at the Cossipore foundery, and put up near the gate of entrance, was found missing, it having been carried away during the preceding (bright moonlight) night, by some persons with the intention of melting it down and making a penny by it. Due enquiry was made for the bell, when the robbery was discovered, but for some hours without any success. Certain of the native Christians were then desired to rouse up the neighbourhood with the cry of "all hands for a search, and the reward of fifty rupees to the discoverer of the culprits who took the bell away." An old woman, soon after this, made her appearance stating that, in a ditch of dirty water within a neighbouring cluster of huts, she had seen a number of lads baling the water out, and subsequently finding a rope at the bottom, they had all put their hands to it and were tugging at something heavy affixed to the end of it, which they could not succeed in hauling up. The old lady thought that could be nothing else but "the bell," and accordingly had immediately posted off to give the happy information. The "proper authorities" accompanied her to the spot. Their approach was in some measure opposed by the dolaal of the place, but they made their way good and discovered the object of their search lying prostrate in the mud. Now the bell, which was of sufficient weight for ten men to take up, was removed from its place of suspension, has never been satisfactorily made out—that the durwan was an aider and abettor in the deed, there cannot be the least doubt.

THE MOORSHEEDABAD NABOH.—Ruh-en ood Dowlah, the brother of the late Nazim of Moorsheedabad, and who came down to the presidency to prosecute his claims to the guddee in person, has been unsuccessful in his attempt,—the late Nizam's son, Syud Munsoor Ali Khan, having been acknowledged by the Government as the rightful heir, under the style and title of Muntizun ul Mulk Mashed ood Dowlah, Furree doon Jah Syud Munsoor Ali Khan Bhadour Nugrut Jung.

A SUSPECTED SPY.—In addition to the spys and suspicious characters recently discovered at Patna and Benares, about the beginning of last month, an individual, apparently a Nepalese, having about twenty followers, was brought before the Magistrate of Mirzapore, charged with being to the Reges unknown. It appears, that this man had been observed going about to the different petty chiefs in Bundelcund, giving private interviews, the object of which was to induce them to join the Nepalese, in case of the latter attempting a descent on our plains. Be it as it may, the Magistrate was unsuccessful in getting any information out of this "charge demisious secreties," who pleaded that he had come thither as a pilgrim. However, when his papers were searched, nothing of importance was found, with the exception of an exceedingly correct drawing of the Allahabad fort. The man was released and the circumstance reported to Government by Mr. Money.

PARENTAL ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.—The Annual Examination of the pupils attached to the Parental Academic Institution, took place last Friday, before a respectable assembly of ladies and gentlemen, consisting of upwards of 300 individuals. The Revd. Messrs. Fisher, Preece, Campbell, Bozzy the Revd. Dr. Olliffe, Dr. F. Corbin, and several others, took a great interest in examining the pupils, and at the close of the examination expressed themselves satisfied with the progress and the acquirements of the boys.

It was stated on the occasion, by one of the Committee of management, that in consequence of new situations opening in the Mofussil for the employment of East Indians, it was in the contemplation of the Committee to introduce among the regular class students, Bengalee and Hindoostanee, as well as the principles of the Laws of England and the Revenue and Judicial Regulations of the Local Government. Prizes consisting of medals and books were then awarded with suitable remarks by Mr. W. Byrn, the Secretary of the institution, and Mr. Montague, the held Master.

THE FERROZPORE MEETING.—The following extract from a letter dated Loodiana, the 23d ultimo, gives an amusing account of the straits to which the sight-seeking folks in the Upper Provinces are reduced from the "high pressure" on the road:—"The whole of this station is of course on the wing towards Ferozepore—and scarcely a thing to be had in the Bazaar. Here we are, five strangers, setting our wits to work and producing the fig-ends of our dak supplies to furnish breakfast, dinner, &c. Bearers are any thing but plentiful as blackberries, and with difficulty one set is screwed out, to enable us to proceed in single blessedness one at a time. I start, I believe, to-morrow evening, and shall arrive at Ferozepore before the Camps. It is said, that the meeting is not to take place before the 28th or 29th, and that Runjeet treats the thing very coolly, is making no haste down, and is likely to keep Lord Auckland waiting. We have a very pleasant man here, who has just returned from a tour in Cashmeer, Peshawer, &c. He is intelligent and well informed. He says, we are all wrong in our present policy, and that the Sikhs, as a nation, hate us, and the Afghans like us."

Private letters from Ferozepore announce the arrival of the Governor-General on the 27th ultimo, on which day Runjeet-Singh also made his appearance, and joined his troops encamped on the opposite bank of the river. A complementary deputation was sent to the Maharajah, who received it most graciously, and desired his son, Kurruck Singh, to return the visit and convey his "salam" to Lord Auckland. Runjeet Singh waited upon the Governor-General on the 29th of November, and Lord Auckland intended to return the visit on the following day. The following is an account of the meeting, by a correspondent of the Bengal Hurkaru:—

"The first interview took place this morning. The hour was fixed for 8, but the Maharajah did not present himself before 9, when Lord Auckland, with a full staff, accompanied by Sir H. Fane with all his, went down to the end of the line of troops, about a quarter of a mile in length, to meet his Highness, who was attended by his sons, ministers, officers, &c., and troops about 2000. After due salutation, His Lordship assisted the Maharajah into his own howdah, where the usual embrace and shaking of hands was gone through; then the whole assemblage, in somewhat confused order, and amidst clouds of smoke and dust, moved towards his Lordship's Darbar tent, and at first the push into the tent was tremendous, and the little "looo," though between Lord Auckland and Sir H. Fane, had some chance of being trodden under foot. By the exertions of Messrs. Macnaghten and Fortescue, some order was restored, and after His Highness had rested for some minutes in the first tent, where "the ladies," rather unusual additions, I heard and, to the scene, were seated, was with some difficulty made for the great people to pass into the inner tent, from which the "oi polloi" was excluded; so that I can only tell you of this part from hearsay. After conversation, the presents were produced. Her Majesty's picture, painted, I understand, by Miss Eden, and in a magnificent frame of solid gold, studded with jewels, was first brought in by Sir W. Cotton, supported by Messrs. Torrens and Captain Osborne, and presented to His Highness, who said every thing that was proper on the occasion, examined it thoroughly, and said, he would suspend it in his own tent, under all honors of salute, &c. Trays of jewels, shawls, cloths, &c. were then presented, and after these were removed, others were presented to Kooruck Sing Sheer Sing, Duham Sing, Atur Sing and others of the chief sirdars. His Highness was then conducted to the room where the two howitzers were, as it is said, slung over some shrappells which were ranged alongside, to the imminent danger of his remaining eye. This room was crowded, and there was considerable confusion the whole time. Guns and pistols were here given, and afterwards an elephant magnificently caparisoned, and four really splendid Hissar colts in gaudy trappings, &c. His Highness of course expressed great satisfaction, &c., and was "blot kush" the whole time. Lord Auckland did the honors a merueille, and was most handsomely dressed, as also were the political Staff, Messrs. Macnaghten, Colvin and Torrens. After a few minutes' conversation with Miss F. Eden, His Highness took leave, and was led to his elephant by Lord Auckland and the Commander-in-Chief, and the whole tamasha soon after ended. I heard that "the Buffs," as they stood in line, were particularly noticed by the Maharaj, and it is said they are by far the most efficient and best ordered regiment here, Lord Auckland will return Runjeet Singh's visit to-morrow morning.

Rumour says, General Tackwell is to come up here to take the command of the whole cavalry. Some Regiments of Local Horse and some Bombay troops are added to the force of the Indus; but it is not supposed there will be much work for it. We hear that the Commander-in-Chief has decided on going down the Indus, but it is not certain how he will go, whether in a private or public capacity. Captain Mitchell is said to be going as Ad-de-camp to Brigadier Arnold, also that Colonel Which will have the Command of Artillery vice General Faithful."

30th NOVEMBER.—Lord A. returned the Maharajah's visit this morning, and the spectacle was grand in the extreme. His Lordship had H. M. 16th Lancers, and 2nd Native Cavalry, in addition to his body guards as an escort, and arrived at the bridge of boats about eight. His escort turned a street until it joined Runjeet Singh's troops, who were advanced about half a mile from the Maharajah's camp. His Highness came down about half way and the same ceremony of meeting and embracing occurred as yesterday, upon which there was a grand salute of some 100 guns mounted on camels. The line of elephants advanced to His Highness's encampment, which was an enclosure of red khannats of about 800 feet square, in the centre the state tent, with seminah, &c. and the household troops all dressed in silk drawn up, so as to form a double cross throughout the square through which the Maharajah conducted His Lordship. A. there was abundance of space and the number permitted by his Lordship to go over very limited indeed some officers were turned back from the bridge, and the Sikh chiefs showing no disposition to crowd into the durbar, and the proceedings taking place under the Seminah, the whole was seen without any difficulty, and the greatest order prevailed throughout. The Maharajah was dressed as yesterday, most plainly, a suit of red tushmi nah without the slightest ornament; but his chiefs and sirdars in their gaudiest and most jewelled apparel, and with the handsome tent of red cloth, gilded cornices, seminah of Cashmere shawls, carpeted with the richest Turkey carpets, the coup d'ail was magnificent. After the usual "bat chest," the Heads of Departments were introduced to his Highness and the Sikh chiefs to His Lordship; then came naughting and singing, which were not of the best; then the return of presents took place, among which a gilded "charpoy," enamelled and jewelled at the four corners, a shawl tent, elephant with silver howdah, six horses better than usual, &c. The Commander-in-Chief, Messrs. Macnaghten, Osborn and Torrens, the General of Division, and some others received each their pearl necklace, and other jewels; and after exchange of compliments, &c., Lord A. took his leave. The whole thing was very complete, and I should think in no wise inferior to the meeting at Roopur; but it is not easy to convey in writing any idea of the magnificence of the scene. The arrangements throughout, were admirable and there was not the slightest confusion. I may tell you that the usual portrait of Runjeet Singh, that in Mr. H. T. Prinsep's book for instance, was not at all like His Highness, who, to speak plainly, is the ugliest little, old, decrepid, shrivelled-faced man I ever saw; and from wearing his head-shawl down to his eyebrows, you cannot judge whether his forehead would give any sign of his undoubted ability. He has a fancy of wearing only one sock, the reason why I cannot say. Some of the Sikh chiefs are certainly very handsome men, and their infantry really showed well in line. I can't say much for the cavalry exhibited this morning.

DECEMBER 2.—"Yesterday evening we had a nautch, illuminations, and fireworks at Runjeet's tent—rather so so; but the spectacle was worth seeing from the splendid dresses of the Sikh Chiefs, (Runjeet himself excepted, who wisely eschews the gingerbread) and the beautiful effect the lights had on the magnificent seminah and carpetings of the tents. He displayed his jewels, not of course forgetting the famous "Koh-i-noor," to obtain which he practised such enormities on our proteges, Shah Soojah. We praised also his ruby with 13 King's names inscribed on it—an emerald of enormous size, and another large diamond, which he stole, or which Shah Soojah pawned to him, some time ago. Lord Auckland gives a return party on Monday evening, and on Thursday, he marches for Lahore.

The Commander-in-Chief, it is settled, goes on in command to Shikarpoor; but the army, in consequence of the supplies not being ready, cannot move yet. The cavalry will start on Monday week, and the sappers and miners to day. The roads are execrable, provisions, water and fuel are not expected to be very abundant, and although the Commissariat are making great exertions to "pucker 'em" all on both sides the river within the reach of their ropes, the returns are not oppressive. In the mean time the Dugald Dalgetties are stowing away "like bricks."

DECEMBER 3.—The grand review came off this morning, and was certainly a most splendid affair. Altogether about 10,500 men reviewed, 15 regiments of infantry, 8,500; 6 of cavalry, Skinner's horse, artillery, &c. &c. 2,000. It was rather hard work, for we were under arms from 5 A. M. to noon. The Maharaj, with Lord Auckland, came on the ground about 8, and after marching down the whole line, attended by an innumerable train of horsemen and elephants, of Europeans and sheiks, mixed in the most admired disorder, and kicking up the devil's own dust in our faces, the manoeuvres commenced. We then marched past the Lord in reviewed order, and I heard from some of the spectators on the elephants, that the effect was very grand; that the Buffs, the European regiment, the 16th and 5th N. I., were considered to march best; that the Buffs really seemed as one man, and attracted the Maharaj's special notice; yet by "the lottery," this fine regiment is cut out of the "active service" to be,—not that much cutting work is expected. The best authorities, it is said, proclaim there will be nothing but a harassing and arduous march, little fun and no glory.

DECEMBER 5.—This morning there was a review of the Maharajah's troops, which went off remarkably well. It was far better than any of us expected: the cavalry no great shakes, but the infantry manoeuvred in excellent style, the movements of their light companies something quite new. The ground was well kept, and the morning being clearer than on our field day, we were enabled to see every thing, except when the cavalry charging past raised clouds of dust. The infantry marched past the flag, quite as well as many of our native corps, and a very fine body of men there are. It was calculated there were about 9,500 men out, 1,600 cavalry, and 8,000 infantry. The Maharaj presented at our review 11,000 rupees to be distributed, whether Lord Auckland returned the compliment this morning I can't say. His Lordship yesterday evening gave a return "evening party," to the Maharaj, illuminations and fireworks, and a very good "tunasha" it was. The Misses Eden made return presents, among them one exceedingly handsome, a Prince of Wales feather, about six inches high, composed solely of diamonds. His Highness's presents, they say, have not half equalled ours in value. This morning concluded all the gay doing, and to-morrow Lord Auckland will commence his march, via Umrutis, where he is to remain four or five days, to Lahore, where he is to stay about a week. Our troops commence their march on Monday; the Cavalry Brigade first.

Among the anecdotes current, of the Ferozepore Meeting, is one which, however strange, we implicitly believe, and according to which Shah Shoojah refused to allow the Governor-General a chair in his presence.

We have also learned that Runjeet Singh took a characteristic advantage of his Lordship's contempt of, or indifference to him, and that every slight, short of open insult, was liberally heaped upon us. His Lordship and the whole of the troops were kept waiting by the late arrival of Runjeet for four hours; from eight o'clock A. M., the hour fixed for the interview, until past noon. The rest of the Sikh Chief's conduct was in perfect keeping with this proceeding.

When Lord Auckland's cavalcade went forth to return the visit of the Maharaj, Runjeet Singh, the elephant which bore Mr. Colvin, the Governor-General's Private Secretary, taking flight at some object, with whose opportunity the savage brute was evidently unacquainted, shied, and plunged against the elephant which carried the proud burthen of the Commander-in-Chief. Sir Henry Fane, with a promptitude which we must say does as much honor to his energy as to his judgment, drew forth "his long sword," and inflicted divers wounds upon the head and trunk of the off-ending animal.

MR. DEXTER.—"The road between Ferozepore and Ludhiana is nearly impossible; not only thieves, but murderers, unless the highways even at mid-day. Bodies are constantly found by the way side."

We hear the 1st Division has been forced to halt for want of grain, Shah Shoojah and his force having consumed the little that was collected. The Chief was perfectly enraged at the failure of the arrangements regarding supplies. So decidedly imbecile have been the pains taken on this head, that the last two days it is whispered that it will be necessary to delay the advance till next year. The Bhawalpoor Rajah has fled and the plenty which was to be enjoined, appears to have flown with him. Murmurs, however low, are heard; and the general opinion is, that they will end in some unpleasant outbreak. Desertions have commenced and fears entertained of an insurrection on the part of the Bramho sepoys towards the Hindus. Much of all this—if not all this—is attributable to the silly manner in which our Government go to work.

Not a word has been published to the Army as to where they are going—how long their services will detain them from India, and no pains taken to shew them their comforts shall be attempted; in short, except Mr. Macnaghten, there is not a capable man near the Governor-General. His Lordship's visit to Lahore will lower the character of our Government more than you can possibly imagine.

Gentlemen of the first rank were grossly insulted by the Sikhs in our own Camp, and this will be much more the case after crossing the Sutlege. Then again, the idea of ladies accompanying the Camp, is but a finish to the degradation of our Governor-General visiting Lahore. Every thing is attributed to petticoat influence.

To-day we hear that the 5th Brigade are to march to Ludhiana, but nothing appears certain.

The order imposing the duty of shooting to death on the sepoy, was a most atrocious attack on the prejudices of the natives—they should be hung.

A letter from Camp mentions that Skinner's Brigade remains behind.

MOFUSSIL.

AGRA.—Recent letters from the Camp of the Indian Army, state, that intelligence has been received by Government from Cabool, to the effect, that Dost Mohammed and his brothers had finally come to the resolution of co-operating with Government in effecting the restoration of Shah Shoojah, on condition of pecuniary or pensions being guaranteed to them. This is one of the most probable of the reports lately circulated, as the arrangement is one the Affghan chiefs are most likely to come into.

MOORSHEDABAD.—The substitution of the vernacular language will take effect from the first January next, for the transaction of business in all the departments of the judicial courts at Moorshedabad, and the total supersession of the Persian language, which was hitherto allowed to be used in them.

AMRITS.—The following is an extract of a letter from Amritsar, dated November 15th:—"There has been abundance of rain at Mhow, Neemach, and all the surrounding countries, but we have had but a poor portion of it here. The Breecha will, I fancy, be dried up by the end of the present month; and the Anna Singur will not, I imagine, last out until the next rains, so that the gardens, cultivations, &c. are obliged to be supplied from wells. There are some slight cases of fever but not of a serious nature, among the native inhabitants and European residents now here. Colonel Alves started a few days ago for Jeypore, where serious disturbances have lately broken out. One regiment of Infantry and one troop of Cavalry have been despatched to the same place. These refractory people will not be content, I imagine, till the whole country be taken from them. This is a very cold morning, regular English weather, easterly winds with abundance of clouds occasionally. Grain of all kinds is tolerably cheap—sixteen and seventeen seers of wheat can be obtained for a rupee; and other articles in proportion; so that we cannot as yet complain, considering the state of some other parts of the country around. Of ghee not more than two seers can be had."

NATIVE STATES.

JEYPORE.—The following is an extract of a letter from Jeypore, dated 30th November, 1838.

Matters here have been all settled satisfactorily. The mutineers (from 4 to 5,000 in number, with 18 pieces of cannon) after standing their ground till arrangements had been made for attacking them in position, laid down their arms, gave up their guns and other materiel, and have been disbanded, selections from them having been received into a new levy to be incorporated with Foster's Brigade: this latter point of the arrangement being with a view to obviate the possible injury to public tranquility, which might have resulted from throwing so many desperate men loose on the face of society at the same moment. The force, under the command of Lieut. Colonel Bell, was expected to return to Nusseerabad on the 5th instant.

JHANSI.—The following is a short statement of the movements of the Jhansi Force. The camp was near Oorcha on the 4th instant, a place, distant south from Jhanssee eight miles.

On the morning of the 29th ultimo, the Infantry Regiment and Artillery Company of Scindia's reformed contingent, joined the department under command of Lieutenant Colonel Hewitt at "Oorcha;" the 33rd N. I. are expected on the morning of the 6th instant; the 6th Cavalry marched from Sangor on the 2d instant, the Train with Lieut. Bu kle, commissary of Ordnance, and the 72d Native Infantry, were to leave Sangor on the 4th inst., the 63d Native Infantry on the 7th, and the 60th Native Infantry with Brigadier General Sir Thomas Anbury and Staff, on the 10th November.

Two Companies of the Infantry Regiment Scindia's reformed Contingent with a detachment of Artillery and two guns, proceeded yesterday towards Mhote, a small Ghurree about 32 miles from Oorcha.

The affair at Jhansi has since been settled, but our troops still remained before the place. The cause of the outbreak, it appears, was different to what we represented it to be.

When in 1818, our Government succeeded to the rights of the Peshwa over this small territory, the succession in the usual order, was guaranteed to the family in possession, and the parties now at issue on this point, are the relief of the grandson of the Rajah whom we found in possession, and the third brother of the latter. The widow, who has no issue by her husband, asserts the rights of an adopted child, but by our agreement with the old Rajah, and the usage of succession, the next male heir of the family is the legitimate successor, who is the surviving only brother of the old Rajah; and when he has been put possession of his rights, the army will, it is supposed, be withdrawn. His entire rights will not, however, it is said, be restored.

PESHAWUR.—Hurkarahs from towards Peshawur state, that the Puthan plunderers having descended from the Hills of Shikarpore, and taken their quarters in the valley of Peshawur, say, that they will drink the blood of Runjeet's army and that of the English forces, before they reach Cabul.

CABUL.—No laws from this place, as Dost Mahomed Khan has issued strict orders to his subjects not to write any intelligence to Lahore. A short time ago a great merchant, Synd Azeem, had taken some fine horses with him for sale on his way from thence to Lahore, when Dost Mahomed sent his express sowars after him, who apprehended the merchant on the Durreh Khybur and took him back to Cabul.

CANDAHAR.—Intelligence has been received from Shikarpore, stating, that the communication between the former place and Candahar, was cut off. All couriers and travellers found in that route, were put to death. The chiefs, it is further said, are fortifying their strongholds, and Dost Mahomed is represented as determined to fight.

MADRAS.

DEPARTURE OF REGIMENTS TO MAURITIUS.—A despatch has been received by Government's express from Calcutta, containing important matter relative to Mauritius. It is believed that three regiments are in consequence to be sent across at the earliest possible moment, and that this somewhat sudden order for the departure of H. M. S. Victor, arose from the same cause.

MR. FULLERTON.—Mr. Fullerton has been appointed Sheriff of Madras, for the year 1839.

SCARCITY OF RAIN—FAMINE.—In the northern districts of the Madras Presidency, the annual supply of rain has this season been so scanty, that the reports of the revenue authorities are of the most gloomy nature. In the Vizagapatam and Masulipatam districts, nothing can prevent a famine. In Kattywar, and the Northern districts of the Bombay Government, a famine has already commenced, and the streets of the Presidency seem to be swarming with natives, whose appearances sufficiently denote their sufferings.

In Madras and to the southward, the case is very different; indeed in almost all the districts south of the Presidency, the reason is spoken of as one of the least ever known.

VIOLENCE OF THE SURF.—On the 6th instant, the surf was tremendous. The rapidly and fury with which the long lines of waves dashed after each other, their monstrous size, and the violent pitching and rolling of the shipping in the roads, indicated that there must have been a severe gale in the north-eastern part of the Bay of Bengal. The surf commenced at a great distance from the shore. Some idea of its violence may be formed, from the fact of its having washed on shore the remains of the Thalia, which had remained firmly imbedded in the first position for more than twelve months.

BOMBAY.

ADEN.—Captain Haines, at the date of the last intelligence from Aden, had not succeeded in obtaining possession of it. This, we understand, is to be attributed partly to the unwillingness of the Arabs to part with their patrimony without the semblance of force being employed to justify their surrender, and partly to the intrigues of Mohomed Ali, whose influence, both political and commercial, would be greatly diminished in the Red Sea by the establishment of the British power at such a place as Aden.

In addition to the particulars relative to the force about to be dispatched to Aden, published above, it is now stated, that the command of the military part of the expedition will devolve on Major Bailey of the 24th Regiment in consequence of Colonel Bagnold, the officer to whom it was originally offered, having declined on the plea of ill health. Three officers and a detachment of Sappers and Miners have also been added to the force, which swelled out by the artificers and camp-followers of all descriptions, will present a formidable show to the pugnacious residents of our Government. H. M. Ships Valage and Cruiser, will also be despatched to augment the naval force now before Aden, carrying with them a portion of the troops to be employed there.

It was determined, in Council on the 7th instant, to send the remainder of the European Regiment, about 430 serviceable men, the 24th Native Infantry about 350 fitto, 30 European Artillery men, and a troop of Colun-taz, 60, to take possession of Aden; but they will not leave until the Regiments from Yaroda relieve one in Poona, which will then be marched down here; this will not be until the end of the month. The force thus sent, with the Artillery men, Marines, and a detachment of the Coote's seamen, will not make up more than seven hundred and fifty men. Col. Bognold is to command the expedition.

DEATH OF THE RAJAH OF KOLAPOOR.—The death of His Highness the Rajah of Kolapoor, occurred on his pilgrimage to Tooljapoor, a place about 35 miles distant from Punderpoor. After leaving the latter place he had fever for several days, and expired on the morning of the 29th of November, in a village about five miles distant from Punderpoor. He was about 37 years of age, and much liked by his subjects. He was buried in sandal wood, and his funeral was very numerously attended.

IRON STEAMER.—An iron steamer was launched on the 7th instant, and named the Indus.

LIBEL.—That trial of Mr. McCallum, the Editor of the Bombay Gazette, for a libel on Sir Charles Malcolm, which commenced on the 15th instant, before Mr. Justice Awdry, and a Special Jury, has terminated by a verdict of guilty. Judgement deferred. It is understood, that a motion is to be made in arrest of judgement.

THE SCIND FORCE.—It is said, there is an intention of adding to the force accompanying Sir John Keane to Scinde, and that this increase will consist of 4,000 men. The 10th, 16th, and two other regiments, have been named to us about to form part of his force.

The following is an account of the state of the Scind force, Camp Vickur :—“ We landed a most defenceless Army, and it is well we had not an active enemy to oppose us. We had Dragoons without swords or saddles ; we had Infantry without a round of ammunition, besides what they had in their pouches, and artillery without horse ; neither is the position of the Camp such as a Napoleon or a Wellington would have selected ; we have a river in our rear, without boat or craft of any kind to receive our troops in case of repulse. One would think that the river should have been chosen as a protection to one of our flanks. Several Baloochees have appeared in our Camp within the last few days ; they seem to constitute the principal part, if not the only, troops in the place. They are a fine race of men. With a determined, soldier like aspect. The arms of those who are mounted are the sword and spear, and many the sword only. They are mounted on small but active horses. No carriage is to be had for love or money, and it is said to be the intention to move onward as soon as cattle can be procured for the transport of the men's baggage, leaving the officers the enviable privilege of getting on how best they may. It is rumoured, that one of the most influential of the Scind chiefs expressed a wish to have an interview with H. E. Sir John Keane, which was refused.

APPOINTMENT OF SHERIFF.—Mr. J. L. Johnson has obtained the appointment of Sheriff for the ensuing year. This gentleman was also Sheriff for the year 1837.

DEMAND.—It is stated, that the troops at Demau compelled the Governor to leave the place, and have appointed a Governor of their own.

THE LIBEL CASE.—On the 9th of December, 1838, Sir John Awdry sat in the Supreme Court to pass sentence upon the Editor of the Bombay Gazette, found guilty, of a libel on Sir Charles Malcolm, late Superintendent of the Indian Navy. The sentence of the Court was, that he should be imprisoned in the Common Gaol of Bombay for the space of three months, to be fined 1,000 rupees, and to be further imprisoned till such fine be paid ; and also to enter into recognizances, himself for 20,000 rupees, and two sureties, each for 10,000 rupees, that he keep the peace towards the Queen and all her subjects for two years.

BURMAH.

Letters have been received from Rangoon to the 10th of December. One dated the 30th of November says :

About ten days ago three of a party of seventy conspirators, who were taken a few leagues below Prome, were crucified at Rangoon, having their mouths cut from ear to ear, and a stick thrust down their throats. One lived about six hours, the other two about twelve hours. Their bodies remained on the cross three days. A cousin to Tharrawaddie is said to be the leader of this party on the mountains N. W. of Amersapoor. The above men died like noble martyrs to their cause. From the bold and confident manner with which they spoke of the ultimate success of their cause, added to the seeming disinclination to execute the remainder, affords grounds for supposing that this proof of Tharrawaddie's unpopularity, is an unexpected discovery. Tharrawaddie having successfully played off one party against Col. Burney, and induced them to build a brick building at his capital, by which he was encouraged to insult our Government, another party has risen to claim for Tharrawaddie the right to exercise the functions of the paramount power. But our military and naval attitude at last evince, that we are not to be bullied out of those rights and privileges, which our arms have acquired.

The numerous traders, the slaves or dupes of Tharrawaddie, raise and promulgate all kinds of absurd reports to lull our Government into a false security. We had a report a few days ago that a splendid road way was made from the residency to the Palace ; then a respectable Armenian wrote to Rangoon from the Capital, that an interview was to take place on the 6th instant, and now we hear that the Woonghtes have paid our Resident a visit.

DECEMBER 8.—The dak boat arrived this morning from Amersapoor, with accounts that our Resident had met the Woonghtes at the Lootaw or Vale of Justice. The Rangoon Government had this news yesterday, for to day five of the rebels are crucified opposite Rangoon. Tharrawaddie's civility may be placed to the account of this spreading rebellion.

On the arrival here of the steamer, the Local Government took fright at the warlike appearance of our Government, and dispatched a fast boat to the capital, imploring “ His Majesty to give our Resident an interview.

DECEMBER 10.—Not until our military demonstrations are pushed to the point of attack, will Tharrawaddie break down. Our Mauthmain column should take post at the northern extreme of our Provinces—it is his weak point. The Shans are ripe for revolt. It is very remarkable that just in proportion as our Government exhibit a firmness of character to sustain the influence due to the paramount power, in the same proportion the friends and dupes of Tharrawaddie seem disposed to admit that our countrymen or our Government will not be insulted with impunity.

Burmese Military barracks are erected near the Pagoda, and the houses in front of Rangoon, west of the wharf, are removed.

A private letter from Rangoon, of the 19th December, states, that by the last reports from Ava, the Resident had re-embarked in his boats ; but that the dak boats of the above day, brought news, that in consequence of the fair promises and assurances of the Court, Colonel Benson had been induced to re-land. Our correspondent informs us, that a few days previous to the date of his letter, there had been a great demand for muskets for the capital, but that it is anticipated the news of the Persian retreat from Herat will induce Tharrawaddie to adopt a course of dissimulation. It is clear, however, that the Englishman's correspondent M., with his “ eight elephants,” is either a would-be boaster, or one of the “ Six innocent.”

Samson, of 33d regiment native infantry, is the 15th instant, under the 16th, as announced in general orders No. 250, of the 18th instant. The order books to be altered accordingly.

Fort William, December, 29th 1837—No. 257 of 1837—In continuation of General Order No. 75, of the 19th April last, the following para. of a Military Letter, No. 1, from the Honorable the Court of Directors to the Governor General of India in Council under date the 5th July 1837, and the further warrant, dated the 26th May 1837, granting additional advantages to Soldiers in Her Majesty's Service for good conduct, therein referred to, are published in General Orders.

Para. 1. In continuation of our Letter in this Department dated the 10th October 1836, No. 12, we transmit a further Warrant received from Her Majesty's Secretary at War dated the 26th May 1837, granting additional advantages for Soldiers for good conduct, you will adopt similar measures for bringing this Warrant into operation to those pursued by you in carrying into effect the previous War act which accompanied our Letter of October 1836 above quoted.

[Here follows the Good conduct Warrant dated 26th May 1837, which was inserted in the India Gazette of the 13th ultimo.]

Fort William, Dec. 29th—No. 253 of 1837—The Honorable the President in Council has much pleasure in publishing to the Army the following extract paragraphs 2 to 5 of the letter from the Honorable the Court of Directors, in a General Order of India, No. 3, dated 14th September 1837, announcing the grant of additional advantages to the Senior Officers of the Army in respect of Retiring Pensions.

Para. 2. In our letter of the 23d December 1835, we announced to you that as we considered it hopeless to expect that any Military Retiring Fund could be successfully formed, we had thought it right so far as we could feel justified in doing so to provide for the object contemplated in schemes of that nature by an enlargement of the Retiring Regulations; and that we had in consequence resolved to grant the full pay of Captain in every officer who should have served in India 21 years, (11 years furlough included) whether he had attained that rank (legally) or not, and the full pay of each of the superior ranks of Major, Lieutenant, and of a Colonel, after the completion of an additional period of 5 years service for each of those ranks in such cases, viz.

For Major's pay, 20 years service, including 3 years for a furlough.

For Lieutenant Colonel's pay 33 and a half.

For Colonel's pay, 38 and a half.
 Being now of opinion that some additional advantage in respect of the periods of retirement may properly be granted to the Senior Officers, who would have been more generally the immediate objects of benefit from a Retiring Fund had such a fund been established, we have resolved that the period of service to qualify in Office for the pay of each advanced rank after that of Captain, shall be reduced from five to four years, the periods of service in India required for each rank being consequently hereafter as follows, viz.

For Major, who shall have served 21 years (3 years furlough included) shall be allowed to retire on the pay of a Captain whether he shall have attained that rank or not.

For Lieutenant Colonel, who shall have served 34 years (3 years furlough included) shall be allowed to retire on the pay of a Major whether he shall have attained that rank or not.

For Colonel, who shall have served 41 years (3 years furlough included) shall be allowed to retire on the pay of a Lieutenant Colonel whether he shall have attained that rank or not.

Every Officer who shall have served 33 years (3 years furlough included) shall be allowed to retire on the full pay of a Colonel whether he shall have attained that rank or not.

These arrangements to have effect without prejudice to any claims arising out of the Retiring Regulation, as established in the year 1796.

We desire that it may be distinctly understood that the present is a measure of concession, and will accordingly decline to forward to any application which may have in view a further extension of the Regulations now established with regard to the retirement of our Military Servants.

Fort William, December 29th.—No. 259 of 1837.—The Honorable the President in Council is pleased to direct that the following para. of a Military Letter from the Honorable the Court of Directors to the Bengal Government, No. 71, dated 30th August 1837, and its enclosures, be published in general orders.

Para. 1. We forward for your information the copy of a resolution adopted by us on the 31st November 1836, for granting honorary certificates of diligence and good conduct to those gentlemen cadets at a military seminary, who although they may have been unsuccessful in obtaining engineer appointments, may yet be considered as meriting some testimony of appreciation for the exertions in study and regularity of behaviour whilst at the institution.

2. We have now to inform you that at the public examination which was held at the military seminary on the 12th June last, Messrs. Henry Lewis and Robert Christie were found to have rendered themselves worthy of the distinction of receiving the honorary certificate which was presented to them in our name accordingly.

3. In conformity with the last part of our resolution of the 30th November 1836, we forward for your observation, and also for publication in general orders a copy of the report of Major General Sir A. Dickson on the merits of Messrs. Lewis and Christie, who were selected for the artillery and stationed to your presidency, but Mr. Christie has since been allowed to resign that branch of the service for a civil appointment.

At a Court of Directors held on Wednesday the 30th November 1836.

Resolved, That this Court entirely concurring in the propriety and expediency of the suggestions which have been offered to the Court by General Sir Alexander Dickson and Colonel Munro, with a view to the encouragement of young men of talent at the military seminary, to persevere in the diligent study of the various branches of science pursued at that institution.

That, from the want of vacancies in the scientific corps, there is not at the present period sufficient object for emulation, it is desirable as an inducement to encourage application on the part of the gentlemen cadets, to grant honorary certificates of diligence and good conduct to those who, although they may have been unsuccessful in obtaining engineer appointments, may be considered to merit some testimony of appreciation for their exertion in study and regularity of behaviour whilst at the institution.

That honorary certificates be accordingly granted to such cadets appointed to the artillery and infantry as may have attained to the required standard of qualification by the fulfilment of the following conditions which shall be deemed requisite to render a cadet eligible thereto, viz.

1. In Mathematics—to have passed through the course to the end of Fluxions.
2. Fortification—to have completed the course.
3. Military drawing—the answers to be well and correctly finished and to be regarded as a fair proficiency in military drawing.
4. Civil drawing—to have observed unremitting diligence and industry.

GENERAL REGISTER.

In Hindoostanee—to be able to read and translate at the public examination „ French }—to have observed every diligence and industry in „ Latin } these branches
 „ Character—to have borne in the reports generally a character of diligence and good conduct.

That the gentlemen candidates obtaining these certificates (which are to be engraved in a suitable manner) be allowed the privilege of asserting the presidency to which they shall be posted, and that their names with a suitable statement of their merits be communicated by the court for the observation of the local Governments, and also for publication in general orders to the army.

Report of Major General Sir Alexander Dickson, K. C. B., 15th June, 1837.

It has afforded me much pleasure on this occasion to witness the promotion of honorary certificates to the following gentlemen cadets, which from their diligence and good conduct they fully merited, and I trust that the distinction thus conferred will have the best effect by exciting increased emulation in study; viz:

Names of cadets who received honorary certificates.

1. Mr Henry Lewis.
2. Mr Robert Christie.

No. 26th of 1837.—The Honourable the President in Council is pleased to direct, that the following extract (para. 2 to 6) of a military letter from the Honourable the Court of Directors, No. 59, dated 9th August 1827, be published in general orders:

Para. 2. It is our wish and desire that regimental use should in every case be brought into full operation at the earliest practicable period after the arrival of the cadet at the presidency in which he is appointed.

3. With this view the lists of rank of cadets are forwarded by the first opportunity after the cadets finally arranged, and upon an average no list has been more than two or three months in India before you are apprized of the order in which he stands for an examination in a regiment at vacancy. If there be then a vacancy and he is at first of the appointed cadets he should be immediately appointed to fill it, so that his participation in the courses of regimental use may be once commenced.

4. The supply of vacancies being duly proportioned to the wants of the service it will seldom happen in the above rule to be carefully acted upon, that any one regiment has more than one vacancy at a time and consequently that under ordinary circumstances no necessity will arise for the transfer of cadets or ensigns from one regiment to another.

5. Should cases arise hereafter in which there are two or more vacancies in any one regiment while other regiments of the same army are complete, we concur in opinion with the Command in Chief that the senior cadet or ensign would earn one step by removal should it be desired to be granted that advantage.

6. No cadet or ensign is removable for purposes of promotion except at his own request, and as there are difficulties in the way of ascertaining the wishes of individuals in this respect at the time when making a vacancy, we direct that it be established as a regulation that every cadet or ensign who may wish to be removed for any cause by removal to which he would gain one or more steps shall notify his wish to that effect to the Adjutant General of the army, within one month from the date of his being first posted—should he afterwards desire to alter this determination he may notify the same in the Adj. Genl. The Command in Chief will direct all that to be in possession of the necessary information to enable him to equalize the number of cadets or ensigns in each corps with due attention to the interests of all concerned.

ERRATUM.

After the concluding paragraph of the report of the Metcalfe Dinner, in page 94 of the Journal, read the following :

Sir Edward Ryan was sorry that the President had placed him in a doubtful position, for he was not sure whether his learned friend had returned thanks or left him and the other stewards that duty to perform. He would, however, choose the alternative of performing the duty. He then returned thanks to Sir Charles and those who had joined in the toast, and expressed his regret that it was the last time on which he would meet the worthy guest on such an occasion in this country.

Sir W. Cotton also returned thanks from the further end of the table.

Mr. Shakespeare proposed the health of Sir J. P. Grant, and complimented him on the able and eloquent manner in which he had conducted the business of the evening.

Sir J. P. Grant returned thanks, and, adverting to the great pleasure he had derived that evening, proposed—according to the old custom—a good night.

Sir Charles was attended to the door by the stewards and the remainder of the company, where he took leave, and was followed to his conveyance with loud cheers and waving of hats and handkerchiefs from the company, every one striving to shew his regard for their distinguished and popular guest.

4. The native officers and privates will be entitled to the benefit of the pension establishment, after a service of not less than 29 years, if pronounced by a committee of medical officers unfit for further military duty. Volunteers who have not served 15 years in the line, will count their first service in respect to pension, as locals.

6. Commanding officers of corps, from which volunteering is permitted, will be careful to transfer only such men as may be fit for the advanced rank which they are about to attain, giving preference to old and deserving officers and soldiers.

7. Descriptive rolls of native officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates, to be prepared in duplicate; one copy to be forwarded to the Resident at Lucknow, and the other copy to the Adjutant General of the army.

His Excellency the Commander in Chief feels the highest pleasure in making the following commendation to the Bengal army, which he trusts will be as gratifying to them to read, as it is to His Excellency to publish.

On the 1st of January 1838, the number of European commissioned officers belonging to the Bengal army, was two thousand four hundred and thirty-nine.

The number of native commissioned officers was one thousand seven hundred and nine.

During the past year, 1837, of this large body of officers, but few European, and four native officers have been charged with such conduct as has rendered courts martial necessary.

Of the cases of European officers, one was most honorably acquitted of all moral crime, the crime of another arose from accident, and two of the remaining three, were cases of breach of discipline, chiefly arising from errors of judgment.

There was but one conviction, comprising any serious turpitude, amongst either class of officers.

His Excellency deems such an absence of crime, or misconduct, to be most highly honorable to the officers of the Bengal army, European and Native; and he offers them the tribute of his warmest approbation in consequence.

He feels that the circumstances detailed, will fully justify his holding as a boon to himself, the full pardon of Lieutenant M. Kutoe, of the 6th native infantry, recently dismissed by sentence of a general court-martial; and he will immediately make an application through the Supreme Government to the Honourable the Court of Directors to that effect.

The Hama station order of the 27th November last, directing Assistant Surgeon M. Richardson, M. D. of the 1st regiment of local horse, to afford medical aid to the Hama light infantry hospital, and to the other troops and establishments at the station, is confirmed.

Ensign James J. van Maunwarig is, at his own request, removed from the right wing of the European regiment to the 12d regiment of native infantry at Bareilly.

ROSS D. MANGLES,
Offg. Secy. to the Govt of India.

GENERAL DEPARTMENT, THE 28TH FEBRUARY, 1838.—The Hon'ble the president in council is pleased to attach to the Bengal presidency, Mr. R. B. Thornhill, writer, reported qualified for the public service.

THE 28TH FEBRUARY, 1838.—The following gentlemen of the civil service, employed in the north western provinces, embarked on board the ship Duke of Buccleugh, which vessel was left by the pilot at sea on the 24th instant:

Mr. William Fang for the Cape of Good Hope.

Mr. Richard Woodward for England.

Mr. R. B. Thornhill, writer is reported qualified for the public service by proficiency in two of the native languages.

PORT WILLIAM, GENERAL DEPARTMENT, THE 12TH MARCH, 1838.—The Honorable Sir Charles Theophilus Metcalfe, Bt. G. C. B., having tendered to the Right Hon the Governor General of India his resignation of the office of Lieutenant Governor of the north western provinces, from the date when the ship St. George on which this Honor embarked was left by the pilot at sea, viz. the 17th ultimo, the Right Hon. the Governor General has suggested and the Hon. the President in Council concurs in the opinion that the time is arrived for paying a parting tribute of applause to the public services of that distinguished officer.

It would be superfluous to enter into an enumeration of the several situations filled by one so long and so well known to the India community. It is sufficient to state that at a very early period of his service, he was selected on account of his merits alone for the discharge of the most important and difficult duties; that the mode in which he acquitted himself of such trusts, amply justified the implicit confidence reposed in him by Government, and that by a long and uninterrupted career of zealous, able and honorable exertions he attained the highest office in the state, and was honored by a conspicuous token of the favor of his sovereign.

By order of the Hon. the President of the Council of India in council.

PORT WILLIAM, GENERAL DEPARTMENT, THE 14TH MARCH, 1838.—Mr. Thomas Parry Woodcock, of the civil service, employed at Koel under the Lieutenant Governor north western provinces, proceeding on furlough to England via Bombay and Suez, embarked from Bombay on board the Honourable Company's steamer Atalanta on the 1st instant.

PORT WILLIAM, GENERAL DEPARTMENT, THE 17TH MARCH, 1838.—Notice is hereby given, that the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India has fixed the 25th of April and the 17th of May, as the dates for the despatch of packet steamers from Bombay for Suez in those months respectively. The Governor General has further instructed the Government of Bombay to despatch the Semiramis steamer, which is shortly expected to arrive there from England on the voyage to be made on the 25th of April next, and to order this vessel on return to make the voyage from Suez by Point de Galle to Madras and Calcutta, in order that she may be employed in an experimental voyage from that side of India during the season when the voyage from Bombay is impracticable. The Governor General in directing this arrangement has left the direct voyage of the Semiramis to Calcutta, dependent in same degree upon the Bombay Government being able to make provision for the transfer of packets and passengers for Bombay to another vessel either at Socotra or at some other point near the mouth of the Red Sea. The President in Council in order to forward the arrangement and remove this ground of uncertainty, has further suggested to the Government of Bombay to send a Government Cruiser, or some other proper sailing vessel, to meet the Semiramis steamer at the point stated, in order to receive the Bombay packets and passengers and allow the Semiramis to proceed on the direct voyage to Calcutta.

PORT WILLIAM, GENERAL DEPARTMENT, THE 19TH MARCH, 1838.—The Hon. the Court of Directors having appointed Andrew Amos, Esq., to be fourth ordinary member of the council of India, and the Honorable Andrew Amos, Esq. having arrived at this presidency in the ship Roberts, the said Andrew Amos, Esq., has accordingly this day taken the oath and his seat as fourth ordinary member of the council of India under the usual salute from the ramparts of Fort William.

GENERAL REGISTER.

Henry Shakespeare, Esq., the said William Wilberforce Bird, Esq., has this day taken the oath and his seat as third ordinary member of the council of India, under a salute from the rampars of Fort William.

The regulation of commissariat officers is directed to general orders of the 1st February 1831, regulating the mode of granting leave, now authorized, as regards non-commissioned officers.

Much unnecessary correspondence being occasioned by general officers, in their inspection reports, making reference to articles "wanted" without communicating what orders they have issued for correcting the deficiency, His Excellency the Commander in Chief requests they will be so good as to refer to paragraph 5th of a memorandum, dated Adjutant General's office, 28 September 1818, and, in future, to enter their reports in strict accordance thereto, in the particular alluded to.

The Hon. the President in Council is pleased to annul and to declare to be abrogated from and after the 30th April next, all existing regulations militating against any part of the code now established.

reprimanded in such manner as His Excellency the Commander in Chief may be pleased to direct.

Approved. (Signed) H. FANE, General,
Commander in Chief, East Indies.

14th February 1838.

REMARKS BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.

The sentence of the court martial being, that the prisoner Colonel Edmund Roche should be severely reprimanded, he is to consider himself reprimanded by me accordingly.

At the same time however, that I issue this reprimand, I must remark, that the interference of Mr. Swell, the 3d mate of the ship Thames Grenelle, with Colonel Roche, and the gross and vulgar language used by him, both with reference to the Irish generally, and to the Court personally (which language formed the probable ground for the subsequent proceedings), go far in extenuation of the Colonel's misconduct.

He is to be released from arrest, and return to his duty.

Finding.—The court having most maturely weighed the evidence brought forward in support of the prosecution on the charges, as well as what the prisoner Lieutenant and Brevet Captain Richard Buchanan Hill, of Her Majesty's 41st regiment of foot, has urged in his defence, and the evidence in support thereof, is of opinion.

“That the prisoner is guilty of the first instance of the first charge, which, however the court does not consider in this instance, as conduct unbecoming the character of a gentleman.”

“That the prisoner is guilty of the second instance of the first charge.”

“That the prisoner is guilty of the second charge.

By order of the Commander in Chief,

R. TOURENS, Major Genl.,
Adj. Genl. to Her Majesty's Forces in India

Head-Quarters, Simla, 19th February 1838.—No. 170.—His Excellency The Commander in Chief has been pleased to direct the publication of the following circular letter for the information of Her Majesty's troops in India:

(CIRCULAR.) Horse Guards, 22d August, 1837.

Sir,—It having appeared on the trial of Sergeant Hugh Brennan, of the 1st Battalion of the Royals, before a court martial at Limerick, in April last, that as hospital servant, he practised a course of systematic fraud, and the facts elicited upon that and other occasions, having afforded the strongest ground for belief that the case of this culprit is not singular, but, on the contrary, one of no unfrequent occurrence in the regimental hospitals, I have Lord Hill's commands to direct your special attention to a subject, in which the character of the non-commissioned officers of the army, and the interests of the public, are so deeply concerned.

His Lordship desires that you consider it a most important part of your duty to examine, frequently and strictly, the Charges in the hospital accounts of the regiment (or depot, as may be) under your command;—that you particularly look, not only to the quantity of extra articles but to the prices charged for ordinary and extra articles purchased for the hospital;—that you correctly inform yourself as to the local prices at provisions of very description, groceries, &c. which may be required from time to time, for the use of the sick;—and, that, upon the appearance of excessive charge, you take prompt measures to arrive at the truth, either by the preliminary investigation of a regimental board, consisting of three officers, where the case admits of doubt, or by bringing the accused to trial, when the facts present themselves to your mind in a conclusive shape.

Lord Hill assures himself, that no effort will be wanting on your part, to give due effect to these instructions as well as that you will derive the most zealous support from the medical officers of the regiment committed to your charge.

His Lordship strenuously recommends, that, in your ordinary visits to the hospital (as required by Her Majesty's regulations) you invariably examine the various items of hospital expenditure.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient, humble Servant,

(Signed) JOHN MACDONALD,

Adjutant General.

Head quarters, Simla, 4th April, 1838.—An unfortunate occurrence at Deyrah, which took place in January last, in which the conduct of the medical officers at Mussoorie and Deyrah were implicated, has led to a voluminous correspondence being laid before the Commander in Chief.

In that correspondence is an official letter from Lieutenant Colonel Young, conveying the sentiment following, as from the medical officer at Deyrah:

"He has no objection to attend A, or any other patient of B's (the medical officer at Mussoorie) under the customary rules of etiquette; but it is usual on such occasions for the medical adviser in attendance on the patient to call in-further aid himself, should the case demand it; as no request, coming from friends, can be attended to, without the probability of giving offence."

GENERAL REGISTER.

The doctrine, based on medical etiquette, that the friends of an invalid calling on a medical officer for the aid of his skill, cannot be attended to by an officer of the Hon. Company's service, unless called on through the medical officer (with whose practice, or success, those friends are perhaps dissatisfied) appeared to the Commander in Chief to be opposed to reason and sense.

He therefore caused reference to be made to the medical board, for their sentiments on the case.

The following paragraph, in the reply of the medical board, accords exactly with His Excellency's opinions; and he publishes it, for the future guidance of medical officers, and for the especial attention of those who were parties in the transaction under consideration. "It the word etiquette imply only complimentary ceremony or forms of intercourse, it has on this occasion been very improperly used by medical officers, with reference to the serious duties of their profession, which demand that the welfare of a patient should ever be paramount to all ordinary feelings and considerations."

His Excellency directs, that the latter part of this quoted paragraph may be carefully attended to; and that "rules of etiquette" may not again be advanced in extenuation of any medical neglect.

Head quarters, Simla, 5th April 1839.—The Allahabad garrison and cantonment order of the 25th ultimo, directing Captain A. "9. The introduction of the blue frock coat for native officers, and of caftans for the sepoy, we are of opinion, would entail on unnecessary expense upon the troops, and we desire, that the use of these articles be forbidden accordingly."

A description of the shoulder-strap now sanctioned, is subjoined for general guidance.

GENERAL REGISTER.

"Reply to military letter, dated 14th February, 1837.
(No. 20.)

Submit for courts favorable consideration, five memorials from officers of the Bengal army, praying that for the reasons stated, the court will recall their orders of 6th June 1798, requiring from an officer, about to retire on pension, a declaration on oath, that he had not received, and would not receive any pecuniary or other gratification or compensation for so retiring. Government consider, that the practice which has for some time obtained, although now for the first time brought to notice, of inducing time-expired officers, under the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, to retire from the service, must conduce to the contentment of the officers, and to the efficiency of the army.

Para. 1. The memorials now submitted to us arise out of the memorial of Lieut. Colonel Powell, of the Bombay army, the important subject of which we informed the Government of Bombay, we would notice in our correspondence with the Government of India.

2 We now desire, that you will cause Lieutenant Colonel Powell to be informed, through the Government of Bombay, in reply to that part of his memorial which indicates a wish for line promotion in certain cases below the rank of major, that we cannot contemplate the possibility of sanctioning any measure which would infringe upon the integrity of civil service; and, in reply to the remainder of his memorial, that we see no necessity for interfering with the arrangements which the junior officers, of a regiment may make in individual cases, for adding to the comforts of a senior officer, on his retirement from the service upon the pension to which he may be entitled.

3. The Regulation of 1798, requiring officers upon retirement to make oath, that they have received no pecuniary consideration for quitting the service, has not been enforced by us in any single case of retirement in England, during the period nearly forty years which has since elapsed. It was established chiefly upon financial grounds, to prevent (as observed by Lord Cornwallis, when recommending other rules for the same object) "an unreasonable load of pensions." This presumed necessity for the rule has however not yet been felt; on the contrary, additional facilities have been required and have been given, for enabling officers to retire upon full pay; "we shall therefore continue to suspend the operation of the rule, and officers retiring from time to time will not be called upon to make the declaration, unless the financial necessity to which we have referred (and of which due notice shall be given) shall at a future period be fully realized."

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From the Bengal Hurkaru Price Current, May 29.)

INDIGO.—There have been two public sales this week, the first at on the 22d instant of about 300 chests of inferior Outh, held at the Loll Bazar Mart; the sale was very thinly attended, and scarcely a lot was sold, in consequence of the proprietors fixing high prices. The second sale was held yesterday at the New Mart, the quantity put up consisted of about 132 chests, of country produce, and although the attendance was thin, more than 300 lots met with purchasers, but at rather low prices, the remainder was subsequently sold by private contract at fixed rates.

Accounts during the week from the Factories in Thiboot, Malda, and, with very few exceptions, in Moorshedabad and Kishinaghar, are still of a very unfavorable nature, whereas those from Jessore and Dacca are better.

Advices from Hobe by the Overland mail to the 21d March represent the market inactive. A few small parcels were disposed of at 2d. to 4d per lb. below the January sale prices.

RAW SILK.—Continues in fair enquiry for the English market, and the prices of some of the assortments have slightly advanced.

Accounts from European state, East India knots were firmly held, and China quoted rather higher with a fair demand.
COTTON.—A few parcels have changed hands during the week for shipment to China per the Mary Ann Webb at steady prices.

Orders at present from China are limited, but several parties anticipate instructions regarding purchases by the next arrival.

Aspects in the interior are the same as stated before.
SUGAR.—Operations in Cane are to a considerable extent reported for the English market, but we have no particular change in prices to notice.

Accounts from Hobe by the Overland Mail are of a less favorable nature than we had expected. Cane was about 3 to 7½ per cent lower than in December, good qualities weighing full 13 oz. were quoted from 18s. to 19s. 6d. Choppies and Bantanas were not very brisk, and were quoted 16s. 6d. to 17s. 6d.

SUGAR.—Purchases since our last have been to a limited extent, and prices may be quoted without alteration.

Accounts from London represent the article to have pressed on the market, and was consequently dull of sale, and at a decline in prices.

SUGAR.—Continues in fair enquiry, but without any change in prices.

Advices from London report the General produce in limited demand, good middling to very good white at 59s. 6d. to 61s. per cwt. In Siam or Manila there was nothing doing, and the market became heavy, without buyers, particularly of the soft and inferior kinds, except at reduced prices, but holders, were not disposed to accede to any decline.

SHELL LAC.—Very little doing for the English market, and prices have a tendency to a decline.

Accounts from London and Liverpool are very unfavorable, and stocks are reported heavy.

LAC DYE.—A few parcels have been taken up for the English market at steady prices. Accounts from Europe state the article more favorable.

RAFFLOWER.—Some purchases of the new crop have been reported for the English market, but we observe no particular change in prices.

GRAIN.—Nothing doing for Europe, a few purchases of Moonghyr Rice, for the Mauritius are the only transactions reported since our last at former prices.

OPPIUM.—Very little continues to be done in this Drug, excepting a few chests for shipments per the Atitran for China, and our quotations may be reported nominal.

The quantity in the Company's godown up to last evening amounted to Circular, No. 822.

War Office, 13th December, 1837.

Sir,—There being reason to believe that the wills of soldiers dying in hospital are sometimes obtained in favour of their comrades by undue means, I am directed to request G. 86,513, that you will give the necessary instructions, that, in addition to any other witnesses, the surgeon or assistant surgeon shall in every instance, when practicable, be present at the execution of the wills of soldiers in hospital, and that he affix a declaration to such wills, stating whether the parties were in a fit state of mind at the time to execute the same.

I am further instructed to request that whenever a will not containing such a declaration, shall in future be transmitted to this office, you will annex thereto an explanation of the circumstances, and will withhold all payments at the regiment arising thereon until the decision of the secretary at war be notified.

The soldiers serving in the regiment under your command must be apprized of the adoption of these regulations, and their substance must be stated in written, or printed notices, to be struck up in conspicuous places in the different hospitals.

I have, &c.

"Para 26. In our military letter to Bombay, of the 10th April 1838, (No. 13) Para. 5. We stated, that we would convey to you our reply to the memorial of Major Moore, the deputy military auditor general at that presidency, relating to his claim of an extra house rent or regimental tentage, and we take the present opportunity of fulfilling that intention.

"21. We learn from that memorial and its accompanying proceedings that at three different systems obtain in respect to the house rent of houses in different parts of the staff officers stationed at the capitals of each of the three presidencies, those stationed at Madras draw regimental tentage and regimental house rent, whilst those at Calcutta and Bombay draw no tentage but those at Calcutta receive a superior rate of house rent, and those at Bombay draw house rent according to regimental rank.

"22. The Bengal system was established on the principle of giving to staff officers at the presidency houses rent exceeding by 50 per cent. the rates previously drawn. This principle we received our sanction, and we now direct that it be extended to the staff officers stationed at the capitals of the three presidencies.

"23. In our letter to Bombay of the 2d May 1827, we directed that officers holding stationary staff appointments should not be allowed to draw tentage; that being an allowance intended solely to cover the expense of providing tents and tent-carriage to which such officers were not liable. This order has not yet been extended to Madras but we now desire that it may be made applicable to that presidency also."

Sir,—I have the honour to convey to you a copy of the 5th Clause of the Act 1st Victoria, Cap. 90, from which it will be perceived it is enacted, "That from and after the commencement of the act it shall not be lawful for any court to direct that any offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for any longer periods than one month at a time, or than three months in the space of one year."

Although the proceedings of Courts Martial do not appear to have been intended to be included within any of the provisions of the act in question yet as the sense of the legislature has been expressed, in the 5th Clause, as to the extent to which solitary confinement may solely be carried, and the manner in which it should be restricted, I am now to signify to you His Majesty's desire, that Courts Martial in future, in any sentence in which solitary confinement is included, shall conform to the limitations in that respect laid down by the clause above mentioned.

I have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN MACDONALD,

Adj. Genl. to Her Majesty's Forces in India.

Head quarters Simla, June 3, 1838.—No. 132.—At a general court martial held in Fort William, on Monday the 24th of April, 1838, Private John Mealy, No. 787, Her Majesty's 9th regiment of foot, was arraigned on the following charges:

Charges.—"1st.—With having been drunk and out of barracks after hours, at Chinsurah on or about the night of the 21st March 1837, this being the eleventh instance of drunkenness within six months, after a conviction for habitual drunkenness, at Chinsurah, on the 30th of October 1837.—viz. on the 27th December 1837, 1st January, 7th January, 11th January, 21st January, 11th February, 14th February, 19th February, 25th February, 10th March 1834, and the present instance, and thereby constituting another act of habitual drunkenness.

"2d.—With insolent and insubordinate conduct, about ten o'clock on the morning of the 22d March 1839, when leaving the orderly room after the case of drunkenness detailed in first charge, had been investigated by the commanding officer, in having struck with his clenched fist, No. 572, Sergeant Maurice Fitzgerald, Her Majesty's 9th regiment, his superior officer, a violent blow on the head which knocked him down."

Upon which charges the Court came to the following decision:
Finding.—"The court, upon the evidence before them, are of opinion, that the prisoner Private John Mealy, No. 787, of Her Majesty's 9th regiment of foot, as guilty of the charges preferred against him."

Sentence.—"The court sentence the the prisoner Private John Mealy, No. 787, Her Majesty's 9th regiment of foot, to be transported, as a felon, for the term of his natural life."

Disapproved.

The court was required to revise their finding and sentence because they are illegal, as found under the 11th article of war, as intimated by the decision of the court, noted on the proceedings. The offence of the prisoner comes under the 70th article.

(Signed) H. FANE, General,
Commander-in-Chief, East Indies.

21st April 1838.

GENERAL REGISTER.

Revised Finding.—"With much deference to the opinion of the Commander-in-Chief, the court beg to observe, with regard to their finding, that it appears, the prisoner broke from his escort violently struck his superior officer, Sergeant Fitzgerald, threatening that he would take his life; and declaring, that the sergeant was 'the whole cause of his being in so much trouble.' The act, therefore, in the opinion of the court, is one of extreme in subordination directed against Sergeant Fitzgerald, intentionally in his capacity of the prisoner's superior officer, whose vigilance on duty had caused him annoyance, and it appears to the court to bear a highly mutinous tendency, short only of the actual offence of mutiny by the circumstance of the sergeant not having been on duty at the time. The court therefore respectfully adhere to their finding.

Revised sentence.—"Under the decision given by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, that the offence of the prisoner comes under the 70th article of war, the court cancel their former sentence, and do now sentence the prisoner Private John Wealy, No 787, of Her Majesty's 9th regiment of Foot, to suffer solitary imprisonment for twelve (12) calendar months, in such place as his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief may be pleased to direct; and to be deprived of one penny a day of his pay for two years, over and above any former forfeitures of liquor money, or of pay, which the prisoner is now undergoing, provided that the total forfeitures not exceed the amount of three pence per diem."

Confirmed,
(Signed) H FANF, General,
Commander-in-Chief, East India.

30th May 1838.

REMARKS BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

I entirely agree with the court in their opinion as to the serious nature of the prisoner's offence, and as to the punishment he deserves, and I would gladly have approved the first sentence passed had it been legal.

I cannot assent to the distinction the court desire to draw between mutiny and mutinous conduct, and therefore I am of opinion, that the court has erred in adhering to its original finding.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From the Bengal Hurkaru Price Current, June 30.)

INDIGO.—From the accounts received during the week from Kishnagur, Dacca, Jessore, and some other districts, the prospects of the growing crop are not so favourable, by a good deal as they were a week ago, a continuance of the rains for 10 day, more, would cause a great reduction in the expected out-turn of the season. The rivers are everywhere rising rapidly, and in some districts have compelled the planters to commence operation sooner than it was intended. In our opinion, appearances now indicate a crop certainly under the average of the last several years, and nothing but weather like that, experienced from this time, till the close of last season, can give more than an average.

As to the market here, there is really nothing doing, and very little remains on the spot.

The exports up to last evening, amount as below :

To Great Britain.....	Py. Mds. 84,216
France.....	ditto 17,527
Stockholm.....	ditto 108
North America.....	ditto 2,247
Bombay, Persian Gulph, and other places in India.....	ditto 4,734

Total Py. Mds. 108,832

RAW SILK.—Several parcels have changed hands during the week for the English market, at prices about 3 to 4 annas per seer, below last week's rates.

SILK PIECE GOODS.—The demand continues for Corahs, and several purchases, viz. large size Corahs for English market and small size for America, are reported with the occurrences of the week. The prices of the assortments remain without any change since our last.

COTTON.—Accounts per the Ann, from China state, that there had been a fall of 4 to 5 mace per pecul, in consequence of the arrival (in China) of the Sulimany and Sir Charles Malcolm, but not actual sales had taken place.

Considerable purchases continue to be made here and at Mirzapore, but we have no particular change in our last quotations to notice.

SALTPETRE.—The operations during the week are reported for the English and American markets, and the prices of two day show a small improvement on Chuprah.

SUGAR.—The market for this article may be reported steady, both as to demand and prices. The purchases reported are principally for England.

LAC.—The purchases of shell lac are for the English and American markets, and that of lac dye for the latter place. The prices of both remain without change since our last.

DRY GINGER.—Without transaction, and remains at our last currency.

HIDES AND HORNS.—Are in limited operation, and remain at former prices.

OILSEEDS.—Without purchase since our last. The prices of the day show a shade of improvement on linseed.

SAFFLOWER.—Also without purchase, but is quoted at a reduction.

GRAIN.—Purchases continue to be made of moonghee rice, wheat and gram, for the Mauritius; and the prices of the day exhibit an improvement on moonghee rice, and a fall on wheat and gram.

OPIMUM.—The accounts per the Ann, from China of a rise in price are purely accidental, it was in consequence of the departure of a judge for Peking, which afforded an opportunity to smuggle, and also in consequence of a Malwa speculator having sold on expectation of supplies, which not coming, forced him into a bare market, these intelligences have been the cause of a considerable rise on the price of the drug here.

GENERAL REGISTER.

A public sale was held yesterday by the Honourable Company at the Exchange-Rooms, of 2,249 chests Patna, and 1,458 chests Benares, and the following is the result:

	Chests	Highest	Lowest	Average	Proceeds
Benares	1,458	980	970	973 1 0	1,331,345

The average of this sale shows a considerable rise on the average price of the last viz. of Co.'s Rs. 246 per chest on Patna, and Co.'s Rs. 360 15 per chest on Benares. The accounts put Ann, seem to have exercised a much greater influence than they ought to have done, and prices have rated considerably higher than was expected by parties in China.

Legislative department, the 23d July, 1838.—The following act is passed by the Hon'ble the President of the Council of India in Council, on the 23d July 1838, with the assent of the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India, which has been read and recorded.

Act No. XVI. of 1838.

I. Clause 1st.—It is hereby enacted, in modification of the rules contained in Chapter VIII. Regulation XVII. of 1827, of the Bombay code, that in the territories subject to the presidency of Bombay, all suits in regard to tenures, and the nature and extent of the interest and advantage which in virtue thereof should be enjoyed by the parties concerned, and all suits in which the right to possession of land, or of the avowments of hereditary district or village officers is claimed shall be brought in the courts of adawlut and the courts subordinate thereto, and not in the courts of revenue.

Clause 2d.—Provided nevertheless, that it shall be lawful for the revenue courts to give immediate possessions of all lands premises, trees, crops, fisheries, and of all profits arising from the same, to any party dispossessed of the same or of the profits thereof, provided application be made to them by such party within six months from the date of such dispossession. And in order to the due execution of such power, it shall be lawful for the revenue courts to determine the facts of such possession and dispossession;—and the party to whom the revenue courts shall so give immediate possession, shall continue in possession, until ejected by a decree of a court of adawlut.

Clause 3d.—Provided also, that nothing contained in this act shall be held to interfere with the jurisdiction defined in Clauses 8, 4, and 5 of Section XXXI. Regulation XVII. of 1827, of the aforesaid code, which shall continue to be exercised by the revenue courts.

II. And it is hereby enacted, that if a suit be presented in the court of a judge or collector, which such judge or collector shall not deem within his jurisdiction, the party presenting such suit shall be referred by the court in which it may be first presented to that in which, in the opinion of such court, the jurisdiction lies, and the latter court shall in the event of its doubting its jurisdiction in the case, refer the question of jurisdiction to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, whose decision on the point shall be final.

III. And it is hereby enacted, that if a suit be presented in any court subordinate to the court of a judge or collector, which suit such subordinate court shall not deem to be within its jurisdiction, such subordinate court shall submit the case to the judges or collectors' court to which such subordinate court is subordinate, and if the superior court to which the case is so submitted shall be of opinion that such subordinate court has jurisdiction in the case, such superior court shall direct such subordinate court to proceed with the case; and if such superior court shall be of opinion that such subordinate court has not jurisdiction in the case, such superior court shall proceed in the manner directed in the last preceding section.

IV. And it is hereby enacted, that whenever a court of adawlut, or a revenue court shall have entered on its file, under this Act, a suit in which it has not jurisdiction, it shall be competent to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, either on a reference from the judge or collector, (as the case may be), or on application from the parties, to direct that the suit be transferred, with all the proceedings which may have taken place therein up to the period of transfer, to the court possessing jurisdiction which shall proceed therewith as if the suit had been originally filed in that court.

V. And it is hereby enacted, that when any court trying an appeal finds that the action was originally brought and decided in a revenue court, when it ought to have been brought and decided in a court of adawlut, or a court subordinate thereto, or that the action was originally brought and decided in a court of adawlut, or a court subordinate thereto, when it ought to have been brought and decided in a revenue court, the court trying the appeal shall, instead of quashing the whole proceedings, annul only the decree and refer the suit to be tried in the court in which the jurisdiction properly belongs, without farther costs of stamps to the parties, except on new exhibits, if any such should be allowed to be filed; and the court trying any such case referred under the foregoing section shall take further pleadings, exhibits, and evidence, only if it deem such necessary, and shall pass a new decree; but if an appeal be made from such new decree by the party originally bringing the appeal, then the decree of the court trying such new appeal shall be passed without the cost of a new stamp on the petition of appeal to that party.

VI. And it is hereby enacted, that all original suits and appeals relating to any of the subjects enumerated in Clause 1st, Section I. of this act, which may be depending in the revenue courts, shall be forthwith transferred to the courts of adawlut; and in all cases where the right of appeal may now be open, the appeal shall be brought to the court to which, under the rules of this act, such appeal shall lie.

Offy. Secy. to the Govt. of India.

BY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

Simla, 29th June, 1838—The Right Hon. the Governor General is pleased to appoint Captain P. Simalpage, of the 8th regiment of light cavalry, to be commandant of the 3d local horse, vice Major Hawkes, permitted to resign that situation.

The Right Hon. the Governor General directs the following augmentation to be made to the native army on the Bengal establishment:

To each infantry regiment of the line, ten privates per company.

To the 2d, 3d, and 4th corps of local horse, one duffadar and nineteen sowars per resallah, and to the 5th corps of local horse, one additional resallah.

2. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will be pleased to issue such orders as may be necessary, for giving early effect to this measure.

The Right Hon. the Governor General directs the publication of the following paragraphs of a letter from the Hon. the Court of Directors, in the military department, to the address of the Governor General of India in Council, No 3 of 1838, dated 11th April last:

"Para 1. The Government of Madras have forwarded to us several memorials from officers of the European regiment at that presidency, bringing to our notice the consequences entailed upon them, as to rank and certain pecuniary advantages, by the arrangement of the year 1829, under which the two regiments of European infantry, of 5 companies each, were incorporated into one regiment of 8 companies, but the officers still remained for purposes of promotion as they stood before the incorporation; viz. in two separate corps or wings.

2. A memorial, on the same subject, was preferred to us by officers of the Bombay European regiment, in the year 1832, to which we replied on the 24th October, 1832, through the government of Bengal, in the following terms: "We concur in opinion with the Governor General, (as expressed in his minute of the 7th November 1831) that no supersession, properly so called, has been the result of the new form given to our European regiments, by the orders of your government of the 2d November, 1829; and that no argument can be founded upon a fictitious irregularity of promotion among the officers attached to the two wings of those regiments, for setting aside an arrangement which has reduced the expense and improved the efficiency of these corps."

3. We still adhere to these sentiments; but we are of opinion that, for the satisfaction and contentment of the officers, measures should be taken which will have the effect of obviating prospectively, the supersession in regimental duties of one officer by another in the same regiment.

4. With this view, we now direct, that officers of the European regiment hereafter promoted in any one wing, shall not be entitled to regimental rank, in virtue of that promotion, unless they were previously the senior of their rank in the regiment; but that, as long as they serve with the regiment, their rank so obtained shall be brevet only, and not regimental. They will not, notwithstanding be entitled to the pay and allowances of their advanced rank, and to its full advantages for line promotion.

5. With a view to the adoption of an eventual arrangement, by which all such questions shall be avoided, we further direct, that no vacancies amongst the Ensigns in one of the wings, (either the right or left, as you may think most expedient) be hereafter filled up, but that as vacancies for Ensigns occur in it, appointments of an equal number be made to the remaining wing. When all the Ensigns now attached to the wing to be reduced shall have been promoted, future vacancies of Lieutenants in it will not be filled in that wing, but by promotions in the wing which is retained, and so on in the other ranks. The establishment of officers in the European regiment will thus eventually be, 2 Lieutenant Colonels, 2 Majors, 10 Captains, 16 Lieutenants, and 8 Ensigns, with 1 Colonel. The number of Colonels in the infantry branch of the service, (calculated as including 2 for the European regiment) to remain as at present, the junior of them being unattached.

6. The number of companies may in future be fixed at 10, instead of 8, with 65 privates each."

7. The arrangement detailed in the foregoing paragraphs, will be adopted, simultaneously, at the three presidencies, on the 1st of September next, from which date effect will be given to the orders of the Hon. Court, in regard to the commissioned officers of the Company's European infantry regiments; those of the left wing of regiments, respectively, being gradually absorbed, in the manner prescribed by the Court, as casualties shall hereafter occur in that wing.

8. From the same date, the regiments above specified will be formed into 10 companies each, of 4 Sergeants, 4 Corporals, 2 Drummers, and 65 Privates per company.

Simla, 3d July, 1838—With reference to the second para of general orders dated the 5th ultimo, the undersigned native officers of the Bengal establishment, have been selected for admission, from the 1st May, 1837, into the second class of the "Order of British India," with the title of "Bahadur." No. 49. 4th Troop 1st brigade horse artillery, subadar Tumman Sing.

50. 4th local horse, Ramsaid or Shick Noorbux.

Simla, 10th July, 1838—The Right Hon. the Governor General is pleased to appoint Captain F. V. McOrath, of the 6th regiment native infantry, and 2d in command of the Arracan local battalion, to be commandant of that corps, vice Captain G. Burney, permitted to resign the situation.

BY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

Head-quarters, Simla, 14th June, 1838—At a general court martial held at Nermuch, on Thursday the 3d day of May, 1838, Moobaruk Shah Khan, Mahomed Yar Khan, Kurrum Ally, Sadoola Khan, Ahmed Yar Khan, Mustapha Khan, and Kubeer Khan troopers, of the 8th troop of the 3d local horse, and Goolam Hyder Khan, camp-follower, were arraigned on the following charges:

Charges—1st charge. For having, at Ferrowlee, on the 19th March, 1838, murdered Shaik Goolam Hyder, trooper, of the same troop, by fracturing his skull with clubs.

"2d charge. For having, at the same time and place, severely wounded Shaik Goolam Ushroot and Shaik Peer Bukah, troopers, of the same troop."

Finding—"The court is of opinion, from the evidence that has been laid before it that, "on the first charge, the prisoners Kurrum Ally and Sadoola Khan are guilty, but that it has not been proved against the other prisoners, and does therefore acquit them."

"On the second charge, the prisoners Kurrum Ally and Sadoola Khan are guilty, but that it has not been proved against the other prisoners, and does therefore acquit them."

Sentence—"The court having found the prisoners Kurrum Ally and Sadoola Khan guilty of the charges preferred against them, sentences each; viz. Kurrum Ally, and Sadoola Khan, to be hanged by the neck until he be dead, at such time and place as His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief may be pleased to direct."

Approved.

(Signed) H. FANE, General
Commander in Chief,
East Indies.

11th June, 1838.

But I commit to the awarded punishment of death into transportation beyond the sea, for the remainder of the convicts' lives.

They are to be made over to the nearest civil authority between Nermuch and Allahabad, to be dealt with in the spirit of regulation 4 or 1820, as if the parties had been sentenced to a civil court.

REMARKS BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.

The convicts Kurrum Ally and Sadoola Khan are justly deserving of the full punishment awarded for their crime; but the general good behaviour of the local horse in Bengal has been such, as to induce the Commander in Chief to spare these men's lives. They will however be transported from their native country for the remainder of their existence to expiate, in banishment and chains, the crime they have committed.

The remaining prisoners Moobaruk Shah Khan, Mahomed Yar Khan, Ahmed Yar Khan, Mustapha Khan, and Kubeer Khan, having been acquitted, are to be released from confinement, and sent (under proper compacts) to rejoin their regiment; and the camp-follower, Goolam Hyder Khan, is to be released from confinement.

The Commander in Chief apprehends, that several of these men were acquitted only from the absence of sufficient evidence, and not for the absence of guilt; and he desires that their commanding officer will impress on them, and his corps, the great evils which arise from petty feuds in a regiment where all comrades ought to be friends; and caution them, to take example by the fate which awaits the two convicts named in the first paragraph.

The preceding order is to be read to the troops on parade, in every garrison and cantonment in the presidency of Bengal.

REMARKS BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.

His Excellency the Commander in Chief having felt it his duty to disapprove the revised sentence of this court martial, considers it essentially necessary to call the attention of the officers of the army to the case, because he deems that unless what is due to discipline is, better considered by future courts, great injury to the army must be the result.

The case is as follows :

With a view to prevent the loss of either public or private treasure, so often necessarily entrusted to military guards, a standing order for the army, directing a certain practice to be followed in all gilded rooms, was issued by the then Commander-in-Chief, in the year 1828.

The existing orders having proved insufficient, a further standing order, having the same object, was issued by the Commander-in-Chief, on the 15th of April 1826.

In the wing of the 54th regiment, which was detached, under the Command of Major Urquhart, to Allypore, both the standing orders referred to were entirely neglected, and in consequence of that neglect, a sum of 1,355 rupees the property of officers and soldiers, was stolen from the guard-room of the wing of the regiment mentioned.

Major Urquhart, commanding the wing, having been arraigned for the breach of the two orders quoted, (which breach had led to such serious results) offered three pleas in his defence :

1st. That he did not "know" that any treasure was in charge for the guard,

2d. That he had "no recollection" of the order of the 15th of April 1836.

3d. That disobedience to the order of 1828 was "an oversight."

The court found the prisoner "guilty" of the charge ; and their sentence was, that Major Urquhart should be "admonished," which sentence they have adhered to on the proceedings having been returned for revision.

The Commander in Chief need hardly point out to the army, that Major Urquhart ought to have known what was in charge of his guard ; because, had he exercised any of the vigilance due from the commanding officer of a body of troops, both personal inspection, and the guard reports, should have given him the requisite information.

The sentence of this court martial records, that it is the opinion of the members who composed it, that the standing orders of the army may be swerved from, or neglected, upon such pleas as having "no recollection" of one order, and "overlooking" another, without incurring more of culpability than is deserving of a simple "admonition." His Excellency feels bound to condemn such an opinion ; and he informs those members, that it is the duty of every officer above the rank of a young Ensign in the army, to know, and to recollect, and not to overlook the standing orders ; and that it is the duty of those whose rank places them in situations of trust, such as Major Urquhart held, to see that those orders are in all cases obeyed.

It is also the duty of a court martial, when they have found a verdict of "guilty" of neglect of duty, and disobedience of general orders, to award an adequate punishment.

It is His Excellency's opinion, that the members composing this court martial have taken a very erroneous view of their duty, in adhering to the inadequate sentence they had first awarded.

Major Urquhart is to be released from arrest, and directed to return to his duty.

By order of His Excellency the Commander in Chief.

Head-quarters, Simla, 30th June 1838.—With a view to giving the earliest effect to the General Order by the Right Hon. the Governor General, dated the 29th instant, directing an increase of ten men per company to the infantry of the line, His Excellency the Commander in Chief is pleased to authorize officers commanding regiments to detach small recruiting parties into such districts as they may consider the best, and where men fit for the ranks are the most likely to be obtained, and it is desired by His Excellency, that immediate notice of the augmentation be given to the men now on leave from the different regiments, in order to induce them to bring candidates of unexceptionable description for the service.

His Excellency feels confident that the best exertions of commanding officers will not be wanting to complete their corps, as soon as practicable ; so that the required number of recruits may join with the men returning from furlough ; or, through the aid of the recruiting parties, as much earlier as circumstances permit.

Descriptive rolls of recruits, as they reach the head quarters of the corps and are passed by the surgeon, are to be forwarded direct to the Adjutant General of the army.

Officers commanding regiments are requested to take the necessary steps for subsisting the recruits on their way to join, as sanctioned in minutes of council of the 6th August 1796 and Government General's Orders of the 4th December 1824.

Officers commanding corps of local horse mentioned in the orders above quoted, are expected to use their utmost efforts to complete their regiments, without delay, with the most efficient men and horses.

Head-quarters, Simla, 30th June, 1838.—The Dinapore division order of the 16th instant, directing Surgeon W. Stevenson, senior, of the 40th regiment of native infantry, to afford medical aid to the artillery at Dinapore, is confirmed.

Lieutenant T. T. Wheeler, of the 56th regiment native infantry, is appointed to do duty with the Ramgarh light infantry battalion, and directed to join without delay.

9th foot.—Lieutenant W. B. Farrant, to be Captain 31st August 1838.

By Order of the Commander in Chief.

Head quarters, Simla, 28th June 1838—No. 139.—The inefficient state of some of Her Majesty's regiments in Bengal as compared with their numbers on paper, owing to the retention in the ranks of ineffective men, caused by the scruples of invaliding medical committees, has occupied the attention of the Commander in Chief.

His Excellency has communicated with the General Commanding in Chief Her Majesty's Army, on the subject and he is now pleased to direct, that the following instructions shall supersede, in the East Indies, all those of anterior date which may bear variance with them.

1. The regimental authorities (commanding officer and senior medical officer) are authorised to present to the consideration of invaliding committees the cases of all soldiers deemed by them no longer equal to their duties in India, with the view of ascertaining their actual state as to efficiency.

2. Those men who appear permanently unequal to the general duties of soldiers and are unequal to more than barrack, or other minor duties, are not to be retained in India: nor are soldiers who, though not having any palpable medical defect, still may be deemed totally unequal to, and not likely to be able to resume their duties.

3. As it not unfrequently happens that soldiers are brought forward for discharge for reasons not strictly medical, on which the invaliding medical officers do not agree with the regimental authorities, or consider that they have not sufficient grounds on which to decide the case in the manner the regimental authorities recommend, the following practice is to be followed in all such cases.

4. A Board is to be assembled (consisting of three field officers) by order of the general officer Commanding the division in which the regiment is stationed, and all the cases, in which the invaliding committee may not have agreed with the regimental authorities, are to be submitted to their consideration, for a final decision.

5. In each case a roll of the soldier, containing a certificate (see annexed Form) signed by the Commanding Officer and medical officer of the soldier's regiment, is to be laid before the board; in which certificate the nature of the disability under which the soldier may labour must be fully set forth: and it must be stated in what manner the disability may have arisen.

6. The board must use the greatest caution and circumspection, so that the decision they may give shall be borne on and confirmed on a fair consideration of all the circumstances of the case; and bear the closest subsequent scrutiny.

GENERAL REGISTER.

7. The regimental authorities must be most careful to guard against malingerers, and never bring forward a man whose case bears the smallest suspicion of having that tendency; and they, and the committees to be constituted under this order, must carefully keep in mind that men sent home, who are not discharged after arrival in England, become a burthen on their depots, and their remain to the exclusion of recruits.

8. The certificates, ordered in the 5th paragraph, are to be forwarded by each regiment, to the head quarters of their respective presidencies with the other invalid rolls for the final orders of the Commander in Chief in each.

Return of the Number of Non-Commissioned Officers and Privates composing the provisional battalion.

(From the Bengal Hurkaru Price Current, July 31.)

INDIGO—The accounts received since our last, from the north-western provinces state that the crop has fallen thereby monthly, and that the return of the year might prove equal to that of last, from Benares, Allahpore, and these north-western provinces. As much rain had fallen, that a large portion of the new sowings had been lost, while in the Purnea, Patna, Malabar, Janghpore, Bhadrachal, and the banks of the Bhagirathi generally, as well as from Burdwan, Jessore and the other districts around Calcutta, the accounts in regard to deficient produce, excessive rains and inundation, continue very unfavorable, hence the crop is now calculated as being likely to fall materially below the output of last year.

The following are the exports up to last evening.

RAW SILK—Continues to give way in prices, and very little of finer qualities is to be met within the market. The transactions during the week are for England and Bombay.

SILK PIECE GOODS—Medium quality of Goods have been purchased during the week at former prices. The demand is at present limited for all descriptions of silk goods, and our last quotations are supported.

COTTON—Is without transactions for foreign account, (the demand on the spot, being wholly limited to local consumptions; were prices more moderate, shippers to China would doubtless come forward.)

SALT PETRE—There has been no animated demand for this article for some weeks past, and the prices of the day compared with the quoted in our last, show a reduction of about two annas per maund.

SUGAR—Business continues to be done pretty freely in this article, and it maintains its former prices; but there is none of the best quality to be met with in the bazar. The transactions during the week are reported for London, Liverpool, and Bombay.

LAC DYE—We have not heard of any transactions during the week, and prices remain without alteration.

LAC DYE—Purchase of a small parcel, second sort is reported for shipment to England at previous price.

DAY GINGER—Has given way in price, and the purchases reported are for the French and American markets.

INDICES—Have engaged attention during the week for principally the English markets, and considerable purchases are reported at improved prices.

HONES—A large purchase is reported with the occurrences of the week. The stock in the bazar being very large, tends to keep down prices.

OLIVE OIL—Without any transaction since our last issue, is quoted at a shade of decline.

GRAIN—Very little has been done during the week, and the prices of several descriptions of Grain viz. Mungah Rice, Wheat, Gram, Oats, and Barley are quoted somewhat below last week's rates.

OPERA—Since the arrival of the Water Witch, with accounts of a fall in China, prices have declined here Rs 50 a 60 per chest; but as there are no other buyers nor sellers at present, the rate is little more than nominal.

The following quantity remains uncared in the Company's godown:

Judicial and Revenue Department—Resolution. By the "rules" passed by the Right Hon. the Governor General in Council on the 15th March 1833, and published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 23d idem, commissioners of revenue and circuit were empowered, under certain circumstances, to grant to their subordinates, without reference to Government, leave of absence for periods not exceeding a month in the year.

But in consequence of the re-establishment of the office of superintendent of police, and the transfer, in almost all districts, of the criminal appeal duties, from the commissioners of circuit to the sessions judges, the subordination of most of the officers previously subject to the commissioners, has been divided, and the authority once exercised over magistrates and collectors, their deputies and assistants, by commissioners alone is now in their hands in the revenue department only, that belonging to the criminal department being held partly by sessions judges and partly by the superintendent of police.

As however the orders of 15th March 1833, have never been rescinded, and the superintendent of police has not been empowered to grant leave, but merely to forward applications to Government, considerable inconvenience has arisen, and it is obvious to the Deputy Governor that the rules in question, require modification to suit the altered circumstances of the service.

Accordingly his honour has been pleased to modify the rule of 15th March 1833, as follows:

1. All officers hitherto subordinate to the commissioners of revenue and circuit, requiring leave of absence for any term, on account of cases not urgent, will hereafter apply for leave to the Government through the officers to whom they may be subordinate.
2. Officers subordinate at the same time to the commissioners of revenue and to the superintendent of police, will apply separately through both functionaries, and await their respective directions.

According to the preceding rule, a magistrate or magistrate's assistant, requiring leave of absence, will apply the latter through the magistrate to the superintendent of police, who will forward the application to Government with such opinion as he may deem proper.

In like manner, a collector or collector's deputy or assistant, will apply to the commissioner, who will forward the application with his opinion to the Sanitary Board of revenue, by whom it will be submitted to Government with such remarks as the Board may think fit to call for.

3. Officers holding the situations of magistrate and collector (united or separate) and their subordinates, will, in urgent cases, apply to the commissioner of revenue, who in such cases, the urgency being clearly set forth, will grant leave of absence for a period not exceeding one month. Every such leave granted must be without delay reported to Government by the commissioner, who will also, when the officer to whom leave is granted is subordinate wholly or in part to the superintendent of police, give intimation of the circumstance to that functionary.

Ordered, that the above resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette, for general information.

The Court however understand, that a soldier of any standing in the service, who has served long enough to have claims, or not, is equally liable to be disciplined with ignominy, should his offences have been of so disgraceful, or aggravated a nature as to have rendered corporal punishment necessary as an example, and his dismissal from the service expedient.

(Signed) H. FANE, General,

East Indies.

July 26, 1838.

REMARKS BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.

This officer has been convicted of insubordinate, unofficial-like, and disorderly conduct, and the evidence produced against him before the court martial, shows a degree of contumacy, which renders the crimes of which he has been found guilty, the less deserving of clemency.

He has partly grounded the defence of his misconduct on a plea that Chandernagore (the scene of his errors) is a foreign settlement, and therefore, that he was not amenable to his superior officer, but was entitled to do as he pleased, and to be disobedient to him.

It would have been proper that the Lieutenant should have recollected that he was invited to the public entertainment at Chandernagore from the quarters of his regiment as a British officer, and that such was the character he was therefore bound to maintain.

As he had totally disobeyed the orders of the Commander in Chief, by appearing at a public assembly in the dress described in the evidence, Captain Douglas (the prosecutor) acted with propriety in the step he took of ordering him not to enter the public rooms; and the Captain would have neglected his duty had he failed to do so.

The Lieutenant has also pleaded his youth in extenuation of his offences, but as he has been more than two years a Lieutenant, the Commander in Chief does not admit it to be any excuse for insubordination, and apparent ignorance of the articles of war.

Had the Lieutenant really doubted the competence of Captain Douglas to issue an order to him, he should have known that his proper course was to obey, and if he thought himself aggrieved, to have subsequently applied, instead of contumaciously persevering in disobedience to the orders of his superior officer.

On the whole Lieutenant Hartman's conduct has well merited the reprimand awarded by the court martial, and the Commander in Chief reprimands him accordingly.

He is to be released from his arrest and to return his duty.

Head quarters, Simla, July 31—No. 149.—Officers commanding divisions will in the course of the ensuing month, assemble the medical committees, for the purpose of inspecting such soldiers of her Majesty's service as may be deemed fit subjects to be brought before them, under the general order of the 25th June 1838.

Captain Burr, H. M. 3d foot, will, at the period appointed proceed to Kurnaul to take charge of those of 13th light infantry, and will march via Meerut, where on his arrival, he will receive those of H. M. 16th Lancers and 3d foot. He will conduct them to Gurmucktesur ghaut, at which place they will embark, and thence to Calcutta, by water. This officer will report in sufficient time to the officers commanding the several divisions through which he may pass, the day on which he may expect to arrive at each station, in order, that the men to be sent from regiments at each division, may be held in readiness to be made over to him.

GENERAL REGISTER.

Lieutenant and Brevet Captain Meredith, 14th Light Infantry, will do duty with these detachments, under Captain Barr.

Charge—"For having submitted to be grossly insulted by (or met) now Lieutenant Macatney, of her Majesty's 14th regiment of light dragoons, by being told to consider himself horse whipped, on board the Bengal Merchant, on her passage from Calcutta to England, in 1834, without having hitherto taken any proper and adequate steps for the vindication of his character.

Additional charges against Lieutenant and Brevet Captain H. Wootton, of her Majesty's 14th regiment.

"1st. For conduct highly unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having addressed a letter to me, dated Boulogne sur mer, September 20, 1834, wherein he falsely accused me of having promoted Capt. on Bismarck's being his friend in an affair with Comet Marianne, her Majesty's 14th light dragoons.

"2d. For having falsely accused me in the same letter of having been the means (or cause) of Comet Macatney's refusing to go (him) a calling after I had left Europe in September 1834, whereas, in truth, the friend of Comet Macatney (Lieutenant Laurie, 14th light dragoons) had declared to me in July 1834, that so long a period had been allowed to transpire that if Lieutenant Wootton then made his appearance, the Comet should not grant him a meeting.

"3d. For using towards me, his superior officer, in the above quoted letter, expressions grossly false and slanderous.

Brevet Major 14th Regt."

Upon which charge the court came to the following decision:

Finding—"The court find the prisoner Lieutenant and Brevet Captain Henry Wootton of her Majesty's 14th regiment of foot.

"On the original charge, guilty.

"On the first additional charge, guilty.

"On the second additional charge, not guilty.

"On the third additional charge, guilty.

Sentence—"The court having found the prisoner guilty of the charges preferred against him (with the exception of the second additional charge, of which they acquit him,) do sentence him, Lieutenant and Brevet Captain Henry Wootton, of her Majesty's 14th regiment of foot to be cashiered.

Approved,

(Signed)

H. FANE, General,

Commander in Chief

East Indies.

August 1, 1838.

Recommendation by the Court—"The court having performed their duty, in accordance with the articles of war, feel induced to bring to the notice of his Excellency the Commander in Chief, the great length of time which has elapsed between the occurrence of the circumstances on which the prisoner has been tried, and the trial, together with the very unusual description of evidence on which he has been convicted; on these grounds, and in consideration of his length of services, the court earnestly recommend him to mercy."

REMARKS BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.

The Commander in Chief does not deem, that the nature of the evidence offered to the court, or the lapse of time have any weight in the case; but he is willing to give the prisoner the advantage of the recommendation of the court, and consequently he remits the sentence.

RAW SUGAR.—The market is nearly full of the 1st quality of the March and April band, the purchases reported are mostly of the ordinary Mauritius and Radnagur, at prices a shade below our last quotations. A few parcels of the rainy band have just arrived, and the prices demanded are rather too high to warrant shipment.

SUGAR PRICES.—Corals and choppas of first qualities are very scarce, and parcels are contracted for previously to arrival. Those offered for sale in the market, are of ordinary to inferior qualities, and prices remain as quoted in our last.

COTTON.—Purchases are limited and solely on account of vessels homing, none being obtainable on freight even at the low rate of 1/5 per bale.

SALTPETRE.—Has improved in demand, and several purchases have been made during the week, principally for England at full former prices.

SUGAR.—The demand is still active for the English markets and prices are quoted at an improvement.

The recent exports being extensive, the stock of first quality in the market has greatly diminished.

The purchases of molasses reported in our present number, were made last week and shipped on the Gallardon, for Hobart Town and Sydney.

LAC.—A purchase of thirteen boxes of shell lac is the only transaction reported since our last, for exportation to France at our last quotation. We have heard of no purchase of dye, but we understand some shipments are being made by the manufacturers or the English market.

POWDER.—A few purchases are reported for exports to England at unaltered price.

TOBS AND HOPS.—Remain as reported in our last.

WOLLEN GOODS.—Purchases of linseed only continue to be made for England but the large supplies in the bazar, have somewhat affected the price of the article.

WOLLEN GOODS.—Sales have again been limited, and the prices have sustained a slight fall of about two annas per piece on Bengal and neutral stripes and pines, consequent on the recent heavy importations.

GLASS COTTONS.—Ginghams may be considered about three annas to six annas per piece below former prices, and in limited inquiry. Red twilled cloths have been sold to a fair extent at an advance of nine pie to one anna per yard on previous rates.

WHITE COTTONS.—The demand for long cloth has been moderate but active sales continue to be effected in cambies, jacinets, blouses, and hoppers at full former prices.

WHEAT TWIST.—The demand for this twist has been moderate, and the prices of the day for the assortments may be quoted as in our last.

GRAIN.—Purchases of panchbery rice for England, and of mooghy rice, wheat and grain for the Mauritius have been made during the week, and the prices quoted exhibit a slight fall on mooghy rice, and arise on wheat and grain.

OPHIM.—Few transactions since our last, and the prices quoted are nominal at last week's currency.

ALMOND OIL, AND DEERLAMP.—Without sale, and without any change in prices.

CAMPBELL.—A sale has been effected at a reduction in price.

CANES, CUBES, LOVES, AND CUTPEE.—Without sale, and remain at steady prices.

MADE AND NEWBLES.—Also without sale, and prices remain without change.

PEPPER.—The moderate stock in the hands of importers have caused a slight rise on the price of this article.

BLACK TIN.—Without sale, but the metal continues to advance in price consequent on the reduced stock in the hands of importers and in the bazar.

VERMILION.—The great scarcity in the market, has caused some inquiry for this article, and the price has advanced about thirty two rupees per box on our last quotation.

TRUCKERY AND OTHER DYED YARNS.—A sale of Turkey red English dye has been effected at a great reduction in price, owing to the rather large supplies in the hands of importers. In other dyed yarns we have no change to report.

WOOLLS.—A small demand still exists for medium and coarse cloths for Madras and the Burmese market, but we have hardly any change in prices to notice.

COPPER.—Sales of this metal continue limited, a few parcels of sheathing have been disposed of at our last quotation, and this at a reduction of about four annas per maund. There has been a great inquiry for hot, of which not a maund remains at present in the hands of importers, the price has consequently advanced to Sixty Rs. 15 per maund nominally.

IRON.—There has been some inquiry during the week for nail rod, sheet, and hoop, the prices of which have advanced in a small degree. Sales of flat, square and bolt have been effected, but without any change in prices.

GENERAL REGISTER

STEEL.—We have not heard of any transaction during the week. Swedish steel is quoted at a small advance.

LEAD.—Without sale, anthracite at our last quotations.

SPERM.—Also without sale, but is quoted about three annas more than last week's currency.

TIN PLATES AND SHEET-IRON.—No sales have been reported in these, and prices remain without alteration.

BLEND.—The stock of the favourite brand of Bass' and Allsop's being nearly exhausted, and importations continuing very limited.

have caused an improvement both in the demand and prices, and we observe an advance of eighteen to twenty annas per hog-head within the last five or six days.

WINE STOCKS.—Our market is bare of cordage and anchor which are very much inquired after, as they are plentiful and sell in small quantities, (bottle sales are also abundant and few sales effected, but with difficulty. Spain (Bordeaux) are very uncertain of sale in this quarter of a large number being brought out by the Americans. Tar (Steele's) is much inquired after the article being scarce in the market, about 100 barrels imported per J. de Woodall, were disposed of by public auction at the exchange rooms on Tuesday last, at 25 p. 100 per barrel.

38th Regiment native infantry.—Captain G. Burney, from 8th August to 8th October, in extension, to remain at the presidency, on medical certificate.

With the sanction of the Right Honorable the Governor General, his Excellency the Commander in Chief is pleased to lay down the following rules for the drill, superintendence, and payment, of the recruits of the corps which have been warned for field service:

The recruits of the 2d, 5th, 29th, 31st, 43d and 53d regiments of native infantry, are either to be kept at, or sent to Meerut, under the command of a native commissioned officer, (whose age and state of bodily strength may render it desirable, that he should not be exposed to the fatigues of a campaign) together with the drill stick, and four sepoy from each regiment, as drill instructors; it is desirable that men should be chosen for this duty, whose constitutions are the least likely to stand exposure.

The recruits of the 16th, 37th, 35th, 37th, 42d and 48th regiments of native infantry, are, in like manner, to be assembled under the same superintendence, at Kurnaul.

Lieutenant C. C. Pigott, of the 18th regiment native infantry, is appointed Adjutant to the recruit depot at Meerut; and Captain T. E. A. Napleton, of the 50th regiment, commandant, and Lieutenant W. H. Comer, of the 1st regiment native infantry, adjutant, to the depot at Kurnaul. The two first named officers will repair to their respective destinations without delay.

The recruits at these depots are to be formed into two battalions of six companies each; each company to comprise the men of one particular corps, and the soldiers sent from it, as drill instructors, are to be appointed to act as non commissioned officers, for the purpose of preserving discipline.

Quarter master sergeant George Clowley, of the 23d native infantry, is appointed sergeant major to the Meerut depot; and quartermaster Sergeant Robert Campbell, of the 14th native infantry, is appointed sergeant major to the depot at Kurnaul.

Sergeant Thomas Mara and Corporal John Bennahine, of the European regiment, are transferred to the town major's list; and appointed, the former quarter master sergeant to the Meerut depot, and the latter quarter master sergeant to that at Kurnaul.

The recruits of each corps are to be furnished with arms, accoutrements, and clothing, before they are separated from their regiments; but where this should not be found practicable, officers commanding corps will communicate to the officers commanding the depots, the steps taken by them to obtain the necessary equipments; and all documents relating to them, should be made over at the same time.

The recruits are to be settled with up to the 31st proximo; after which date their pay will be drawn by the officers commanding the respective depots, on separate muster rolls, and in separate abstracts, one muster roll and one abstract for each company or regiment.

In the rolls of the regiments to which they actually belong, they will be returned as "at the depot."

The officers commanding the depots, and the adjutants, will draw the usual allowances assigned to such appointments in corps of the line; and the former will likewise be entitled to the customary allowance for the repair of arms of companies; the adjutants will draw the stated sum for the provision of bullocks and targets.

The officers commanding the Meerut and Sirhind divisions will respectively issue the necessary orders for the entertainment of a quarter master's establishment, to the extent of one breaster company, and two tent lascars for each depot, as soon as the recruits are collected, and they will likewise provide each battalion with two native doctors, and the customary hospital establishment, and place them under the charge of the medical officer, who will be hereafter nominated.

It is the desire of his Excellency, that no more of the recruits, enlisted for the augmentations ordered on the 29th June and 16th ultimo, should be allowed to accompany their regiments, than will serve to complete them to the former establishment of 640 privates after leaving behind such of the old soldiers, or sickly men, whose presence with it would rather lessen than increase the efficiency of a corps.

The same periodical papers and reports, are to be forwarded by the officers commanding depots, as are required to be furnished by officers commanding corps of the line.

Head quarters, Simla, September 9.—Complaints having reached head-quarters of the inconvenience to which officers, on leave of absence, are occasionally subjected, from their inability to obtain pay, otherwise than through the deputy paymaster in whose circle their regiments may happen to be stationed, his Excellency the Commander in Chief deemed it necessary to make a representation on the subject to the right honourable the Governor General, by whom the matter was subsequently referred, for consideration, to the accountant general. The following is the report of that functionary, and it is now published for general information:

No. 592.

Mily Dep't
SIR,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No 121, 9th instant, transmitting two communications from the adjutant general of the army, relative to the inconvenience experienced by officers, under existing regulations, when on leave of absence, in drawing their pay, otherwise than through the paymaster of the circle in which their regiments may be placed, and requesting a report on the expediency, or otherwise, of modifying the rules under which officers, on leave of absence from their corps, between stations, receive their allowances.

2. I beg to state, in reply, that although existing regulations prohibit entry of abstracts of officers on other than their own paymaster's disbursements, yet payment of such abstracts is not so restricted, being obtainable from any paymaster, on application, and on producing the last pay certificate of his own paymaster. And as the paymaster making the advance, is restricted from charging the abstract, he obtains reimbursement by draft or credit from the proper paymaster.

3. The object of restricting the entry of each abstract to the proper paymaster's disbursements, in whose circle the officer is placed, is to facilitate check in the audit office, to prevent errors in passing allowances twice, and to combine and show all charges of each regiment in one place, instead of being scattered in many. But, although such be the object for which the existing regulations

we framed yet as they do not produce any inconvenience to officers proceeding beyond their circle. (payment as already shown being obtainable from any paymaster.) I am not aware of any necessity of modifying the existing regulations, nor of making any special rules for payments to officers enroute to other stations

4. In the instance of Lieutenant Macleann, brought to the notice of Government by the Adjutant General, it does not appear that, that officer had either made application for payment of his abstract to any paymaster, or that he had left instructions with his own paymaster to remit to him by draft, the amount of his forthcoming pay, at a specified station. Had he conformed to either of those methods, the inconvenience which he represents to have experienced, in not being able to proceed on his journey from want of funds, would not have occurred.

I have, &c.

Act No. XXIV of 1838.

I. It is hereby enacted, that section III. of Act XIX. of 1836, together with any other provisions of that Act which prescribe or imply that the capital stock of the Bank of Bengal shall not exceed 75 lakhs of rupees, shall from this day be repealed.

II. And it is hereby enacted, that it shall be lawful for the Governor General of India in Council whenever he shall see fit from time to time by an order to be notified in the Calcutta Gazette, to authorize the capital stock of the said Bank to be increased, and to make such order and direction for the opening of subscriptions towards such increase of capital as to him may seem fit, giving due notice to the proprietors of the said Bank for the time being and allowing to them a period of not less than eighteen months to fill up such subscription.

III. And it is hereby enacted, that whenever such increase of capital stock of the Bank of Bengal shall be ordered by the Governor General of India in Council, the proprietors entitled to share therein, shall not be debarred of the right to subscribe for the new stock in the proportion of the shares they may be legally holding by reason of any limit to the quantity of stock which a single proprietor may hold that may be imposed by the provisions of the charter of the bank, or by any clause or provision contained in Act No. XIX. of 1836.

V. And it is hereby enacted, that it shall be lawful for the Governor General of India in Council at the time of ordering any increase of the capital stock of the Bank of Bengal to reserve the portion of such increase that may belong to Government by reason of its share of the capital of the said bank, and to fix any date within the period of eighteen months above specified, at which before which it shall be legally declared whether the Government will take the share of new stock to which it is so entitled or will refuse the same, and in case of refusal by Government to take its share of new stock, such stock shall not be sold on account of the proprietors at large as above provided for stock not subscribed for by other proprietors, but the amount to which the Government may be so entitled shall not be raised, and if the Government shall determine to subscribe for the share of new capital to which it is entitled, it shall be lawful for the Governor General of India in Council either to retain the same or to order the sale of such new stock or any portion thereof on account of Government in such manner and at such times as to him may seem fit.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From the Bengal Hurkaru Price Current, October, 27.)

INDIGO.—We have nothing new to report under this head—no transactions having taken place since our last.

We have heard of the following arrivals during the week:—

Watson's.....Kishanghur, (new crop).....	213 chests
Agnew's.....Moorsheadabad, (ditto).....	8 „
Native.....Kishanghur, (ditto).....	14 „

RAW SILK.—Continues in very good demand, but finer qualities being scarce in the market, prevent operation to any great extent. The prices of the day remain as in our last.

SILK PRICE GOODS.—The market continues favorable, particularly for cereals and choppes, but operations are restrained by the absence of fair exportable qualities. The prices of the assortments may be quoted as in our last.

COTTON.—No transactions have taken place since the termination of the native holidays, parties, notwithstanding the recent accounts from China, showing no disposition to ship on speculation, prices have consequently somewhat receded from our last quotations.

GENERAL REGISTER.

SALTPEIRE—Continues in demand for the English and French markets, with necessity to provide loading for vessels now in the river, and prices in consequence are supported.

SUGAR—Continues also to be enquired after, but the market is insufficiently supplied with finer qualities. The purchases reported are for shipments to England at about last week's prices.

LAC—A few purchases of inferior quality of Shell Lac continue to be made for Farnce and America at about former prices. Lac d'Oc seems to be neglected.

HIDES AND HORNS—Of good qualities, continue to be enquired after, and are scarce in the market, and prices are well supported.

JOSE AND HEMP—Plentiful in the market, and prices continue falling.

OIL SEEDS—Linseed only continues to be purchased for shipment to England, and may be quoted at a shade of improvement in price.

GRAIN—Purchases of rice, wheat and gram continue to be made for the Mauritius and Bombay, but we have hardly any change in prices to notice.

Shipments to Bombay are going on briskly, and the quantities already shipped on the vessels engaged to carry grain to that place are reported as under.

Indian Oak.....	{ Rice.....	1943 bags

OPPIUM—The orders received from China per Syph for new purchases are very limited, and the quantity of opium here being chiefly in the hands of Exporters, operations since our last, have been confined to a few lots of Patna and Benares at an advance of 20 a 25 Rs per chest on last week's prices. The quantity at present remaining uncleared in the Hon'ble Company's ware house, consists of the following:—

	Old.	Now.	Total.
Patna,.....	625	55	680
Benares,.....	237	0	237
	862	55	917 chests.

The new clipper Syren is expected to start hence for China about the first week next month with about 600 chests principally on account of the shippers.

ALUM—Without sale, but has slightly advanced in price.

CAMPHOR AND CASSIA—Have also advanced in price.

CUBES—Without sale or change in price.

CLAVES—Have experienced a further advance.

MACE AND NEROLI—Without sale, but the latter has slightly advanced in price.

PEPPER—Sales are reported at improved prices.

BLACK PIN—Has experienced some improvement in prices.

CHINA SILKS AND COLORED COTTONS—Sales of almost all descriptions of prints and colored cottons continue to be effected, but without any improvement in prices.

WHITE COTTONS—Of heavier fabrics, viz. mungopolams, long cloths, shirtings, and cambrics are in large demand, and selling at last week's prices. The enquiry for other descriptions of White cottons has somewhat ceased.

MOLE TWIST—Sales in which much of the trade continue extensive and the prices of the best sorts are reported at an advance of one pie per maund on last week's quotations.

COLORSD YARNS—Turkish and yarn only continues saleable, and the prices of the dyed yarns show improvement of 1 anna per lb. on last week's quotation. Fackery dyed German dye is enquired after, and is scarce in the market.

WOOLLENS—Sales during the week have been limited, but we cannot attribute this to the dullness of the market. Prices remain firm at last week's quotations.

COPPER—The market has experienced some improvement since our last bulletin, and prices. The sales of sheet apply to a demand for Bombay, and of 14 lb. Tile for Mirzapore.

The prices of the market exhibit an advance of Rupee 1 a 1-4 per maund on last week's quotations throughout the assortments.

IRON—Has also improved in price on some descriptions, viz. English flat, square, ball, round square and nail rods. Sales of which continue to be effected.

STEEL—Without sale Swedish steel is quoted a shade above last week's currency.

LEAD—Without transaction this week, holders showing no disposition to sell, expecting a further rise on the prices of the day, which may be reported at about 4 annas a 8 annas per maund on last week's quotations.

We understand the Bombay Government have rejected their tenders for pig lead which they had lately invited, for reasons yet unknown, this has consequently thrown a gloom on that market.

SPELLER—Some sales have been effected during the week for shipments to Bombay, at an advance of 7 a 8 annas per maund on last week's currency.

TIN PLATES—We have heard of no sale during the week, but the price is quoted at a shade of advance.

QUICKSILVER—Scarce—and in demand at our quotation.

The following communication received from His Excellency Rear Admiral Sir F. L. Maitland, K. C. B. Commander in Chief to Her Majesty's Naval Forces in India, and addressed to the President of the Council of India in Council, is published for general information.

No.

The Hon'ble the President of the Council of India in Council Calcutta.

Sir—I have received a despatch from Sir J. Gordon Bremer, Captain of H. M. Ship Albatross, dated the 31st of May last, from the Cape of Good Hope, informing me that he was so far on his voyage to New South Wales, to establish a post on the northern coast of Australia, for the purpose of giving protection to British commerce, carried on through Torres Strait with China and India, and with the islands of the Indian Archipelago, and of affording an asylum for those who may be shipwrecked on the coast.

In a private communication he further informs me, that the British traders come to Port Essington (which is situated on the Colough Peninsula in North Australia, in about Latitude 119° 10m. S., and Longitude 132d. 10m. E.) in great numbers, for the purpose of taking and during the Trepaning or Boche de Mer, which they carry to the coast and thence to the China market, and that there is no doubt that these people, their numbers being great would take a large portion of British, or Indian cloth, hardware and other manufactures from us, for which they now depend wholly on the Dutch. But he is of opinion that the great mart will eventually be the islands in the neighbourhood.

Sir Gordon is expected to reach Adelaide, in South Australia, by the 5th July last, and Sydney by the 25th, and after making the necessary arrangements with the Governor of New South Wales, would proceed to form the settlement.

And this officer, who is in charge of the expedition having requested me to publish some kind of notice of the undertaking, addressed to the public in 1838, as it may possibly induce some one to venture on sending a vessel down to the new settlement (which I understand is intended to the port Essington) with cottons, &c., and thus commence a communication.

I have been induced to acquaint your honour in Council therewith, in order that the same may be brought under the notice of the mercantile community of the Bengal presidency in such manner as your honour in Council may deem most proper.

I have &c.

(Signed) FRED. L. MAITLAND.

MILITARY.

BY THE PRESIDENT IN COUNCIL.

Fort William, October 29, 1838.—No. 155 of 1838.—Inconvenience having been found to arise from the existing mode of embarking and providing troops and invalids, return to Europe, with medical comforts and the authorised equipments, His Honor in Council is pleased to lay down the following rules, in substitution of those now in force:

The commissariat department will in future be held responsible for the supply and shipment of hammocks and other necessities, as well as the medical comforts allowed by the regulations on embarkation returns furnished by the Quarter Master General of the army, or in his absence by the officer in charge of the office at the presidency.

If any articles not allowed by regulations should at any time be required in extraordinary cases, which can seldom occur, an indent for such with an explanation of the circumstances, will be submitted by the Quarter Master General of the army, or the officer in charge of his office at the presidency to the secretary in the military department, for the orders of Government.

The whole of the supplies are to undergo the prescribed survey previous to shipment, and the commissariat officer shipping them will furnish a statement of their description and quantities to the officer commanding the troops or invalids for whose use the articles may have been put on board.

The officer who may be nominated to the command of the party embarking in each ship shall invariably be either president or a Member of the Council, who is to examine the articles, and a medical officer in all practicable cases shall likewise be a Member.

Correct returns of the invalids of the regiment and other soldiers both of the Bengal Honorable Company's services, for whom a passage to Europe is required, are to be forwarded by the major or brigade quarter master, or town major, as the case may be, to the quarter master general of the army, or officer in charge of his office at the presidency, who, in communication with the Marine Board, will make the distribution to the several vessels engaged.

The Quarter Master General of the army will report for the information of Government the number of individuals of both services for whom accommodation is required, to enable that the Marine Board may be instructed to advertise for tenders of the requisite tonnage.

The Quarter master general of the army, or his deputy or assistant, in charge of the office at the presidency, will prepare the necessary embarkation returns, for the Marine Board, and commissariat officer who provides the hammocks and medical comforts, and whose charges for the same will be considered satisfactorily touched by that document, and the receipt of the commander of the vessel is for the articles, shipped, as sanctioned by regulation.

Half weekly returns of the alterations in the number of individuals to embark will be required by the quarter master general of the army or the officer in charge of his office at the presidency from the proper departments, until the whole are embarked.

The commissary general or senior officer of the department present, will make a return to Government of all articles shipped under these orders supported by duplicate receipts for the same from the commanders of the ships on board of which the troops may have been embarked, these documents being required for transmission to the Hon'ble the Court of directors if possible by the same ships.

The committee to examine the ship accommodation after the vessels are reported ready for inspection will be constituted as heretofore.

The quarter master general of the army or departmental officer in charge of the presidency office, will receive from the master attendant due notice both when a ship is ready for inspection of the committee, and when prepared to receive the detachment allotted to her; he will accordingly make the necessary requisition for the committee, and the necessary arrangements for the embarkation of the troops, taking care that no avoidable delay occurs in either case.

The payment of arrears of pay and other dues to men under orders of embarkation will be adjusted as heretofore.

His Excellency the commander in chief is requested to issue any subsidiary orders which may be necessary to give effect to the foregoing rules.

The rules in the form of instructions prepared by the Marine Board for the guidance of the master attendant and commanders of vessels taken up for the conveyance of troops having been approved of by Government, are herewith published for general information:

GENERAL REGISTER.

3. The surveyor and one of the assistants to the master attendant will attend on board your ship to measure off the space allotted to the men, according to the agreement, and you are therefore, with as little delay as possible, to cause that space to be properly partitioned off, and separated by a bulk head from the crew and cargo. You are also to cause proper hammock battenies to be put up, laid out to be fixed at the hatchways, and awnings and wind sails to be provided. You are also, as speedily as possible, to produce to the master attendant, for the inspection and survey of one of his assistants, masters of the several articles of provisions which you purpose to furnish for the troops during the voyage, and you are to chance such as may not be approved by such assistant. And it is not possible for such assistant to inspect and survey the whole of each article, and as the inspection and survey by a Government officer does not, according to the agreement, "in any manner lessen the responsibility" of the owners and commander, that the provision shall be of the best quality—you will be requested to affix the certificate, noted in the margin, to a report from the master attendant on the provision, &c. proposed by you to be furnished to the troops during the voyage.

Thereby certify, that the actual provisions mentioned in the survey report have been signed on the ship for the use of the troops, proceeding on her to England; and that they are all of equal quality. In this mastership inspected and approved by assistant master attendant Commander.

3. Your most particular attention is called to the earliest possible completion of these arrangements, for it is necessary that they should all be completed before your vessel can be submitted to the inspection of the military commander, and the greatest inconvenience as well as the public departments as to vessels conveying home troops has frequently arisen from delay and attention not having been paid by the commander in hastening these arrangements.

4. When, however, the whole are complete, and the surveying officers are satisfied thereof, you will be good enough to fix a day for the visit of the military commander and make the same known in writing to the master attendant, observing that if it is necessary there should be one clear day at least after such notice reaches this office. On the day that the military commander visits the ship, you are to take care that the space allotted to the men is clear and clean washed, that awnings are spread, wind sails up battenies fixed and every thing arranged, ready for the actual embarkation of the men.

You yourself and your surgeon are to be on board; and you are to pay ready attention to all such suggestions as may be made by the commander, which are not opposed to the agreement under which your ship is engaged in the service of Government.

5. After the military commander shall have left the ship satisfied with the arrangements, you will be good enough to communicate to the master attendant the day on which you desire that the men should embark, who will make the same known to the quarter master general of the army in which in charge of his office of the presence of the men, and it will be necessary that two or three days shall be given after such notice to enable them to adjust the men's accounts. You are of the same time to attend at the office for the purpose of executing the agreement.

6. Finally, after the men are embarked, you are distinctly to understand that, according to the agreement, she is not to be moved for forty-eight hours after such embarkation, unless the officer superintending the embarkation shall furnish the pilot in writing with permission to leave earlier.

7. I am, in conclusion, directed to repeat the desire of the board, that the most minute attention be paid in these directions as otherwise dereliction and inconvenience cannot but be the consequence to the vessel under your command.

(Signed) C. G.

Para. 1. In our military letter to the Supreme Government, dated the 17th December 1834, we notified our recommendation in the opinion of the Governor General, and of the other members of the Government, that no reason exists why major generals should, in the event of their being in India superannuated, major generals in the Company's service, vacate any offices or all appointments of which they may be in possession until it actually comes to their turn to accept or decline divisional commands, when the same rule will apply to them, as we have now directed to be applied to colonels holding staff appointments.

Head-quarters Simla, October 22—1. With the approbation of the Right Honorable Governor General, the army assembling for duty in the field will be designated "the army of the Indus."

2. Previous to the advance of the troops from the Jumna, His Excellency the Commander in Chief, having in view the various unusual duties which many of the officers will be called on to discharge for the first time, offers for their consideration, a few topics the result of his experience.

3. All know that discipline is esteemed the first quality in an army, to ensure success in any military operation; but all are not aware of how small a part of the discipline of an army in the field is comprised in what is considered "discipline" in the ordinary acceptance of the term.

4. One of its most essential points on service, is the watchfulness which every individual should bestow on the manner in which the grades below him discharge their duties; and in every officer's not only performing his own duty with correctness, but in his seeing that the duties of the class immediately below him are also correctly discharged.

5. Thus, the officers commanding divisions must be watchful over the commanders of brigades; and they over the officers commanding regiments; who, in their turn, must take care that their captains perform their duties strictly; and so through all grades down to the non-commissioned officers of squads.

6. Officers on service in the field must esteem their own personal convenience but the secondary consideration: the care of the soldiers under their charge the first. No commanding officer of a regiment or a company, on the termination of a march, must attend to his own business, until the soldiers under his command are properly disposed of in their camp, and the necessary arrangements are in progress for the supplies for the men, or forage for the horses. The casual sick also require immediate attention.

7. A troop or company on service should never be dismissed after a march, until a scrutiny has been made by the officers belonging to it, into any accident which may have happened to the arms or accoutrements of their men, or horses, during the previous movement, and orders are given for the requisite repairs. At the evening parade every thing should be again in order. The ammunition in pouch should be carefully looked to, and the act of making away with any, be invariably punished.

8. Officers commanding regiments must be very attentive to the regularity of their column of march; since the more or less of fatigue to their men, greatly depends on this point.

The falling out of the ranks by individuals, should always be checked as much as possible; and when a man does fall out, his file should invariably be carried forward by his next file, under orders from the commander of the section. A halt, and a piling of arms, for five minutes in every hour, prevents the necessity for individuals frequently quitting the ranks.

9. Good conduct towards the inhabitants of a country passed through, both on the part of officers and soldiers is another very essential part of good discipline. All plundering or ill-treatment of them must be most carefully repressed; and in foraging, or other necessary unavoidable incursions on their property, every unnecessary injury should be abstained from.

10. All encampment, by good treatment, should be given to the country people bringing articles for sale to the bazars, as many of the comforts of the army may depend much on this point.

11. Whenever camps are near to towns or villages safe guards must be placed in them to prevent all pillage or marauding, or misconduct of any kind, by stragglers from the army, or its followers; and when such places are passed on the line of march, small guards should be detached from the head of the column to prevent stragglers entering them; which guards should join and come forward with the rear guard of the column.

12. In some of our marches, the supply of water may prove scanty; and, where it must be drawn from wells for a large body of troops, careful arrangement is always necessary; and the commanding officers of regiments should establish strict regulations to preserve order at these places.

13. The soldiers must be taught always to recollect, that many of their brother soldiers are marching behind them; and that needless injury can never be done, or waste committed, on a line of march, which does not bring trouble and inconvenience on those following them.

14. A strict performance of all duties by guards and pickets must be carefully enforced from the commencement of the march so that proper habits may be early established: the details for these should never be larger than circumstances render imperative as the more soldiers, on service, are spared from unnecessary fatigue the better.

15. An officer in command of a brigade must never rest satisfied until he has personally seen, that the pickets of his brigade are properly posted.

16. The greatest happiness which could befall His Excellency the Commander in Chief, and the reflection which would be the most gratifying to him, during the remainder of his life, would be, if he could be enabled to carry through the duties entrusted to him without the infliction of any punishment whatever. It is only from good discipline that such a result can be possible; and he calls on every officer and non-commissioned officer with the army to aid him in maintaining that which is so very desirable.

17. At the same time, that he proclaims what he so much wishes, he makes known to the soldiers, that the necessary for good behaviour on their part is so important, for their own advantage as well as for general success, that he will repress disorders and breaches of discipline, and neglect of duty with a strong hand.

18. He has the utmost confidence in the courage of the troops placed under his command, and if, with that good quality, strict discipline be combined, His Excellency doubts not that the detachment of the Bengal army will return to Hindoostan, having, acquired high honor for themselves and advantage for their country.

The Allypore station order of the 12th instant, directing Lieut. and W. F. Campbell, of the 6th, to make over the charge of the station staff office to Lieutenant W. Gibb, of the 34th regiment of native infantry, is confirmed.

The 2d brigade horse artillery order of the 10th instant, appointing staff sergeant Field to act as sergeant major and quarter master sergeant to the 2d and 3d troops of that brigade, proceeding on service, is confirmed.

The Dinapore division order of the 16th instant, directing subaltern, native doctor, to join and do duty in the hospital of the 1st regiment of native infantry, is confirmed as a temporary arrangement.

The Sangor station order of the 16th instant, posting Gunput sing, native doctor, to the 25th regiment of native infantry, is confirmed.

Assistant Surgeon William Griffith, of the establishment of Fort St. George, having been placed by the Right Honourable the Governor General, at the disposal of His Excellency the Commander in Chief, is directed to do duty under the orders of superintending surgeon Playfair, at the head quarters of the army of the Indus, which he will proceed forthwith to join.

Gunner John Vernon, of the 1st troop 3d brigade of horse artillery is transferred to the town major's list, and promoted to the rank of sergeant, for the purpose of filling a vacancy in the establishment of the garrison engineer of Fort William.

The Meerut division order of the 20th instant, appointing Lieutenant and Brevet Captain Moore, of the 54th regiment of native infantry, to officiate as assistant adjutant general of the division, where Douglas, proceeding to join the army of the Indus, is confirmed as a temporary arrangement.

The Meerut division order of the 14th instant, appointing Assistant Surgeon M. J. M. R. as medical store keeper of the army assembling for service to the medical charge of the 2d and 3d troops of the 2d brigade of horse artillery, until the arrival of Assistant Surgeon Fozz, is confirmed.

The Agra garrison and station order of the 8th instant, directing Surgeon F. E. Dempster of the 4th battalion of artillery, to afford medical aid to the sick of the European regiment left at the station and to the women and children of the corps, is confirmed.

Head quarters Simla, October 31.—A report having been received, through the major general commanding the 1st division of the army of the Indus, that certain desobedient conduct has occurred in the 4th train of native infantry on the subject of carrying their knivess, His Excellency the Commander in Chief directs, that the subalterns of the army, section 25, may hereafter be directed to the corps of the army.

2. Since so many of the sepoy are inexperienced soldiers, His Excellency desires that they may be made to understand, that the greatest inconveniences would often be occasioned to themselves, if they marched without having about their persons the tools they are ordered to carry; and the native officers of corps should have already explained this to the young soldiers.

3. As there is strong reason for believing that the sepoy Hearah Visser, Ramdeen, (or) Burtour and Sewburt Singh, of the 48th regiment, were the principals and instigators in the disgraceful insubordination which has occurred, he directs that the three first named sepoy be deprived of their arms and accoutrements on the parade of the regiment and be paid up, and discharged the service, turned out of the lines of the brigade they belong to, and forbid to appear any more in the army. They have each of them been receiving the Honorable Company's pay for fourteen or fifteen years; and this bad conduct is the return they make on the first occasion of being called on for real service.

4. The Commander in Chief deems them quite unworthy to continue in a corps of such good character as the 48th regiment.

5. His Excellency overlooks the conduct of Sewburt Singh, in consideration of his being a soldier of high service; and supposing him to have been misled by his seniors.

The first troop 1st brigade of horse artillery will commence its march for Ferozepore as soon after the receipt of this order as may be practicable, for the purpose of being attached to the escort of the Right Honourable the Governor General, on His Lordship's march to the Punjab.

The 4th troop 3d brigade horse artillery, to which this duty was originally assigned, is placed under the orders of Colonel Simpson, commanding the force in the service of Shah Shoojah, not Moolk, and will continue attached to it until relieved by the two troops of horse artillery commanded by Captain W. Anderson.

Two resallahs from the 2d local horse are to be detached forthwith to Hansi, at which post they will remain till further orders.

Other instances have been brought to the notice of the Commander in Chief, where a number of guides have been hired, which no circumstance could render necessary.

Some misapprehension appearing to exist, as the circumstances under which officers of horse artillery and cavalry are permitted to select chargers, from the remounts furnished from time to time to their corps, as well as to the period when such remounts cease to be available for selection. His Excellency the Commander in Chief is pleased to direct, that the 2d and 6th paragraphs of Government General Orders No 724, of the 26th June 1857, indicating the parties allowed a choice, be literally construed, and that no officer be permitted to select a charger except "on first joining a corps," or "on rejoining from furlough, or from staff employ," and that no officer be allowed to replace his selected charger, from the remounts, unless such charger "shall have died, been killed in action, captured, stolen, shot at the recommendation of a station or detachment committee, or reported by such a committee unfit for further service."

His Excellency is likewise pleased to determine, that the horses sent as remounts from the several studs, shall continue to be considered as such until allotted to troops, and appropriated: but which appropriation must not be unnecessarily delayed.

Quarterly rolls of horses selected by officers, prepared according to the form laid down in Government General Orders of the 3d February 1821, a copy of which is subjoined, are to be forwarded from corps to the adjutant general of the army, on the 1st of January, 1st of April, 1st of July, and 1st of October of each year, in which all horses selected during the quarter are to be duly returned, with the date of their joining entered in the column left for remarks.

These rolls to be furnished commencing with the 1st of October 1837, and continued regularly to the present time.

The General Commanding in Chief desires, that, in all cases in which a punishment is awarded by a Court martial, the Sentence may be considered to take effect from the date of the Commitment of the Prisoner to the Jail, or Cell, in which he is to undergo his imprisonment. In cases in which, from unavoidable circumstances, a more than usual time shall elapse, between the trial of the Prisoner and the appeal and confirmation of the Proceedings and sentence of the Court, the Officer Commanding the Regiment, or Depot, to which the Prisoner belongs may recommend the remission of a portion of the imprisonment equal to the time which may have elapsed as above specified.

The General Commanding in Chief takes the present occasion to direct the attention of Courts Martial to the terms of that part of the Mutiny Act, which authorizes the forfeiture of all advantages or additional Pay, and to Pension on Discharge. MONEY MARKET.

Harkaru Office, Calcutta, 17th December, 1838.

Since our last, we have had the complete files of the Overland for September and part of October, these arrivals had the effect of enervating the Money Market. The amount of remittances received in Faculty Lane chiefly for Indigo operations and in French funds, and who have operated largely in that staple.

Shipments for the English market have not been slack; advances through the ware house amount to a lac and thirty thousand rupees besides those going and going through private individuals; the exchange on the former equities at 2½, but the latter (American under credits) have not been better than 2½ per Company's rupee; even this rate within the last two or three days (induced by the near departure of the Mail) cannot be procured, holders not being willing to allow higher than 2½ and at this exchange there is much speculation going forward. From the large transactions that have been done we would say that the Mail will have with a heavy supply of remittances.

BILL MARKET—The expense of the transactions of the United States Bank as published in the English and copied in our journals, caused some stir with regard to Bills in the market. The endeavour to throw discredit on the institution and shake the public confidence, were, we are happy to find, not responded to, some were at first shy, but it was soon got over, and large sums changed hands at 2½ 2-2½ but are now not procurable above 2-2½ a 2-2½ per Company's rupee.

Exchange generally had fluctuated during the interval between the last and present Overland, quotations stand thus:—
